Gov. Ritchie and Nice Leading In Early Maryland Returns

Free State Executive Ahead of Conley by More Than 2 to 1.

Klemm, of Mt. Rainier, Far Behind Rep. Gambrill.

After 107 out of 685 precincts in Baltimore had been counted, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie had 9,250 votes and Dr. Charles H. Conley 3,686, in the Democratic gubernatorial contest. George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, in the same precints had 7,773 votes, and his opponent, William M. Maloy, 3,285. Democratic leaders figured Gov. Ritchie would carry the city by a popular vote between 45,000 and 50,000.

In 32 precincts in the counties Ritchie had 3,310 votes and Dr. Conley 1,786. Harry W. Nice was leading the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Baltimore, but Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough had the lead in the counties.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr. (Post Staff Writer).

Baltimore, Sept. 13.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, seeking a fifth term as chief executive of Maryland, in early returns from Baltimore City was leading Dr. Charles H. Conley, Frederick physician, better than two to one in the Democratic gubernatorial fight.

Harry W. Nice sprang into the lead after the first handful of returns had been tabulated in the three-cornered Republican fight over the gubernatorial nomination. H. Webster Smith was running a poor second and Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, third. The latter, however, was showing strength in scattered returns from the Maryland counties.

In 49 out of 685 precincts in Baltimore, Gov. Ritchie received 4,308 votes to 1,750 for Dr. Conley. The first precincts to report were from uptown sections where the voting was relatively light. The total of votes was expected to swell quickly as soon as the large downtown wards, where the Curran-Ritchie organization is strong, report.

Leading in Counties.

Gov. Ritchie was running well in the counties also. The first 9 polling places in Montgomery County gave him 1,867 against 1,027 for Dr. Conley. In two precincts in Calvert County the Governor received 170 votes and Dr. Conley 125. In Prince Georges County four districts gave 561 for Gov. Ritchie and 207 for Dr. Conley. Garrett County, after eight precincts were counted, showed 308 for Gov. Ritchie and 148 for Dr. Conley.

In most places the Democratic ballots were counted first, a procedure further delaying results on the Republican gubernatorial fight. In the first nine precincts in Baltimore to report Mr. Nice had 182 votes, Mr. Smith 39, and Senator Goldsborough 19.

George L. Radcliffe, President Roosevelt's close friend who is seeking the Democratic Senatorial nomination, was running close behind Gov. Ritchie, defeating William M. Maloy. The Republican Senatorial count had not started late tonight, but Dr. Joseph I. France was the favorite of prognosticators.

River Rising After Cloudburst

More rain fell in Washington in one hour yesterday than during any previous 60-minute period in the 63-year-old records of the Weather Bureau, turning streets into rivers, sending tons of water into basements in every section of the city and paralyzing street railway and electric power services in many communities.

The storm began shortly before noon. By 12:50 p. m. it was a cloudburst. In the ensuing hour rain poured from the heavens in a blinding stream to a recorded depth at the Weather Bureau of 3.25 inches.

The only rain approaching it in the annals of the local Weather Bureau occurred on July 13, 1922, when 2.79 inches of rain fell in a corresponding period.

More Expected.

By 5 p. m. the day's rainfall was close to 4 inches. Rain continued to fall in a drizzle, and Weather Bureau expectations were there would be more of it through the night and at intervals during today.

Fears of serious flooding along the Potomac and its tributaries arose last night when it became known heavy rains were general throughout Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Army engineers predicted downpours along the reaches of the Potomac and the

U. S. Policing Of NRA, New Board, Plan Of Roosevelt

Johnson Is Shorn Of Broad Powers

Governing Body May Be Named From 'Outside' Ranks.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Creation of a new division in the Department of Justice to enforce provisions of the NRA and of a board, independent in character, to formulate policies for the recovery administration is under contemplation by President Roosevelt.

Explaining in more detail the plans to divide the recovery machinery into three main branches—legislative, judiciary and executive—the President disclosed today that the legislative board will be composed, in all probability, of a majority outside the NRA.

Thus the NRA would be further removed from the domination of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who is generally expected to continue as head of the executive branch, than would be the case if loyal assistants of Johnson outnumbered others on the board.

In this connection, the President later in the day conferred with Donald R. Richberg, acting director of the National Emergency Council, but he insisted that NRA matters had no part in the meeting. Mr. Richberg has led the opposition to Gen. Johnson's plans to reorganize the NRA, and is credited with a major role in the present negotiations.

Simplified System Sought.

The President said he is attempting to work out some method whereby the enforcement—or judiciary—function of the NRA is put where it belongs—under the Attorney General. He believes however that close touch should be kept with the remaining NRA organization, which may be effected by the creation of a new division in the Department of Justice.

As Mr. Roosevelt explained it, in casting about for some means to simplify the NRA, the natural break-up of the administration into three component parts was considered the most logical.

The reorganization will be aimed at reducing the number of departments, an operation which he compared to former Gov. Alfred E. Smith's reorganization of New York State. Gov. Smith found, he said, that with 122 departments, New York was supporting 40 legal divisions. The departments were cut to 18 and virtually all the legal positions were consolidated in the attorney general's office.

Mr. Roosevelt, receiving correspondents in his tiny office, was questioned as to conflict between the National Labor Board's ruling that majorities can bargain collectively for all employes with his own settlement of the Detroit automobile strike. In this labor adjustment representation was by proportionate vote.

He replied that the distinction is one of pure detail, depending on the industry involved. A different attitude toward this, however, has

Though the helmeted guardsmen, totaling 1,200 men, bearing orders to "shoot to kill," had wounded two men critically in a battle with 3,000 strikers and sympathizers about 3:30 p. m., about 500 pickets reorganized and rushed the troops in a rock barrage an hour later.

Rocks Hurled at Troops.

Guardsmen fired two volleys of three shots each.

One picket dropped and it was feared he had been killed instantly. It developed, however, that he had suffered only an arm injury. He was the eleventh picket wounded by guardsmen and deputies in three days' battling at the strike-torn finishing plant.

The two volleys failed to throttle the picket ranks and from hideouts behind trees and gravestones they kept pegging rocks at the militiamen.

2-Day Effort Collapses; Winant Plans to Try New Method.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Negotiations for arbitration of the unprecedented textile strike collapsed last night.

Pessimistic statements were issued by Gov. John G. Winant, Presidential mediation board chairman; the Cotton Textile Code Authority and William Green, American Federation of Labor president. Already in its second week, the tie-up probably will last at least another month.

"After two days of effort," Winant announced, "we have been unable to secure an agreement from the group of manufacturers on any basis for an arbitration or its equivalent. We regret this deeply, but believe that other methods of procedure can be found which may lead to a prompt, effective and just method of settlement."

Green Accuses Owners.

Green charged the manufacturers "assumed an erroneous position" and predicted the board would report to the President that it "explored the field of conciliation and arbitration without success."

Prospects of an early peace faded after a series of conferences between the mediation board and Arthur Vesse, Woolen and Worsted Code Authority chairman; Peter Van Horn, Silk Code Authority chairman, and George A. Sloan, Cotton Code Authority chairman.

Sloan made public the cotton authority's statement with the observ-

Ship's Electrician Says Men Dissatisfied, 'In Fear of Jobs.'

Radio Chief Calls Aid Untrustworthy

S O S Held Up Until Flames Seared Him, He Testifies.

New York, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Delay in sending the S O S and the possibility of "spite work" by disgruntled members of the crew were written today into the Department of Commerce inquiry in the Morro Castle disaster.

Declaring there was an "awful mess" aboard the once luxurious Ward liner—now a hulk of smouldering wreckage in the sands of the Jersey shore—Chief Radio Operator George Rogers testified he had to send to the bridge for orders and that the S O S was not sent out until after the flames were even searing through the radio room.

"Spite work" was given as a possible cause of the fire by William Floyd Justis, chief electrician.

"Was the crew of the Morro Castle efficient?" Justis was asked.

"There were disturbances on the ship," he replied. "I don't know that it wasn't through spite work that the accident happened. There was dissatisfaction among the crew.

"If you became too good and knew your job too well, you were dismissed. The Ward Line would give you all the materials you needed to do your work in wonderful shape. But there was constant fear on the ship of losing your job. Life was made miserable for us."

Radio Assistant Distrusted.

Justice said he "felt sure" the commanding officers knew of this condition.

The chief radio operator, obvious in his hesitation and apparent unwillingness to do so, also testified that his first assistant radio operator, George Alagna, had gitated among the crew, fomented unrest and was distrusted by the commanders of the ship.

By Rogers' own testimony, it was Alagna who fought his way through fire from the bridge to carry to Rogers the S O S instructions and then pulled Rogers from the fire-swept radio room and led him down a companionway to safety.

To place the blame for the tragedy with its 133 persons dead and missing, to determine if negligence of duty to the passengers was a determining factor, the fullest force of the Federal Government was in motion.

After Rogers said the Freighter Andrea F. Luckenback messaged to inquire if there was fire—before the Morro Castle's call to "stand by" had been sent out—the Government impounded the logs of two shore wireless stations to record any delay in calling nearby liners to the rescue.

At Hyde Park, President Roosevelt at his weekly press conference disclosed he expected the Department of Justice to take any action required.

The power of indictment rested with the Federal grand jury to which United States Attorney Martin Conboy is presenting the stories of survivors.

Prisoner Before Grand Jury.

Alagna, arrested on a civil warrant yesterday as a material witness, was taken handcuffed to the grand jury today. He has not yet appeared before the Department of Commerce inquiry in charger of Dickerson N. Hoover, head of the Steamboat Inspection Service.

The testimony of Rogers was the highlight of a day filled with stories of confusion, of lifeboats lowered away with but few passengers aboard, of more declarations from passengers that no fire alarm was

Prince Georges Gives Ritchie Winning Lead

Bowie Runs Well Ahead of McCullough for State's Attorney.

A few early and scattered returns from the Maryland primaries in Prince Georges County showed Gov. Ritchie leading Dr. Conley with a substantial majority. In the fight for the county offices, State's Attorney Alan Bowie, running for reelection, was distancing his opponent, Robert W. McCullough.

Both in Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, considered by the followers of McCullough as their stronghold, Bowie was already declared victor. Piscataway and several lower county precincts were also going for him.

Early figures were:

Bowie—Democrat: Governor—Ritchie, 194; Conley, 57; Senator, Radcliffe, 181; Maloy, 40; Representative, Gambrill, 225; Klemm, 17. State's attorney, Bowie, 244; McCullough, 48; sheriff, Bell, 252; Oursler, 14.

Hyattsville (Third Precinct)—Democrat: (Incomplete), Governor, Ritchie, 110; Conley, 40; Senator, Radcliffe, 120; Maloy, 30; Rrepresentative, Gambrill, 140; Klemm, 15.

Melwood—Democrat: Governor, Ritchie, 92; Conley, 25; Senator, Radcliffe, 85; Maloy, 26; Representative, Gambrill, 105; Klemm, 10. State's attorney, Bowie, 111; McCullough, 22; sheriff, Bell, 93; Oursler, 38; county commissioners, Berry, 110; Blandford, 110; Boswell, 98; Cockey, 96; McNamee, 93; Sellner, 51; Orphans' Court, Beall, 107; Thorne, 102; Miller, 92; McDaniel,

Ritchie Leads In Montgomery

Returns from 21 of Montgomery County's 32 precincts early last night gave Gov. Ritchie a lead of 1,809 votes over his opponent, Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland.

The same precincts gave Gov. Ritchie's running mate, George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the nomination for the United States Senate, an even greater margin. Radcliffe, was leading William Milnes Maloy by more than 12,364 votes.

The total vote for the precincts was: Ritchie, 14,225; Conley, 2,416; Radcliffe, 4,387; Maloy, 12,023.

The count of the Republican primary ballots was much slower and only two of the precincts had reported at 10 p. m. Poolesville gave Harry Nice 109; Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough 12, and H. Webster Smith, 4, in the gubernatorial race. Frederic Paul Adkins received 64 votes and W. Newton Jackson, received 18 votes for the nomination for State comptroller.

In the senatorial race Joseph I. France received 3 votes in the Poolesville district; John Philip Hill, 18, and C. Wilbur Miller, 62. In the Wheaton Precinct the vote was France, 22; Hill, 47, and Miller, 2.

For nomination to the House of Representatives from the Sixth Congressional District the Republican vote was: Poolesville, William A. Gunter, 17; Frederick N. Zihlman, former Representative, 91. Wheaton, Zihlman, 70; Gunter, 11.

The vote was comparatively light, due probably to the heavy rainstorm throughout the county. No disorder was reported at the polls. At the start of counting leaders of both sides were confident of victory.

Georgia Gives Gov. Talmadge Big Early Lead

Incumbent Tops Pittman by Vote of 3 to 1 in First Returns.

(Associated Press.)

Nominees for one Senate and 16 House seats and two governorships were named by voters yesterday in Maryland and Georgia.

Connecticut Republicans, meeting in convention, renominated Frederic Walcott for the Senate.

In Georgia, headquarters of both Governor Eugene Talmadge and Judge Claude Pittman claimed the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, which means election in that Southern State, but in early returns Talmadge was leading by 3 to 1. Four of the 10 Democratic members of Congress were renominated without opposition.

Reports from primaries Tuesday in eight States indicate:

Washington—Lewis B. Schwellenbach was slightly in the lead over a field of Democratic Senatorial aspirants, with John C. Stevenson running second. Reno Odlin, Olympia banker, led the Republicans seeking that party's Senatorial nomination. Six Democratic Representatives were renominated.

Lacy Ahead of Comstock.

Michigan—Arthur J. Lacy, Detroit attorney, held a slight advantage over Gov. William A. Comstock for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Frank A. Picard was selected by Democrats to oppose Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, for the Senate. Two Democratic Representatives—Weideman and Musselwhite—were defeated for renomination.

Colorado—Gov. Edwin C. Johnson was renominated by the Democrats over Miss Josephine Roche on the basis of incomplete returns. Four Democratic Representatives were renominated.

Arizona—Senator Henry F. Ashurst and Gov. B. B. Mouer apparently were renominated by Democrats. Representative Isabella Greenway, Democrat, was renominated.

Long's Candidates Win.

Louisiana—Senator Huey P. Long's candidates in New Orleans for two House seats and certain State offices were victorious over the Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley slate.

Vermont—Senator Warren R. Austin, Republican, and Fred C.

Textile Strike Spreads To Des Moines Plant

Des Moines, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Case Deer, of Milwaukee, National organizer of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, said today that workers at the Rollins hosiery mills here will join the textile strike at midnight tonight.

Approximately 450 of the mill workers are members of the union. Deer said, however, that he expected all the 800 workers to join the strike.

Cutter Needed in Liner Rescue Was Bringing Mrs. Owen Home

(Associated Press.)

The view was expressed in official circles yesterday that the United States Coast Guard forces might have been at the scene of the Morro Castle tragedy much earlier if the fast cutter Champlain had not been previously taken from patrol duty to bring Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister to Denmark, from Greenland to this country.

In authoritative sources it also was disclosed that four of the fast patrol boats normally operating from the Staten Island base previously had been removed to the Maine Coast to combat rum smugglers. Had these been in their accustomed waters, it was said, the stricken vessel might have been reached even earlier by trained rescue crews.

The Champlain, with a speed of 17 knots, is normally assigned to the run from Long Island to the Delaware Capes, but was sent to Greenland September 1, taking Mrs. Owen aboard September 10.

It was replaced for the time being by the cutter Cahoone, which was charged with patrolling the long run for sea disasters. Its speed is only 9 knots an hour.

The Cahoone reached the Morro Castle in approximately 2½ hours, about the same time as did the Tampa, out of New York. It was estimated that the Champlain could have got there in a little more than an hour and a quarter.

Mrs. Owen, from Denmark, wrote to Government officials early in the summer that she expected to go to Greenland on a Danish government boat and would like to proceed to the United States on a Coast Guard vessel operating in Greenland waters as part of the international ice patrol.

The Coast Guard reported that its ice patrol ended activities in June and that it would have no vessel near Greenland waters in September. Coast Guard officials were later instructed, however to arrange for a special trip to be made for Mrs. Owen.

Central Airlines Official Was Carrying Bombs to Strike Zone.

Theodore Taney, operations manager of the Central Airlines, which carries the mail from Washington to Detroit, was killed yesterday, when his airplane crashed in the Pennsylvania mountains, while transporting tear gas bombs to the scene of textile disorders in Providence, R. I.

The plane carried 395 pounds of tear gas shells, bound from the Federal Laboratories in Pittsburgh to the New England textile centers, where disorders have occurred.

Taney evidently was killed when his parachute failed to open. His body was found tangled in the folds of the parachute. The plane was found some distance away. The accident occurred in the Tuscarora Mountains, about 10 miles west of McConnellsberg.

Taney, who lived in Pittsburgh, had formerly been operations manager of the Pittsburgh Airways, operating between New York and Pittsburgh. He was graduated from the Kelly Field Flying Station and saw World War service. He was well known in Washington.

Bank System RetardsCredit, President Says

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 12.—President Roosevelt freely conceded today that bank examining by the Federal Government itself has held up the easy flow of credit which the Administration so ardently desires.

Commenting on the recent speech by Francis M. Law, president of the American Bankers Association, who has been a frequent White House caller, the President admitted that bankers are justified in this complaint.

He was referring to the dilemma of the banking fraternity, goaded on the one hand to ease up on credit requirements, when every effort in this direction is met by a rude setback at the hands of the bank examiners.

Two Cases Are Cited.

Declaring that examining officials have been too wedded to the old rules, when National banks were far in the minority, the President said he believed the rule of reason has not been used in a great many cases. Anyone who could muster interest during the last few years, he added, is lucky, whereas examiners have insisted on curtailments as well.

Mr. Roosevelt cited two cases which he considered a silly adherence to old policy. In the first instance, a merchant had borrowed $800, backed by ample indorsements, with which to move to a better location. Although interest payments had been met scrupulously, this note was thrown out by the examiners.

The second case concerned a

Brewers Help Election Fund Of Democrats

Pabst, Goetz, Ruppert and Trommer Listed as Contributors.

By Raymond Clapper.

Brewers are coming to the aid of the party that brought back beer, it is indicated in the list of party contributions filed with the clerk of the House by the Democratic National committee yesterday.

Names familiar on the bottle caps in every well-stocked refrigerator were on the list for amounts mostly running between $1,000 and $2,500 each. They included the well-known names of Pabst, Goetz, Ruppert, Piel, Trommer, Feigenspan and Bremer.

Between June 1 and August 31 the Democrats collected $115,481.19 in cash contributions.

The Republican contributors' list was marked by the contributions of numerous members of the Du Pont family, some of whom were testifying yesterday in the Senate munitions investigation. The following contributions were listed: A. Felix du Pont, $220; Irenee du Pont, $3,000 and $5,000; Lammot du Pont, $500 and $5,000; William du Pont, $300; P. S. du Pont 3d, $50.

Tugwell Sails for Europe, Dodging Summons in Suit

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, No. 1 brain truster, boarded a liner at New York City today for a trip to Europe, cloaking his departure in closest secrecy in order to escape a process server.

This was disclosed by President Roosevelt, who, roaring with laughter, enjoined his interviewers to silence until the Undersecretary of Agriculture had safely put out to sea.

Dr. Tugwell, he explained, was nervous lest his trip be canceled at the last moment. In connection with the incident, Mr. Roosevelt recalled the recent experience of Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, who was brusquely awakened at 4:30 a. m. in a Pullman sleeper by the outthrust hand of a process server. Normally a mild, even-tempered person, the President said Mr. Wallace was angry all day. The subpoena dreaded by Mr. Tugwell has been expected from the suit of Hawaiian sugar interests which are contesting the quota allowed the islands under the sugar control act. The former Columbia professor has been a leading force in the administration of the act, which Hawaiians claim is useless.

In reply to inquiries, Mr. Roosevelt branded as a hundred per cent wrong intimation that Dr. Tugwell is leaving the New Deal. The Undersecretary, he said, will go first to London to inquire into the world wheat situation and then will proceed to Rome to represent this country at the International Institute of Agriculture.

He is accompanied by Mrs. Tugwell.

Du Ponts Paid 458 Per Cent On War Profits

Pierre, Head of Famous Family, Admits Business Exceeded 1¼ Billions.

By Robert C. Albright.

A war-time business of $1,245,000,000, paying shareholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. 458 per cent dividends on original par value stock, was disclosed yesterday by the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee.

Pyramiding orders received by the powder manufacturers during feverish years from 1914 to 1918 were incorporated in the record, as Irenee, Pierre, Lammot and Felix du Pont, of the famous Delaware family, faced the Senate committee.

Pierre du Pont, gray-mustached and bespectacled, his ample figure clad in a smart brown suit, did most of the talking for the family, as members of the historic firm alternately took issue or nodded agreement with data produced by Senator Homer Bone.

Tracing the growth of the company through lean prewar years, to the sudden boom in the munitions industry that brought the powder makers fabulous war profits, the black-haired, sharp-featured Washington Senator opened the examination.

Investment of $47,000,000 of their proceeds in General Motors, giving the Du Ponts a 25 per cent interest they have since retained, and use of $50,000,000 more of the huge war income to establish dye plants, was testified to by the witnesses.

The Du Ponts took the stand late in the afternoon, after J. S. Allard and C. W. Webster, of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, had reviewed sales of that organization over most of the world.

President's Name Brought In.

Names of prominent personages figured in the export company's diverse testimony—that of President Roosevelt as having been approached by an aeronautics official in an effort to slow down the inquiry; former President Hoover's, with whom a meeting was sought for a visiting Chilean official; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Army chief of staff, as a former "booster" of American-made products in Turkey.

Thomas A. Morgan, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, was said to have conferred with President Roosevelt in June, using a memorandum prepared by a Curtiss-Wright Corporation official as the basis for the conference, Investigator Alger Hess said. His testimony was not confirmed by witnesses.

When hearings resumed after lunch, all four of the Du Ponts came forward and faced the committee table. On one end sat the graying Irenee, who frequently interrupted Senator Bone to dispute a statement of fact. On the other end was the youthful Felix, keen-eyed but silent, throughout the hearing. To his right was Lammot du Pont, president of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., dark-haired, blue-suited, who said little more.

Only once was there any extended controversy. Vice President W. S. Carpenter, jr., had told of a $13,151,055 munitions tax paid to the Government in 1916, and a company report was produced by Senator Bone, referring to the item as "excessive taxation."

Tax Unfair Du Pont Says.

The Washington Senator previously had pointed out that 100 per cent in dividends had been paid by the company that year.

"Do you think that tax was excessive in view of such dividends?" asked Bone.

"It was a retroactive tax," replied Irenee du Pont. "The munitions industry was singled out and made to pay it. I think it was unfair. It had to come out of shareholders' pockets."

"But weren't you satisfied with your earnings?" Bone countered.

"Those earnings were made from war contracts with other countries," put in Mr. du Pont. "Of course we were satisfied with them. But was it fair for the Government to levy a retroactive tax of this sort without giving us warning?"

Senator Bone earlier contrasted the company's return on prewar investments with earnings in the boom war years. He cited figures showing the invested capital in the Du Pont company was $50,067,155 in 1911, $51,854,515 in 1912 and $36,106,128 in 1913, on which was returned 10.25 per cent, 11.59 per cent and 12.86 per cent, respectively.

Covering the war period, his figures showed invested capital was $128,596,450 in 1915, $202,346,832 in 1916, $232,613,553 in 1917 and $199,343,168 in 1918, on which was returned 22.89 per cent, 63.05 per cent, 35.17 per cent and 10.12 per cent, respectively.

32 Per Cent Paid in 1917.

Tracing regular and special dividends declared by the Du Pont company during the war period, reaching a high in a 32 per cent declaration in November, 1917, Senator Bone said that 100 per cent in dividends was declared in 1916, 51 per cent in 1917, 26 per cent in 1918 and 18 per cent in 1919.

In all the years from 1915 to 1918, he said total dividends amounted to 458 per cent of the original par value of the stock.

Turning to vast war orders fulfilled by the company, approximately $1,245,000,000, the Washington Senator developed that $260,000,000 more in contracts with the company were canceled by governments at the close of the war.

Figures inserted in the record by Bone indicated orders grew from $19,000,000 in 1914, $319,000,000 in 1915 and $182,000,000 in 1916 to $313,000,000 in 1917 and $410,000,000 in 1918.

One T. N. T. plant, started in an experimental way in 1912, yielded the company rich returns after the war started.

The net result was that the profit of less than 3 cents per pound for the first seven months of 1914 was increased to 52½ cents per pound in the last five months, so that the total profits in the short latter period were sufficient to retire the entire investment and leave a net profit equal to 100 per cent on the investment, in addition to retaining possession of the plants for future use," read a statement offered in evidence.

Officials volunteered that the plant eventually was lost in an explosion, but not before $6,889,500 had been realized.

Nye to Trace DuPont Bonuses.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, chairman of the investigating group, will take over today examination of witnesses. He expects to trace the early beginnings of the stock bonus system in payments made by the DuPont company, he told reporters.

Earlier in the day, investigators vainly tried to clinch reports that efforts were made by private interests to stop the munitions investigation in its early stages.

With Allard and Webster, of the Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, on the stand, the committee put in evidence a memorandum which investigators said was carried to the White House last June by Thomas A. Morgan.

It read in part:

"Congressional investigation, embargoes, pacifistic talk and propaganda will doubtless cause some of our present customers to buy abroad, due to the uncertainty of obtaining spare parts in the future. The greater the volume of the aviation business in this country, the better our National defense."

A letter to Webster from the Curtiss-Wright Chilean representative in March, 1931, told of efforts to win the chief of Chilean air, army and navy forces to American markets, to "offset" the effects of the Prince of Wales in Chile. Webster was informed that the prince had invited Marino to visit him, and Marino had accepted.

Suggested Meeting Hoover.

"It is up to us to lean over backward in selling Merino American markets, methods and equipment and upon his arrival here we are arranging an elaborate and extensive program calling for visits to various airports in this country. If possible we would like for you to arrange for permission to visit various Army and Navy stations and have him meet the various Army and Navy Secretaries and, if possible, President Hoover."

Witnesses said Merino came to this country, but, so far as they knew, never met the President.

Still another letter, from W. F. Goulding of the Curtiss-Wright export corporation to an official of Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., in October, 1932, told of Gen. MacArthur's visit to Turkey.

According to Goulding, MacArthur was received with "great pomp and enthusiasm by Turkish dignitaries" and "apparently talked up American military equipment to the skies in discussions which he had with the Turkish general staff."

"Rather gather that your equipment and ours did not suffer from lack of praise," Goulding added.

"It looks to me like Gen. MacArthur was pretty much of a salesman," Senator Nye interjected.

Du Ponts to Tell Munitions Story

Gambrill, the Democratic incumbent and seeking renomination, was swamping by an overwhelming majority his opponent, John W. Klemm, of Mount Rainier. Frederick N. Zihlman, former Representative seeking to stage a comeback in Western Maryland's Sixth Congressional District, was running ahead of William A. Gunter, of Cumberland.

But in no case, not even in that of Gov. Ritchie who generally was predicted as the victor in his fight, could the returns be regarded as conclusive. Due to heavy voting and an unusually long ballot, the counting proceeded slowly everywhere. In Baltimore the first return was not reported until three and one-half hours after the polls closed. Usually one-half the city vote is recorded within three hours.

Incidentally, the first precinct to report gave the Ritchie followers a shock. It was in the Thirteenth Ward and gave Dr. Conley 52 votes and Gov. Ritchie 44. Awaiting the election results at the Belvedere Hotel, Gov. Ritchie scowled as he was informed of that result, but a minutes later he was smiling broadly as he took the lead.

500 Baltimore Candidates.

The Baltimore ballot contained the names of 40 candidates seeking nominations to city-wide offices alone, while the candidates for State-wide offices, places in the Legislature, Congress and on Democratic and Republican committees brought the total for the city up to approximately 500 candidates.

In the counties the situation was even worse. Polling places did not close until two hours after those in Baltimore and election officials generally went out for dinner before unlocking the ballot boxes. Only in Montgomery County, where there are no primary contests for local offices in either party, was the count proceeding rapidly.

The day started off with the usual reports of trivial clashes between the supporters of candidates and between election officers and watchers. But no serious controversy developed.

Democrats throughout the State were chiefly interested in the vote between Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Dr. Charles H. Conley, candidates for the gubernatorial nomination and that between George L. Radcliffe and William Milnes Maloy, candidates for the party's Senatorial nomination.

Voters Out Despite Rain.

Despite the torrential downpour during the afternoon in parts of the State the primary vote was reported as one of the heaviest in recent years. The multitude of candidates seeking nominations for local offices brought out the voters.

In Baltimore County, where a bitter Democratic factional fight was decided, several precincts exhausted their supply of ballots and officials kept voters waiting until fresh supplies could be rushed from the election supervisors at Towson.

In Cumberland a circus vied with the election as an attraction, yet the majority seemed to prefer to cast ballots to decide whether the Democratic organizatoin led by State Insurance Commissioner William C. Walsh should continue its rule of the party in Allegany. The Republicans were chiefly intrigued by the three-corned gubernatorial fight.

In addition to the sharp State-wide Republican fight, Washington Countians watched the counting as it slowly progressed to see whether Dr. J. Hubert Wade, one-time Democratic leader of that county, would be able to stage a comeback and overthrow the Lane faction. The latter unseated him eight years ago. It was predicted the counting would not be completed until late tomorrow.

As the hour grew late the situation everywhere in the State was the same. The unusually long ballots due to spirited local fights and the large turnout of voters made the counting process a lengthy, tedious procedure.

Mayflower Plea Will Be Heard By Letts Today

Corporate Bankruptcy Action Sought to End Finance Tangle.

A final solution of the Mayflower Hotel's financial difficulties may be reached in the District Supreme Court today when Justice F. Dickinson Letts takes up a motion to place the property under the protective regulations of the recently enacted corporate bankruptcy law.

Justice Letts some months ago appointed the three receivers of the property as its trustees in bankruptcy. The motion seeks to have the trustees, appointed temporarily, made permanent so that they can proceed with a financial reorganization of the property.

There is a bonded indebtedness of $9,900,000 on the property. It was placed in the hands of receivers several years ago, and was at one time on the verge of a foreclosure sale for a minimum price of $2,800,000. This price was attacked by a Senatorial investigating committee as too low, and Edmund M. Toland, attorney for the hotel, moved to have the benefits of the new bankruptcy law invoked.

After that Justice Adkins appointed a committee of experts to evaluate the property and they reported that in their opinion it was worth less than $5,000,000. Mr. Toland asserted the holders of notes secured by the property would each receive some portion of their investment if the trustees are permanently selected to proceed with the reorganization.

Bank System Hit As Slowing Credit

$3,000 loan on a farm, which the President said he himself could sell for $6,000 any day. Interest on this loan likewise had been met for three years, he said, but this paper, lacking reductions in principal, also was thrown out.

The President's frank statement was taken as the forerunner of revision of bank requirements, which are now under scrutiny by the Treasury Department. A committee appointed by Secretary Morgenthau, he pointed out, is at work on the problem at Washington.

Meantime, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, a visitor at the "summer White House," today declared banks are now pursuing a more liberal policy than at any time in the last three years. He said that the volume of private credit is mounting and that repayments to the RFC have exceeded new loans by $200,000,000 since July 1.

Woman Ends Life By Gas in Home

Daughter, 19, Finds Body of Ill Mother.

Mrs. Rena Heine, 65, of the 2800 block of Twenty-eighth street northwest, committed suicide yesterday in the kitchen of her home by inhaling illuminating gas, according to police.

The body was found by her daughter, Charlotte, 19. All windows and doors had been sealed with paper and four gas jets were open. Police were informed that Mrs. Heine had been in ill health.

Lindberghs Grounded By Damage to Plane

The plane shifted slightly but only minor damage resulted.

Probe Is Told Of 'Spite Work' In Liner Fire

Chief Electrician Asserts Crew Dissatisfied, 'in Fear of Jobs.'

heard, although the bridge officers said one was sounded.

Like Chief Engineer Eben Abbott, the chief radio operator said he was not roused out of his cabin when fire was first discovered, but was called by an assistant at 2:55 a. m., Eastern standard time.

Stocky of build, steel-jawed and straight-forward in speech, Rogers' story was one of the most dramatic of any yet told.

Seldom interrupted by Hoover, who conducted the questioning of all witnesses himself, Rogers related:

"I went at once to the radio room and assumed command, as required by law. I told my first assistant (George Alagna) to go to the bridge to act as messenger between me and the mate. I called acting Capt. Warms (William F. Warms, who assumed command when Capt. Willmott died suddenly Friday night), the mate, for I'd always known him as such. * * *

"After Alagna failed to return in a reasonable time I had Mackay (Charles Mackay, second assistant operator) soak a towel in water so that if the smoke became much thicker I could breathe through it and be able to remain at my instruments. I then told him to go to the bridge, find Alagna and learn if there were any orders.

Second Operator Deserted.

"Mackay failed to return at all. I didn't see him again.

"At 3:13, Alagna returned and said to me: 'Come on, Chief, get out of here. You'll die like a rat if you remain here.'

"I asked him what orders there were from the bridge. He replied: 'They're running around on the bridge and I can't get any cooperation there.'

"At that moment, I heard a message from the Luckenbach asking the shore station if they had any report of a ship afire at sea. I thought it advisable at that time to send a 'stand by' call.

"I sent the CQ (standby) three times. Around 3:18 I sent the same call again to keep the lanes open. * * *

"The smoke in the radio room had become so thick it was almost impossible to see. The emergency lighting system should have started functioning automatically but it did not.

"After the lights went out, I took out a large flashlight and by it managed to get the auxiliary transmitter started. I sent Alagna back again for instructions.

Sent S O S as Fire Rose.

"I then became conscious my feet were burning and I put my hand on the floor and it was too hot for me to touch. Paint began to crack on the bulkhead. There was a shift in the wind and it sent the fire in the aft porthole and ignited a curtain.

"While waiting, the air was silent.

"At approximately 3:25 to 3:30—I'm not sure of the exact time, because I had a towel over my face and I was in a bad way—Alagna came back. He said:

"When I was halfway through, the corner of the table burst into flames, exploded, and the air was filled with sulphuric gas which came from the acid out of the batteries.

"I continued to send out the S O S. I couldn't see anything, but I staggered over to the control and felt over the switch and I found where the heat had melted the solder out of one of the lugs. I stuck the wires back and the generator started again.

"There was an explosion, and the generator stopped altogether.

"I lay over the table and thought: If this is dying, it doesn't hurt very much.

"Then, Alagna shook me. He told me the mate gave him orders to get me out of the radio room. He pulled me out the door and I saw only sheets of flame. I managed somehow to get to the bridge."

Operator Stayed With Ship.

The operator was one of those who later sought refuge with Capt. Warms in the forecastle deck as the Morro Castle was taken in tow by the Coast Guard cutter Tampa. Just before the liner was beached, this group—the last alive aboard—left by a jacob's ladder.

After Rogers described scenes of terror, as seen from the forecastle deck—including a naked woman squeezing her way through a porthole and landing in the ocean—he was asked by Hoover:

"Have you had any trouble on the Morro Castle with assistants?"

Rogers hesitated, asked if his attorney was in the room. Informed he was not, the operator said:

"Some time ago, there was a strike among the radio operators. Alagna and another operator later tried to instigate discontent on the ship by seeking signatures to a protest that the food was bad. One radio operator got drunk and was discharged. Then, when I became chief, things went along smoothly."

Rogers said Capt. Willmott—who was cremated in his cabin in the inferno—asked him a week and a half ago?"

"What's the matter with Alagna, is he crazy?"

Willmott also complained that Alagna was a troublemaker, that officers often received sarcastic remarks from him.

On the last trip from Havana, Rogers said Willmott told him:

"I want to get rid of Alagna in New York. I don't trust that man. I want you to get the key to the emergency radio room. The radio compass was locked then and I kept the key."

Heard No Fire Alarm.

In previous sessions of the Hoover hearing, numerous survivors—including Dr. Gouverneur Morris Phelps, his wife and son—said they heard no fire alarm at any time.

Quartermaster Gus Hamron, on duty on the bridge at the time he said fire was reported, "a little before 3 a. m.," said all was orderly on the bridge, that he "most emphatically" heard the alarm sounded on orders from Warms.

Hamron then was ordered to his lifeboat position. In the boat he went over in, he said there were 46 persons aboard when it was beached. Some of these were picked up from the water.

Of these, he said, only six were passengers—adding his testimony to the long line of others that the lifeboats carried but a handful of passengers and were filled mostly with the crew.

Hoover directly asked Hamron as to the manner of Warms on the bridge. His reply was:

"He was not confused—perhaps a little excited. I had full confidence in him."

Hamron's testimony gave a discrepancy in the time of the S O S. He said Warms ordered Alagna at 3:18 a. m. to send out the call of distress.

Other members of the quartermaster's tour of duty said they heard Warms order the alarm, heard it sound, and heard the master give orders for the crew to get the passengers to the lifeboats.

The testimony of Dr. Phelps, that none of the crew he saw aided the passengers, was repeated to the Federal grand jury today.

Testimony Not Revealed.

The nature of Alagna's testimony was not disclosed, but it was presumed he repeated his published statements that the S O S was delayed and was not sent out until after inquiries came to the Morro Castle from shore wireless stations.

The Department of Justice's activities in the investigation, as ordered by the President, it was expected, would be coordinated with the Conboy investigation and the grand jury, inasmuch as any indictments would have to be handed down by the grand jury.

President Roosevelt, in discussing the Morro Castle case with newspapermen, said he looked to Congress to enact legislation requiring liners to be constructed as completely as possible of fireproof material—even down to furnishings.

The time is past, the President feels, when passengers at sea should ride in vessels susceptible to conflagration such as the Morro Castle blaze.

The fire still flaring in spots through the hulk of the famous cruise ship—beached a few hundred feet from the boardwalk at Asbury Park—subsided sufficiently during the last 24 hours for another search for bodies.

Two had already been found aboard and it was believed by rescuers many of those still unaccounted for were trapped by the flames and burned.

The cabin of Capt. Willmott was once again searched. He had been laid out in full uniform on his bed by Warms and his assistant officers.

Today a few badly charred bones were found and brought ashore on a breeches buoy. In the ashes also lay a few molten brass buttons.

Salvage of the liner was doubtful. The fire has raged through the hulk steadily since Saturday and everything was a twisted, warped mass of wreckage.

The attempts to salvage, however, await a final inspection of the keel, the structural strength of the hull and the cost of getting her out of the shallow water and sand.

Sue Carol Freed by Court From Stuart, Mate No. 2

Divorce Is Granted After Judge Hears Story of Book-Tossing.

It just took a few minutes' appearance in the superior court to get a divorce from Nick Stuart, also of the films.

Her husband was not there, just as she had been absent more than five years ago when Allen H. Keefer, her first husband, got a decree in a Chicago court, January 24, 1929. At that time Keefer charged her with desertion.

The 25-year-old former Chicago girl today charged her secod husband with cruelty.

"He was sullen and wouldn't speak," she testified, smiling at the judge as she noted that he wore a flower in his coat lapel.

"Did he ever resort to violence?" inquired Judge Robert V. Kenny.

"He threw a book at me once," she replied.

"Was it a big book, or a little book?" asked the judge. "Was it as big as this?" and he held up a large dictionary that he keeps on his desk.

SUE CAROL.

"No—," replied Sue, "not that big. It was a cross-word puzzle book."

"Why did he throw a book at you?" pursued the judge.

"I don't know—it was over some minor matter," replied Sue.

Sue did not asked for alimony, or anything for their 2-year-old daughter, it being intimated that a property settlement had been made out of court.

New Safety Legislation Required, Says Roper

Legislation to provide greater protection of life at sea probably will be recommended to the next Congress as a result of the disclosures in the Morro Castle disaster, Secretary of Commerce Roper said yesterday.

He also said that Senator Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had promised to push ratification of the international safety-at-sea convention, pending two years without action. The United States is the only major maritime nation which has not ratified it, he said.

However, the Morro Castle was built to meet the requirements of this convention, it was explained, and additional legislation will be needed to insure fireproof construction throughout ocean-going vessels. At present there is no prohibition against building a ship superstructure with highly inflammable wood and pressed-board materials.

Arthur J. Tyrer, assistant director of the Department of Commerce Bureau of Navigation and Stamboat Inspection, said the present law requires that each member of the crew be assigned to specific duties in emergencies, stewards in particular being requird to warn passengers, assist them in adjusting life jackets and in reaching the boats. Penalties are imposed for negligence or violation of the law.

Secretary Roper indorsed President Roosevelt's decision to seek elimination of all wood construction in shipbuilding.

"All-metal construction of ships is entirely in line with the trend of construction in other forms of transportation," Secretary Roper said. He also said that regulations should be changed to require skilled firefighting instruction for crews.

Austria Seeks World Peace, League Is Told

Schuschnigg Hints Fight Upon German Union Will Continue.

Geneva, Sept. 12 (AP).—When little Austria fights terrorism within her borders, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg told the League of Nations Assembly today, she fights "for the cause of world peace."

(Not far away, in Vienna, lay the body of Engelbert Dollfuss, Schuschnigg's predecessor, slain last July by Nazi revolutionists, and the Austrian chief of police came to Geneva to guard Schuschnigg against harm.)

The powers seeking to maintain Austria's independence against "hostile forces," Schuschnigg asserted, seek "no political hegemony, but merely European peace."

(At Berlin Adolf Hitler, the world's No. 1 Nazi, solemnly assured the assembled diplomatic corps that "the unalterable goal of my policy is to make Germany the stronghold of peace.")

Fights German Union.

Schuschnigg's address, partly in French, partly in German, led the delegates to believe that he, like Dollfuss, will fight to prevent any union with Germany.

"Austria protects the branch of the German race it has sheltered for centuries," he said.

(At Rome Premier Benito Mussolini, who has announced he will uphold Austria's independence, conferred with his generals.)

But Schuschnigg declared Austria could maintain order within her own boundaries were not the economic crisis aggravated by the interference of "hostile forces."

"The new Austria, which did not delimit its own frontiers, should at least be put in position to defend its territory," he said.

(France, which stood shoulder to shoulder with Mussolini when he rushed 100,000 troops to the border as Austria's Nazi revolt threatened to be successful, sent its armies to study out, through maneuvers, how best to repel an invasion throughout Switzerland, where the league has its seat.)

Henderson Defers Action.

Earlier the league learned that Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference, had definitely deferred until November any new disarmament efforts.

(In Washington United States Senate investigators were learning more and more about the international trade in arms, and were seeking to determine just how much influence arms manufacturers exert against the cause of peace.)

The long, bitter war in the Chaco Boreal also came in for the assembly's attention.

Jose Maria Cantilo, the Argentine delegate, told the league the war "is now in your hands." His statement was taken to mean Argentina and other American nations seeking to end hostilities would not interfere with the league's peace efforts.

(In the Chaco's swamps and jungles Paraguayan and Bolivian troops tore at each other on three sectors, as they have been doing for four years, and the summer's death toll was set in the tens of thousands.)

De Valera Defends Russia.

To the defense of Soviet Russia, whose candidacy for league membership has stirred opposition in league ranks, went President Eamonn De Valera of Ireland.

Heatedly he scourged "hotel room intrigues" delaying extension of the invitation to Russia, and demanded quick solution of the problem to avert Russia's distrust and avoid endangering her joining.

(While Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, waited patiently at Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, league delegates conferred in an effort to draft an invitation that would satisfy all the nations—some 36—expected to sign, and please Russia as well.)

Squarely to the forefront of the league's manifold problems came the question of the Saar district, which will vote January 13 to remain under League of Nations mandate, join Germany or unite with France.

The Saar economic commission asked that sufficient forces be placed at the disposal of the league's governing commission to avert any Nazi putsch or acts of terrorism during the plebiscite period.

Two Near Death in Battle Of Troops and Strike Pickets

ment, guardsmen let loose a barrage of nausea gas. In a short time the burying grounds reeked of gas and the strikers and sympathizers retreated just far enough to escape the fumes.

While the second savage battle of the day was raging, two pickets lay perhaps mortally wounded in Notre Dame Hospital in Central Falls.

William Blackwood, of Pawtucket, shot through the head by a guardsman, was "so poor we dare not operate," doctors said.

Charles Gorcey, of Central Falls, was shot through the abdomen. He was taken to the operating room in a desperate effort to save his life. Names of both men were on the danger list.

The second battle today occurred just 24 hours after the first guardsmen arrived on the scene. Governor Green ordered them out yesterday after a battle in which deputies wounded three men and two women pickets with buckshot.

The rioting dwarfed any other strike disturbances that have occurred in the Northeast strike. Guardsmen have been ordered out in small numbers in both Maine and Massachusetts, but have been able to maintain order without resort to arms.

Arrival of first troops last night resulted in an immediate clash with the pickets. Even with the guard ranks swelled to 400, pickets continued their assaults on the mill property. It has been charged that they are intent on burning the mill as the one means of forcing it to close.

200 Work During Battle.

The mill is a sorry sight after the three days' fighting, but its proprietors refuse to close it and 200 operatives were at work during the battling today. Mill windows are shattered and fences and gates badly damaged. The once picturesque cemetery, dotted with shade trees, is ruined. Pickets, crowding against tombstones for shelter, have loosed them from their foundations. Flower pots and other movable fixtures, converted into grenades, strew the ground.

Scenes of wildest pandemonium ensued as guardsmen, with bayonets poised, charged into the graveyard in the midafternoon skirmish. Using a device which was set on the ground and which was new to local warfare, guardsmen loosed in swift succession six charges of tear gas.

The demonstrators, women among them, stumbled over headstones and over each other as they fled the bayonets and gas. The offensive drove the mob of 3,000 into a far corner of the cemetery, but as soon as the fumes had blown away the most heedless of the crowd reorganized, numbering about 500, advanced and began showering guardsmen with rocks and other missiles.

Field Hospital Established.

A field hospital had been established just behind the firing line at the cemetery for the treatment of injured guardsmen and many went back for treatment of cuts.

Scores of the demonstrators, on the other hand, were knocked out by the varied gas attacks.

Behind the guardsmen were two Army lorries, filled with reserves. The entire State National Guard, totaling some 5,000 men, stood mobilized in armories throughout the State and it was believed large numbers of reinforcements would arrive during the night.

Peace Is Blocked In Textile Strike

vation that the three Government members of the body failed to attend the meeting at which it was drafted.

"We have been unable," the code authority said, "to find any basis for a request to the board of inquiry to act as an arbitration board. We have already commented on the impossible conditions attached by the strike chairman to his suggestion for such a request. (Closing of all mills during arbitration.)

"Apart from that the issues themselves are not, in our opinion, appropriate subjects for arbitration.

"The right of workers to remain at work, free from mass intimidation and violence, is created by law. * * *

"The demands of the strike chairman that his group be recognized as having the right to speak for those textile workers who have rejected his leadership is an issue already settled by law.

Early NRA Adherence Cited.

"Changes in the code provisions as to minimum wages and maximum hours involve code amendments—amendments to the law. The recovery act and the code provide the only lawful methods for amendment.

"Matters relating to the so-called stretch-out * * * are matters for action by the constituted authorities."

The code authority cited the industry's early adherence to NRA, claimed its hourly wages were increased 70 per cent under the pact and estimated additional employes in the past year at 140,000. The authority concluded:

"We hold the solemn conviction that the issues at stake go far beyond any temporary industrial dispute. We believe that the future of our country demands our support of the principle that law shall not be amended by force; that the provisions of a Government code shall not be changed by intimidation and violence; that the will of Congress and of the President, as expressed in the procedure of the NRA, shall not be set aside by flying squadrons."

A. F. of L. Asks U. S. Map Plan For Production

Seen as Means to Insure Federally-Controlled Boom in Business.

(Associated Press.)

Creation by the Government of a "central agency representing organized business, labor, consumers and Government to lay out a production program and carry it through" was suggested last night by the American Federation of Labor.

Such a program of controlled production was put forward by the federation in its monthly review of business as one avenue for a federally-controlled business boom.

As instances of what might be done by its suggested "control agency" the federation pointed to the automobile and home construction industries.

The country needs 5,000,000 new homes, it said, and last year built only 50,000. Eleven million persons want new autos, it contended, while only 2,135,000 were made during the year ended last June.

Blamed on Uncertainty.

Situations like these the federation attributed to business men's present uncertainty as to the prospect of future profits, their failure to expand plants and production, and the consequent depression of mass purchasing power.

In summing up its argument, the federation said:

"1. Present measures for recovery, if they succeed, can restore business only over a long period of time. Meanwhile the growing Federal debt, the increasing demand for inflation, threaten the Federal credit structure on which the whole program depends.

"2. The recovery program has as yet given us no way of adjusting production to the needs of our population; even if we recover, business activity will still depend to a large extent on the hopes and fears of millions of business men, acting as individuals, with no adequate information.

Would Stimulate Spending.

"3. If we know our needs and if all cooperate in a definite program to produce for our needs, no individual business man or worker need curtail his spending for fear of the future.

"4. The Government can set up necessary information; it can establish a central agency representing organized business, labor, consumers and Government to lay out a production program and carry it through."

The federation went back to last September, when the President's reemployment program had reached its highest pitch, to trace the reasons for the present size of unemployment rolls.

"Since September, however, we have made no further progress in putting the unemployed to work," it said. "Even in May, 1934, the busiest month of the spring season, nearly 10,250,000 were unemployed, and by July, with the summer dull season, unemployment had risen to nearly 10,800,000. The army of the unemployed is increasing again."

Work Is Suspended On Luray CCC Camp

Luray, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—All work has been suspended on the erection of the third CCC camp in this county, which was to be built near Panorama, seven miles east of Luray. The town council of Luray has entered a vigorous protest against the creation of the camp, claiming that Luray's water supply will be contaminated.

Members of the council say that the natural drainage of one of the ridges near the scene of the proposed camp will enter into the top lead of one of the mains in the Blue Ridge emptying into the reservoir.

D. A. R. Leaders Split on 'Politics' Entering Into Constitution Day

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, left, and Mrs. Florence H. Becker, whose appeals to D. A. R. members over observance of Constitution Day, show a disagreement over policy.

President General Is Opposed to Tie-up in Celebration.

(Associated Press.)

The Daughters of the American Revolution have been having a little internal trouble over the observation of Constitution Day Monday.

Conflicting calls for celebrating the day have just emanated from D. A. R. headquarters here. One came from Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general; the other from Mrs Florence H. Becker, National defense chairman and herself a candidate for the president generalcy.

If the daughters respond to Mrs. Magna's "appeal" they will have Constitution Day celebrations of their own, avoiding other groups and thus escaping any appearance of "politics."

Would Cooperate.

If they follow Mrs. Becker's "suggestions," they will cooperate with other organizations in "special patriotic meetings."

Mrs. Magna warned that "the construction of certain provisions (of the Constitution) has become a highly controversial subject, tending to create political alignment." Thus, she said, the name of the D. A. R. should not be "used as sponsoring or cooperating with any other group or organization seeking to hold meetings in commemoration of Constitution Day, to the end that the society may not be made a party to political issues."

Mrs. Becker took a just opposite stand, stepping into some of the right and left wing arguments accentuated recently by the advent of the American Liberty League. Urging a fight to preserve "Constitutional principles," she suggested the D. A. R. join "all other patriotic organizations" in special meetings.

Tyranny's Predecessor.

"Disintegrating forces," said Mrs. Becker, "have been constantly at work throughout our National life. Washington had them to fight. Today the attack is directed against the rights of private property and individual initiative—rights fundamental to a responsible people. Paternalism is the indicator of power lost. It is the predecessor of fascism, and dictatorship, and tyranny."

By many versed in D. A. R. politics, Mrs. Becker's Constitution Day call was regarded as a campaign gesture toward "old dealers" among the Daughters. It trended away from the mantle of her old friend, Mrs. Magna, who has turned against some of the activities that made the D. A. R. famous.

For instance, the D. A. R. was once widely reported compiling "black lists of reds." But Mrs. Magna has specifically forbidden the organization to hand out such compilations.

Woman Is Accused As Kidnap Plot Head

St. Louis, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, wife of a St. Louis physician, and one of four defendants in the 1931 kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, today was called the "high priestess" of the plot in a deposition by a State witness.

The witness, Adolph Fielder, former justice of the peace, said Mrs. Muench, member of a prominent Missouri family, insisted at conferences that Dr. Kelley should be kidnaped.

Long to Press Graft Inquiry Despite Victory

New Orleans Quiet as Senator Rests; Guard Troops Go Home.

New Orleans, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—A dove of peace flew above politically-stricken Louisiana today, but the tempestuous Huey Long carried no olive branch.

Fresh from his sweeping victory over the New Orleans "ring" forces of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, his last major opposition in the State, the Louisiana "Kingfish" temporarily sheathed his sword and took to bed to recuperate after one of the most sensational campaigns in his tumultuous career.

One avowed goal remained. In promising vengeance against the city which had hitherto bucked his political reins, the Senator vowed he would remove the whole New Orleans administration from office.

That purpose remained, and the "Kingfish" showed no inclination to let victory at the polls interfere with his announced plan.

His legislative invetigating committee, which has been hearing testimony of purported "graft and corruption" in Mayor Walmsley's city administration, met for a few minutes today, but in the absence of Long adjourned to meet again at 10 a. m. Friday.

Long's physician announced at the hearing that he had "forcibly" put the Senator to bed early this morning and planned to keep him there "24 hours." Long had been working night and day in his war with Walmsley, which was climaxed by yesterday's election.

Some 2,000 or more National Guardsmen brought to New Orleans from throughout the State to assure a "peaceful" election were reported ready to proceed back to their homes today, with only a small contingent remaining to "protect" the legislative investigating committee.

Out in the State, avowedly anti-Long candidates appeared to have been elected, but the Senator took no active part in those campaigns, centering his interest only on the New Orleans election.

Roosevelt Planning For NRA Policing

Legal Shift Slated.

Plans for the NRA reorganization have not advanced far enough for him to become categorical, nor for personalities to enter the situation, said the President. He added that the legal personnel of the NRA would be shifted to the Justice Department in the event the proposed division is created.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt announced the resignation of Nathan Straus, jr., his New York director of the National Emergency Council, the second visitor to Hyde Park to leave his resignation with the President. Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, resigned ten days ago in this manner.

Mr. Straus' leave-taking differed in every respect from the Douglas resignation, however, in that it was accompanied by a pleasant exchange of letters. The State director, declaring he must devote full time to the Hillside housing project, prophesized that certain principles of NRA will become permanent. Mr. Roosevelt expressed hope that he would "come back to help the Government later."

Other callers today included Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, who reported a more liberal policy on the part of banks, and John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, who said he took up plans for this winter's program. Mr. Richberg discussed the work of the emergency council, which he will head at least until October 1.

Alaska New Deal Candidates Lead In Primary Race

Juneau, Alaska, Sep. 12 (A.P.).—With the Territorial Delegate to Congress, Anthony J. Dimond, Democrat, unopposed for reelection, "New Dealers" in Alaska's primary election took the lead today as first returns began to trickle in.

In the First Judicial Division, with 26 of the 53 precincts complete, Democrats Joe Baronovich, Joe Green, A. P. Walker and A. H. Zeigler were leading all Republicans and independents for Representative in the Terriorial Legislature. Return from the other divisions in yesterday's balloting will be slow, because of the great distances involved.

Oscar Olson, Democrat, had a close race with Walstein G. Smith, independent, for Territorial treasurer, the vote being 1,181 to 1,290. Allen Shattuck, Democrat, was leading Henry Roden, independent, for Territorial Senator by a vote of 1,565 to 1,530.

Leaky roofs seem to be the chief concern of the home owners of the United States who do not live on farms, according to an analysis of the requests for modernization information being received by the Federal Housing Administration. Farmers, judged by the correspondence, are concerned chiefly about wells and other sources of water supply.

Next to roofs and wells, interest seems to center in painting. Roofing and painting are coupled together in many instances, although roofing takes the lead in individual inquiries.

"AMERICAN MARCHES FURTHER AHEAD" WITH A NEW PRINCIPLE
★ IN REFINING ★

LAST year the American Oil Company, as a result of its merger with the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company and the Mexican Petroleum Corporation, extended its already large operations to the greater territory from Maine to Florida and inland. AMERICAN MARCHED AHEAD!

Just recently the American Oil Company completed its new refinery at Texas City, Texas. It is the world's newest, biggest and most modern refining unit. And with this new refinery was born a new principle in refining which converts more of the undeveloped energy of the raw crudes into finished gasoline than ever before was possible. AMERICAN MARCHES FURTHER AHEAD!

Out of this great modern refinery comes "New-Action" Orange AMERICAN GAS--the amazing new regular gasoline that is unlike anything ever before produced. For no existing refinery equipment could produce it! It is better in every way a gasoline can be better--in anti-knock--in surer power--in easier riding--more miles--readier acceleration and in lower cost.

In short--"New-Action" Orange AMERICAN GAS is new in every sense of the words "New-Action". And "New-Action" American is all you have to tell our dealers and station attendants from Maine to Florida to get it--and at regular gas price!

Woman Beaten In Colorado's Governor Race

Johnson to Be Opposed by Warren, Republican, Next November.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 12 (AP).—Colorado politics was back tonight on a basis of man-against-man for the governorship after an exciting interlude in which Miss Josephine Roche, industrialist and sociologist, made a flashing but fruitless bid for the State's highest office.

Miss Roche had not conceded the election, although 1,366 of the State's 1,547 precincts in yesterday's primary gave her 10,322 votes less than her opponent, Ed C. Johnson, the present Governor.

Johnson will be opposed in the general election by Nate C. Warren, of Fort Collins, unopposed in the Republican primary.

On the basis of 1,366 precincts, Miss Roche had 59,409 votes to 69,731 for Johnson. She had carried but 6 of the State's 63 counties.

Denver, a city and county in one, gave her majority of 8,859 votes on the unofficial return.

Gunnison County, in which she operates coal mines, voted her 147 ahead of Johnson. Boulder, where she also operates mines, voted Johnson, 2,613; Roche, 2,684.

Elsewhere Johnson, lanky son of a Swedish immigrant, piled up large majorities against the daughter of a wealthy coal magnate who turned early into social work and industrial experiment.

The Governor expressed belief the Democratic party had avoided the schism which threatened when he, Miss Roche and former Gov. William H. Adams all sought nomination. Adams withdrew.

Strike Plan Defied By Hosiery Mills

Company at Martinsburg to Continue Work.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12 (AP). Faced with a threat of a strike at midnight tonight, the Interwoven Hosiery Mills posted notice it will attempt to operate as usual. The plant employs about 1,700 workers and has other plants at Berkeley Springs, Hagerstown, Md., and Chambersburg, Pa.

In its posted notice the management asserted, "This company believes this strike is contrary to NRA, and that, if persisted in, will result in a long-continued unemployment."

Year's Probation Given Father for Spanking Child

A young father, charged with brutally spanking his 2-year-old son because "he wouldn't say his prayers," was given a year's probation after explaining he was "sorry" to Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday.

The father, Talmadge Hudson, 24, doorman at a downtown hotel, was arraigned on assault charges after his wife, Mrs. Juanita Hudson, 21, appealed to the District Attorney's office. She showed Judge Schuldt large black-and-blue marks on the legs and back of her small son, Charles Hudson.

The Hudson family came here three weeks ago from Fort Myers, Fla. Mrs. Hudson testified her husband, angered because Charles refused to say his prayers, severely punished the child with switches. The father said he "had suffered enough" after seeing the bruises and asked leniency.

Judge Schuldt agreed to place him on probation, providing the mother and child returned to Florida.

Three Bandits Rob Man Walking in Park

A trio of armed men early yesterday held up and robbed Michael G. Adams, of the 300 block of Third street northwest, as he walked in a park near Tenth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

Adams told police the men threatened his life and after taking $23 escaped on foot. He described the bandits as young and dressed in sport clothes.

Police Seize Suspect In Robbery Attempt

A colored man was arrested yesterday charged with attempting to rob Edward C. Rosenthal, manager of a laundry at 2700 Q street northwest.

Rosenthal said he was en route home, waiting for a street car near Twenty-seventh and P streets northwest, when he was grabbed from behind and thrown to the ground. A colored man, he said, gripped his throat with both hands and demanded money. A passerby, however, frightened off his assailant.

Investigation by Seventh Precinct police led to the arrest of Rome McDaniels, colored, of the 2700 block of P street northwest. Police said the man was identified by Rosenthal.

Georgia Gives Talmadge Lead In Early Voting

Governor Receives 190 of 410 Unit Votes in First Returns.

Atlanta, Sept. 12 (AP).—Early returns from today's Democratic primary gave Gov. Talmadge an indicated unit vote of 190 of the State's 410 in the three-cornered gubernatorial contest. Judge Claude Pittman, of Cartersville, trailed with 10 indicated units.

Talmadge was leading in 76 counties, Pittman in 4 and Ed A. Gilliam, Atlanta attorney, in none.

The New Deal had been brought into the campaign by charges of Pittman supporters who claimed Talmadge had tried to block the President's recovery program at every turn.

Talmadge Asserts Loyalty.

Talmadge was just as vehement in prptesting his support of the President and said in the Chief Executive's "other home" State it was "Roosevelt and Talmadge."

Gilliam campaigned chiefly on a repeal platform.

The popular vote has no bearing on State-wide races in Georgia, except to decide the unit vote in each county. The leading candidate in each of the 159 counties gets the unit vote of that county.

The units, totaling 410, vary from 2 votes in the small counties to 6 votes in six of the largest counties. Democratic nomination is equivalent to election.

Representatives returned to Congress without opposition were Emmett Owen, of Griffin, in the Fourth District; Robert Ramspeck, of Decatur, in the Fifth District; Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, dean of the delegation and chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, in the Sixth District, and Paul Brown, of Elberton, in the Tenth.

Parker Opposed by Cobb.

In the First District, Representative Homer C. Parker, of Statesboro, was opposed by Albert L. Cobb, of Savannah, and Hugh Peterton, of Ailey, a brother-in-law of Senator Richard B. Russell.

Representative E. E. Cox, of Camilla, in the Second District, was opposed by Dr. R. S. Roddenbery jr., of Moultrie.

In the Third District, Representative B. T. Castellow, of Cuthbert, was opposed by Stephen Pace, of Americus.

Representative M. C. Tarver, of Dalton, was opposed by T. E. Clemmons, of Rome, in the Seventh.

In the Eighth, Representative Braswell Deen had three opponents. They were W. B. Gibbs, of Jesup; E. E. Dekle, of Valdosta, and A. D. Williams, of Folkston.

In the Ninth, Representative John S. Wood, of Canton, was opposed by B. Frank Welchel, of Gainesville.

Inter-Island Airways Mail Bid Is Approved

The Interstate Commerce Commission in its first decision under the new air-mail law yesterday approved a bid of the Inter-Island Airways, Ltd., for carrying mail among four of the principal islands of the Hawaiian group, the Associated Press reported.

The rate, 19½ cents an airplane mile, applies o loads of 300 pounds or less and for each 100 pounds above 300 one-tenth of the base rate, to be computed at the end of each calendar month on the basis of the average mail load carried per mile over the route during the month.

New Deal Wins In Washington Primary Vote

Schwellenbach Nominee for Senate; Democratic Representatives Lead.

Seattle, Sept. 12 (AP).—A militant supporter of the New Deal, Lewis B. Schwellenbach, was conceded the victor today by his nearest opponent in Tuesday's primary for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Schwellenbach is an advocate of public ownership of utilities and claimant of support from a State-wide organization of political clubs adhering to the "end poverty" platform of Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor of California.

Reno Odlin, Olympia banker, was the apparent winner of the Republican nomination and probably will face Schwellenbach in the November election.

The successful candidate in the November election will succeed Senator C. C. Dill, Democrat, who is retiring.

Schwellenbach, with a vote of 55,029 in 2,140 precincts out of 2,852 in the State, led his nearest opponent, John C Stevenson, of Seattle, by more than 11,000 votes. Stevenson conceded Schwellenbach's election. Odlin polled 28,285 votes in the some precincts to lead his closest rival, D. V. Northland, of Yakima, by 1,987 votes.

All six incumbent Democratic Congressmen won their party nominations and only the Republican nominee in the Sixth District seemed doubtful.

Mother to Claim Body From Liner

Former Washington Man Morro Castle Victim.

Mrs. Alberta Ludwig, of 1607 Seventeenth street northwest, left yesterday for New York to claim the body of her son, Clyde Latta, a former Washingtonian, who was drowned in the Morro Castle disaster.

Latta, chief steward's clerk on the liner, was first reported missing. His mother was informed yesterday that his body had been found and identified by Acting Capt. William F. Warms. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Fredonia, N. Y.

The dead crew member was a District resident from 1922 until 1930. He was a conductor for the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and a rug salesman for Woodward & Lothrop.

Allen Will Seek Referenda Law From Congress

Advisory Vote in District Hope as Outgrowth of Takoma Ruling.

Enactment of a law authorizing submission of public questions to District residents in advisory referenda will be sought at the next session of Congress by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The Commissioner's announcement followed a meeting with his colleagues at which it was decided to accept as final the temporary restraining order issued the day before by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District Supreme Court, stopping the proposed Takoma Park (D. C.) vote on whether sale of liquor in the section should be forbidden.

Acceptance of the Letts' decision by the Commissioners definitely ends the poll first proposed by Commissioner Allen several weeks ago after bitter fights over licensing four places in the area to sell alcoholic beverages.

Allen Displeased.

Although Commissioner Allen refused any comment on the Letts' decision, he obviously was displeased, and at the meeting of the board voted to appeal. His colleagues, however, decided to let the matter drop. The balloting was to have been held yesterday under official supervision.

Despite his announced belief that the people of the District should be permitted by law to express their views through the ballot, Commissioner Allen's proposed new law would not grant them full suffrage. Results of the voting would be advisory only and would not be binding on municipal authorities. Commissioner Allen said he had in mind a law similar to that in operation in California.

Abandonment of the Takoma vote plan does not, however, end the long fight launched while the District liquor law was being framed. Four applications for licenses still are formally before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

On Their Merits.

These applications should be considered and decided on their merits, the Commissioners told the board. George W. Offutt, chairman of the board, said each would be so decided in the near future.

Opponents of the licensing can block issuance by resorting to that section of the liquor law which prohibits issuance of a license for any location where a majority of the residents within a radius of 600 feet object.

The Commissioners also have before them a petition from Takoma Park residents to declare their section formally dry. Their action in referring the four license applications back to the beverage board, however, was believed by them to be an adequate answer to the petition.

Floods Feared as Record Cloudburst Swells River

Shenandoah above their juncture near Harpers Ferry undoubtedly would cause flooding here. They said the high-water mark would not be reached before today.

Meantime, hundreds of residents in virtually every section of the city, shopkeepers along F street, the owners of many office buildings in the downtown area and Government building officials counted heavy losses from silt filled basements, damaged merchandise and flood-washed equipment and supplies. No official estimate of the loss was available, but it was believed the damage would run into thousands of dollars.

Many Calls for Aid.

During the storm's height and for a half hour afterward more than 2,000 calls for aid flooded the police switchboard. In the same period the Fire Department handled 400 calls, the office of the District Sanitary Engineer a similar number and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. called in every available operator to relieve jammed switchboards.

Along Connecticut avenue between Porter and Ordway streets flood waters reached a maximum of 4 feet, poured over the curbing into adjoining cellars and completely tied up street car and automobile traffic nearly an hour. Between K and M on the same street firemen last night were pumping water out of the basements of shops and apartment houses.

Constitution avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets presented another flood scene. Water backed up from overloaded sewers, popped off manhole covers and spurted like geyers three feet into the air.

The flood rolled into Government buildings along the Mall, meeting waters from already backed-up drains. Several inches of water ran into the cafteria in the new Commerce Building while hundreds of NRA and Commerce employes were on their way to lunch. The power was shut off in wing 1 of the Department of Agriculture Building at Twelfth street and Independence avenue to forestall water damage to electrical equipment.

Wisconsin avenue near the District line was another flood area. For five blocks the water stood gutter-deep, and in the vicinity of the Grafton street intersection water washed the windows of more than 100 autos, abandoned by their drivers. Fire companies from Bethesda, Rockville, Glen Echo, Kensington and Chevy Chase spent the afternoon and most of the evening pumping out cellars.

Door Crashed Through.

Water rose to a depth of 10 feet in the vicinity of L and Twentieth streets northwest, tons of it backing out of sewers and flooding homes. At 1931 L street the water entered the basement, crashed through a street floor door and rose two feet, terrifying four colored children and their parents. Neighbors came to their assistance.

Water reached nine feet in the basement of an apartment at 1911 R street. The Loft Candy Co. at 1107 L street northwest called for police aid when a basement flood reached five feet. A fire rescue squad went to Phillipsborn & Co. at Eleventh and F streets northwest, where storm water threatened the lives of employes in the basement.

A retaining wall along Canal road collapsed releasing tons of stone and water and blocking the highway. At many points along the same roadway, the water rushed in torrents two and three feet deep.

A 10-foot concrete retaining wall, several tons of earth and a telephone pole undermined by water, came down in the rear of the home of Mrs. A. E. Golden, 2115 Tunlaw street northwest. Buried beneath the debris was Mrs. Golden's washing, hung out to dry a few hours before the storm broke.

Reservoir Line Saved.

Flooding also was heavy along Conduit road, where, at two points, leaks developed in the pipe that carries water to the reservoir, threatening for a time to burst the the line. The leaks were repaired, however, and danger averted.

Firemen were called to pump water out of the basements of the Powhatan, Shoreham, Hamilton and Carlton hotels, the Franklin Laundry at 508 Thirteenth street northwest, a drug store at Thirteenth and E streets, the Security Savings Bank and the National Savings & Trust Co. Water stopped the presses in the Times-Herald Building and blew out a transformer in the Archives Building.

The basement of No. 29 engine house at Conduit and Reservoir roads was flooded, and water rose to the second floor of No. 28 engine house on Connecticut avenue between Ordway and Porter streets.

The British Embassy on Massachusetts avenue called for help, and flooded conduits left without electric power the Medical Building at Nineteenth and I streets northwest, the Howard Theater and residences and business establishments within a half-mile radius of Scott Circle, Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue and First street and Florida avenue.

Underpass Washed Out.

On Massachusetts avenue the Rock Creek underpass was washed away, and roads leading into Rock Creek Park off the avenue were blocked.

The creek, swollen almost beyond its banks, undermined a pier of the temporary bridge at P street, weakening the span so the Capital Transit Co. closed it to its cars, rerouting passengers on the Cabin John line over the Q street bridge by bus. Traffic was tied up there for 40 minutes.

A large section of the street caved in at Twenty-sixth and P street northwest, dropping a beer truck. A fire truck sank to a 50-degree angle when the driver sought to circumvent the cave-in by driving over the sidewalk.

In Rosslyn, recently installed sewers proved inadequate to carry off the torrents. Water rose to depths of 3 feet.

Only a miracle saved five men working in a Potomac Electric Co. substation near Fourteenth and H streets northwest from probable death. Water flooded into the high-tension equipment, but by some trick of fate, yet unexplained, the resulting explosion, officials said, was minor. Power was shut down, affecting electricity users in a radius of two blocks.

Another substation at Seventh and K streets northwest was shut down by water with the same effect upon elevators and lights in residences and office buildings nearby.

J. Enos Ray Will Be Paid Tribute Today

Democratic Leaders Will Be Pallbearers for Revenue Collector.

Postmaster General James A. Farley and Governor Albert C. Ritchie will head the list of honorary pallbearers today at the funeral of J. Enos Ray, Maryland Democratic leader and Collector of Internal Revenue.

On the list of the 21 honorary pallbearers will also be Senator Millard E. Tydings, Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, and Deputy Commissioner George J. Shoeneman.

From Prince Georges County there will Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, Albert Almoney, chief clerk of the Maryland House of Delegates, Ormand W. Phair, president of the county commissioners, George N. Palmer, chairman, and Frank B. Smith, secretary of the county's State central committee; T. Howard Duckett, and Lewis M. Milbourne.

Other pallbearers will be Maj. E. Brooke Lee, M. Hampton Magruder, John H. Wagner, Albert S. Garley and John H. Ray.

Following a short service at Mr. Ray's home at Chillum, near Mount Rainier, the main funeral services will be held at Emory Methodist Church, Brightwood. The Rev. Joseph Rives, pastor, will officiate.

Interment will take place in Rock Creek Cemetery, with members of the Chillum Castle A. F. and A. M., of which Mr. Ray was a past master, conducting the last rites.

Mr. Ray had been one of the leaders of the Democratic party in Maryland for many years and had served the party with distinction in several public offices. This included the House of Delegates, which he entered in 1904, and of which, in 1906, he became speaker. In 1912 he was appointed State auditor and was later chairman of the State tax commission.

At his death he was chairman of the Democratic State central committee, a post which he had planned to resign after the primary election.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Isabel S. Ray; a brother, Alfred Ray, of Takoma Park, and a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Schultz, of Bethesda.

Dixie Veteran Units Merged

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—America's oldest Confederate organization—the Grand Camp of Virginia—formally passed out of existence today through a merger here with the Virginia Division of the United Confederate Veterans.

The combine marked the end of a long controversy between the two organizations. Members of the Grand Camp, although submitting to the merger with reluctance, admitted the organizations can achieve more by working in unity.

The question of State pensions for veterans and their widows brought speeches from the veterans against Virginia's policy in reducing the payments.

Commander Pinckney Anthony, of Bedford, took the lead in urging the veterans to appeal to Gov. Peery to raise veterans' pensions from $30 to $50. Commander Wood urged that the allowance for widows be raised from $7 to $10 a month.

HOLC Office at Bristol Has Loaned $1,241,342

Bristol, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Bristol district office of the Virginia division of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation loaned $1,241,342 to 472 home owners from August 5, 1933, to August 31, 1934, it was announced yesterday by John J. Wicker, jr., State manager of the HOLC in Virginia. Mr. Wicker spent the day at the Bristol office of the HOLC, which is managed by Dan Cosby, of Abingdon.

Of the sum loaned through the Bristol office, Mr. Wicker said, $1,104,362 was in bonds, $34,000 in cash, $54,396 in cash was expended for delinquent taxes, $3,650 for fire insurance, $2,350 for appraisal fees, $15,067 for attorney fees, $4,416 for title insurance, $3,528 for surveys, $2,643 for recording fees, and $16,501 for repairs.

3 Youths Die in Flames In Virginia Truck Crash

Pulaski, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Three youths, Glenn Smith, James Ratcliffe and Lewis Mann were fatally burned near Bonsack when a truck in which they were riding struck a tree near a small concrete bridge a few miles east of Roanoke last night, hurtled into a culvert and caught fire.

One of them lived long enough at a hospital to identify partially his companions. One body was found in shallow water under the bridge, where the victim evidently had found his way in an effort to extinguish his burning clothing. The truck was destroyed.

Charlotte Airplane Schedule Is Canceled

Complaints by airplane pilots of difficulty in landing at the Charlotte, N. C., airport yesterday caused a temporary cancellation of scheduled flights from that city, it was understood here, according to the Associated Press.

Pilots flying mail planes and passenger planes, it was said, reported the condition of the field such that landing was dangerous and the company operating the New York-Atlanta route directed that planes pass up the city until the field is in condition.

Silverware Stolen From Westminster Episcopal Church

Westminster, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Silverware used in the Communion service, and valued at approximately $200 was reported to have been stolen from Ascension Protestant Episcopal Church, Westminster, yesterday.

The robbery was discovered by the Rev. H. G. C. Martin, pastor of the church. Westminster officers are conducting an investigation.

Presbyterians Meet Sept. 25 At Staunton

New Stated Clerk Will Be Chosen; Calls to Be Heard.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Election of a stated clerk to succeed the late Rev. Dr. William C. White, of Churchville, will be one of the principal items of busines when the Presbytery of Lexington convenes for its regular fall session at Hebron Church, 6 miles west of Staunton, September 25.

Dr. White, who died in Montreal, N. C., while attending the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church in the summer, was stated clerk of the presbytery for more than 30 years. No indication has been given as to possible candidates for the office.

The Rev. R. W. Cousar, of Waynesboro, retiring moderator of the presbytery, is slated to deliver the opening sermon of the fall session, which will consume the greater part of three days.

George Bird Talbot will apply to the presbytery for ordination as an evangelist in the foreign mission field, and calls from several churches for pastoral supply will be presented. Several overtures from the General Assembly also will be considered.

Lexington Presbytery meets twice annually—in the spring and in the fall. It is one of the strongest units in the Southern Presbyterian Church and outstanding in its contribution from various angles to the work of the Synod of Virginia. Its territory embraces five counties in western Virginia and one in West Virginia.

Farrar Indorsed As Board Chairman

Banker on Development Commission 8 Years.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Appointment of Thomas L. Farrar, Charlottesville banker, and for eight years an active member of the State development and conservation commission, to the chairmanship of that body after January 1, has been urged upon Gov. Peery by 15 men high in the political and financial circles of Albemarle.

Carrying with it indorsements from both the Charlottesville and Albemarle County Democratic committees, the delegation conferred with the Governor yesterday concerning the proposed appointment. The resolutions of the two party organizations cited Mr. Farrar's work with the commission since it was formed in 1926, and the work which he has done since 1924 for the Shenandoah National Park.

Under the reorganization affected by the last General Assembly, the chairmanship of the commission will be vacated next January 1 and the commissioner appointed then placed on a salary basis with wider executive powers. The position at that time will become similar to the highway commissionership.

Historic Academy To Start 194th Year

Large Enrollment Seen at West Nottingham.

Colora, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Historic West Nottingham Academy, oldest Presbyterian school in the United States, will open for its 194th year on September 17 with the largest enrollment of boarding students since 1886, according to J. Paul Slaybaugh, headmaster.

The faculty this year will number 11 instructors from Yale, Columbia, Pennsylvania and other universities. Announcement was made today that Kenneth Ward Hooker will be instructor in modern languages. He comes here from the Colonial College of Algeria. John Paul Edwards, professor of history, is a graduate of Susquehanna University. John N. LeVine, jr., instructor in Greek, is from Yale.

William Pritchards, instructor in the junior school, is a graduate of Tusculum College, and Russell H. Kunble, in science and mathematics, is from the University of Pennsylvania. George C. Aykroyd, of the department of classical languages, is from Pennsylvania, and H. G. Hanna, director of athletics, comes from Lafayette College. The instructor in commercial subjects is J. Fred Reburn. Charles L. Edwards will be director of music.

Warwood Factory Loses Blue Eagle

Code Violation Charged to West Virginia Plant.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—F. Witcher McCullough, State NRA compliance director, today withdrew the Blue Eagle from the United States Corrugated Box Co., of Warwood.

The withdrawal was ordered in a telegram received from Gen. Johnson, directing the company to turn over all insignia and "hereafter refrain from using NRA insignia at your establishment or branches, if any, and in advertising and in any other manner whatever."

Code violations were charged.

Mother's Auto Kills Child, 2

Alexandria Woman's Car Skids and Turns Over Near Warrenton.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Franklin Dennis Butler, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Butler, of 134 Lloyd avenue, Alexandria, Va., was killed instantly when the automobile his mother was driving skidded, ran up an embankment and fell over on its side on the Culpeper road, 3½ miles south of here this afternoon.

The child was thrown partially out of a side window and his head was caught between the car and the embankment, crushing his skull. Mrs. Butler was driving her husband's two sisters, Miss Irene Butler and Miss Margaret Butler, to their home in Culpeper, Va., when the accident occurred. Another son, 5, was in the car beside the boy killed. None of the others was injured.

The child's father, an officer on the Alexandria police force, was notified and he met his wife here before proceeding to Alexandria with their son's body.

Owen Hughes, 25, of Ridgeley, W. Va., a passing motorist, notified authorities here of the accident. Dr. George H. Davis, coroner, pronounced a verdict of accidental death.

Harry Williamson vs. Commonwealth, corporation court of Bristol; error writ allowed.

The case of H. F. Scott, president of the Cold Spring Creamery Co., and others against A. M. Renick, which was argued at Wytheville, was ordered dropped from the docket.

Team Hit by Truck, Driver Badly Injured

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—John Ebbets, 59, was probably fatally injured early today when his team was struck by a truck on the Middleburg pike outside the city limits. He is in the Washington County Hospital with a fractured skull. A horse was killed.

Ralph V. Harne, ice truck driver, was taken into custody several hours later, and admitted, said the police, driving the truck that struck Ebbets' team. Harne stated there was no rear light on the wagon.

Shepherdstown Rain Heaviest in 100 Years

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—A cloudburst here today virtually flooded the town. It was the hardest rain recorded here in more than 100 years.

Water filled cellars of business establishments and homes. Two trains of the Norfolk & Western Railroad—a passenger and freight—were held up while crews worked hard repairing 200 yards of track washed out by the storm.

Fern Thief Sought By Chief of Police, Who Owned Plant

Staunton, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Chief of Police William P. Davis has a personal case to work on.

During the night, Monday, some one stole a large and beautiful potted fern from the front porch of the chief's residence. Leaves on the sidewalk and street plainly indicated that the thief had taken away the loot in an automobile or truck. Previously, potted flowers had been stolen from the porch of Mrs. Walter B. Anderson, a neighbor of the Davises.

Chief Davis reports that thus far he has been unable to unearth any clews. He is giving the mystery his personal attention.

Frederick Gets Site for Park

450 Acres at 'High Knob' Presented to City by Group of Citizens.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Approximately 450 acres of land on Catoctin Mountain, embracing High Knob, the loftiest elevation in Frederick County, was made a gift to the city by a group of public-spirited citizens, Mayor Lloyd C. Culler has announced.

In appreciation of the public services of James H. Gambrill, jr., former member of the Board of Aldermen, the mayor and aldermen named the area "Gambrill's Park at High Knob."

While Mr. Gambrill was the first person to suggest the acquisition of property for recreational purposes, he was not told of the consummation of his idea nor was he aware of the action of the city authorities in naming the property for him until yesterday.

The location has an elevation of 1,531 feet and was purchased from Col. E. Z. Steever, who acquired the property some time ago.

After some road building, the site will be opened as a park. The location embraces a stretch of about 15 miles through the mountain about four miles from Braddock Heights and about nine miles from Frederick. A portion of the land adjoins the Tuscarora watershed.

Hagerstown Schools Enroll 6,243 Pupils

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The total enrollment of the Hagerstown schools this year is 6,243, according to the Board of Education.

The elementary enrollment is 3,596 and in the Hagerstown High School and two junior highs, Woodland Way and South Potomac Street, 2,647. This compares with 2,487 in the three high schools last year.

Charlottesville Enrollment Up

Number of Pupils More Than Doubled in Last 25 Years.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12.—School enrollment in Charlottesville has more than doubled in the past 25 years, figures released by Superintendent James G. Johnson show. The total enrollment for the new session this morning came to 3,848, being divided as follows: Clark School, 661; McGuffey School, 661; Venable School, 726; Lane High School, 810; colored schools, 990.

These figures show that there are 2,048 pupils enrolled in elementary schools, with the high school registration bringing the total for white students in the city to 2,858.

Twenty-five years ago there were enrolled 671 pupils in the white primary grades, 395 in the grammar grades, making a total of 1,066 pupils in the white elementary school. The white high school showed a registration of 111. There were 600 colored pupils.

On September 10, 1909, all the white pupils were housed at Midway School Building. The total number enrolled in the elementary white grades has shown a growth from 1,066 pupils present then to 2,048 now.

The history of education in Charlottesville shows remarkable growth in the high school. The small group of 111 pupils cared for by five or six teachers on the upper floor of the new or annex portion of Midway School Building has now become a school of 810 students, with 28 teachers.

Police Seek Couple Who Deserted Son, 9

Waynesboro, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Local police notified State officers today to be on the lookout for Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Graham who disappeared yesterday leaving behind their 9-year-old son at a local hotel.

Mrs. Gertrude Hammer, proprietor of a hotel here, told police the pair left yesterday in an automobile bearing Tennessee license No. 126848. Both are between 30 and 35 years of age and have reddish hair. The lad has been placed with Augusta County probation officers.

Hearings Scheduled On Aviation Program

Hearings looking to formulating a permanent aviation development program to be submitted to Congress will begin September 24 before the Federal Aviation Commission. Hearings were originally set for September 17, but more time was needed to assemble data already collected by the commission.

Harrisonburg Jail Record Broken as Prisoner Flees

Man Escapes Temporary Prison, Soon to Be Abandoned.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Jack Baugher, 22, Harrisonburg, had only a few days left in which to mar the record of the Rockingham County temporary jail that no prisoner had escaped from it since it was established on the second floor of a garage last November.

Baugher, apparently not liking the idea of being transferred to the modernized jail across the street within a few days, took his departure early yesterday and was not missed for nearly 12 hours.

The youth, serving a six months' sentence for disorderly conduct, which would have been up in December, pried loose one of the planks placed over the windows, smashed a glass and reached the sidewalk 20 feet below.

The opening was only 8 inches wide, but Baugher is small in stature. Whether his fellow prisoners provided him with a rope made from blankets or he received aid from the outside has not been determined.

Baugher's absence was not discovered by jail guards until they heard street rumors that the youth was gone. They checked up and found the report true.

This is the second time Baugher has escaped jail. In the old prison, which is now being remodeled, he hid in a water tank while the prisoners were out in the corridor and then gained his freedom, which lasted only a few hours.

4 Paid $18,350 Fees in 2 Years, Auditor Says

Fixed Salary for State Insurance Examiners Suggested.

Richmond, Sept. 12 (AP).—State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs in a report on an audit of the insurance division of the State corporation commission today reported four examiners received in two years ended June 30, 1933, special per diems amounting to $18,350. The report was made to the Governor.

The auditor suggested that it might be well if these examiners were placed on a fixed salary and their fees turned into the State treasury as revenue of the division. The auditor said:

"We found one phase of activity which we believe should be brought to the attention of Your Excellency for consideration by you. It appears to have been the custom for many years to permit examiners employed in the insurance division to retain individually a per diem fee of $25 and expenses while making examinations of various insurance companies whose offices are located outside the State of Virginia. These examiners have always refunded, however, to the Commonwealth the salary paid them by the Commonwealth during the period of their out-of-State engagements."

Woman Killed In Car Wreck

Waterman Teacher Dies as Auto Goes Over Embankment.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Miss Mary Jo Walters, 36, teacher in the Waterman Grammar School and active in welfare and civic circles, was instantly killed today when her automobile went over an embankment.

Miss Walters was en route here to resume her teaching in the Harrisonburg public schools, which opened today. She had attended the funeral of a friend in Waynesboro and spent the night there. She was alone.

Miss Walters' car struck a stump concealed by grass and rolled 23 feet. The embankment has been the scene of a half dozen wrecks recently.

A daughter of Eli G. Walters, of Harrisonburg, she was a graduate of the State Teachers College here.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Sunday Games Are Protested

Harrisonburg Cleric Asks Cessation; Picture Drive Lauded.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The first protest against Sunday baseball in Harrisonburg was heard yesterday when the Rockingham Ministerial Association, which includes Harrisonburg ministers, passed resolutions asking the city school board to deny permission for Sabbath contests on the Harrisonburg High School field.

The resolution, passed at the first meeting of the association since the summer recess, declared that Sunday games are in violation of the State law.

This is the first season that Sunday baseball has been staged in Harrisonburg. Large crowds witnessed the Valley Leaguers in action. No effort was made by officers to halt the games and they received no protests. There will be no more Sunday games this season as Harrisonburg winds up its postseason series with Staunton this week.

Another resolution commended the Roman Catholic Church and the Federal Council of Churches' campaigns for cleaner motion pictures.

Committee on Housing Named for Orange Fete

Orange, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—To provide for the accommodation of out-of-town visitors to the Orange County Bicentennial celebration which is to be held here September 25 to 28, a housing committee has been appointed to aid the central committee, it was announced today by Col. Charles D. Winn, executive secretary. Headed by E. W. Mims, the committee is making an extensive survey of all housing facilities within a radius of 100 miles.

Boy Scouts will be on duty during the four-day celebration to aid visitors in finding suitable lodging places and, if necessary, to act as guides to nearby towns for accommodations.

Farmers Out 165 Hens, Police Out After Pilferers

Winchester, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Frederick County authorities are looking for thieves who stole 165 young chickens from farmers near Hayfield this week.

Mrs. Riddelle Rites Are Held At Strasburg

Widow, Who Died at 65, Survived by 4 Sons, 6 Daughters.

Strasburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted here for the late Mrs. Sallie Elizabeth Riddelle, 65, widow of Archibald A. Riddelle, who died Saturday after a long illness.

Surviving Mrs. Riddelle are six daughters, Mrs. Ella Utterback, Millville, W. Va.; Mrs. Mabel Ritenour, Aliquippa, Pa.; Mrs. Frank Ruffner, Meridian; Mrs. Charles Hartung, Washington; Mrs. Lee Hupp, Strasburg, and Miss Mary Riddle at home, and four sons, James Riddelle, Alexandria; George Riddelle, Pittsburgh; Archibald Riddelle, New York, and Joe Riddelle, at home.

Ferdinand B. R. Anderson.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral rites will be conducted here tomorrow morning for the late Ferdinand B. R. Anderson, 77, local building contractor, who died suddenly late yesterday.

Mr. Anderson was a native of Rock Enon Springs, W. Va. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. H. R. Argenbright, Catonsville, Md., and Mrs. C. C. Holliday, Fall River, Mass., and one sister, Mrs. Lucy E. Creswell, of Winchester.

Mrs. Amanda Jones.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Amanda Jones, 76, wife of James Jones, who died suddenly from a heart attack.

Rev. Vaughn T. Rue.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon in New Cumberland Pa., for the Rev. Vaughn T. Rue, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a native of Onancock, Va.

Death came Monday night in a Lebanon, Pa., hospital from injuries received in an automobile accident August 31 while returning from a camp meeting in Ocean Grove, N. J.

After serving charges in Sunbury, Gettysburg, Waynesboro, Altoona, New Cumberland and Wrightsville, he retired in 1927.

William P. Wade.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral rites for William Powell Wade, 64, who died here Monday night, were held today at his home.

Mr. Wade was a native of Bedford County and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Martha Wade, and several sons and daughters.

Robert L. Campbell.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The funeral of Robert L. Campbell, 65, who was found dead yesterday morning in about 4 inches of water in Brickstone run here, was held this afternoon at the grave in Blandford Cemetery.

Coroner McGill, after an examination of the body, expressed the belief that in some manner Mr. Campbell fell into the stream, striking his head upon the rocks below. The blow is believed to have rendered him unconscious and to have resulted in his death by drowning.

Mr. Campbell was a prominent member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic orders in Petersburg. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. W. C. Bruner, of Roanoke, and by a brother, James F. Campbell, of Hopewell.

The Rev. A. M. Padgett.

Danville, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The Rev. A. M. Padgett, who held several Baptist churches in Pittsylvania County and who died in a Roanoke Hospital early yesterday, was buried at Chatham today.

Mrs. Cora Abell.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday morning at Our Lady's Chapel, Medleys Neck, for Mrs. Cora Abell, 66, by the Rev. J. J. McKlosky. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Walter Woodburn, of Chaptico, and one son, Bernard Abell, of Baltimore.

Hotel Fights Ban On Liquor License

Board's Power to Act Up to War Department.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman, today said the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had communicated its decision revoking the wine and beer license of the Chamberlin Hotel to the War Department, but otherwise there were no new developments in the hotel's case which, from its vantage point on Federally-owned property, at Old Point, has challenged the right of the State to prohibit it from selling liquor.

"We have informed the War Department of the case and we expect action recognizing that there is concurrent jurisdiction at Old Point and that the decision of the board, therefore, should be sustained by the Federal authorities," Maj. Tyler said.

Hosiery Mill Strike Is Set For Tomorrow

Interwoven Will Attempt to Keep Going at Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Expectations of a strike at Interwoven Mills, makers of men's hosiery, here tomorrow morning were openly expressed by both management and labor tonight.

Union spokesmen this afternoon said they had served upon the management, to sign or reject, an agreement demanding recognition of the National agreement, elimination of the present stretch-out system and adjustment of wages to conform to scales elsewhere.

The management posted a notice in its plant, where 1,700 men and women are employed, taking notice of the general strike and adding it would attempt to keep operating for those who desired work. The strike order was set for midnight tonight. The first test will be with the 7 o'clock shift tomorrow morning.

The management's notice said it would undertake to protect those trying to report to work and asked employes so intending to register with their foreman. A union statement this afternoon through Melvin G. Clark, president of Local No. 92, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, appealed to the union members to refrain from work. The statement said arbitration now is impossible.

State Police Added.

The presence of a dozen additional State policemen here was connected unofficially with the situation. Neither mill management nor police officers would comment.

The mill management notice said: "There will be no discrimination for or against members or nonmembers of a group or union. All employes have exactly the same rights and all will be treated with equal fairness. Any employe, whether a member of a union or not a member, who individually, or as a member of any group, association or union, threatens, coerces or intimidates, or otherwise oppresses the rights of any other employe in an attempt to restrict the freedom to work or not to work as such employes may see fit, or who injures the person or property of another employe must not expect to be re-employed by this company. This company believes this strike is contrary to the NRA and that if persisted in will result in a long-continued unemployment."

Chamber Acts.

Efforts were made by the local Chamber of Commerce yesterday to prevent a strike.

The company has branch plants in Berkeley Springs, W. Va.; Hagerstown, Md., and Chambersburg, Pa., employing in all about 5,000 workers. It was stated the present strike order applies only to the parent plant here.

Employes of the Berkeley Woolen Co. here went on strike three months tgo. Physical clashes occurred among strikers and sympathizers on the one hand and State policemen on the other. By agreement after the clashes the mill was closed and has not opened since.

Keep Dan River Guard.

Danville, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Despite abandonment by United Textile Workers of their strike in the Dan River Mills, local authorities today decided to maintain the augmented force and to cover the mill gates.

State Motor Vehicle Commissioner John Q. Rhodes said he would not leave here "just yet," but it is believed some of the 28 State traffic officers will go back to native territory. All mill gates were carefully covered today when the shifts changed. A subsurface fear of raiding squadrons from North Carolina continues.

Plans to transfer police headquarters from the city hall to the armory pending the textile strike are in abeyance.

Foresee Stock Shortage.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Local plants, working in textiles, remain open only because they had stocked up when the first warning of the strike was given, manufacturers declare. If the strike is of long duration, they see no hope of replenishing these supplies, they added.

All of the mercerized yarn used by plants here come from Southern mills, where workers are now on strike. None of the workers here are unionized and there have been no strikes here.

Workers Seek Strength.

Cumberland, Md., Sept 12 (Spl.).—Textile workers of the Lonaconing, Cumberland and Celanese locals at a meeting at the City Hall discussed plans for the strengthening of their organization.

The local at Lonaconing claimed to be 100 per cent in accord with the strike, the textile plant there being closed by a walkout. The General Textile Mill has been closed several months, but the local remains intact.

Representatives of the local formed by employes of the Celanese Corporation of America reported the membership is small and many are unwilling to join the union.

Closed Bank Records Ordered to Be Burned

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan in circuit court yesterday signed an order authorizing Joseph A. Gamble, receiver for the defunct First National Bank of Lonaconing, to destroy by fire all of the books and records of the institution, which went out of business four years ago. The records are to be destroyed when such authority is granted by the Comptroller of the Currency.

Gamble recently filed a petition for the order, citing that it was advisable to destroy the records before winding up the affairs of the bank.

Dumping Law Change Sought For Arlington

County Civic Federation Advocates Control by Health Department.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Amendment of the present dumping regulation ordinance to limit operation of burning dumps to trash collected in Arlington County and strengthening of the law in many other respects will be recommended to the county board in a joint report prepared by the legislative and legal action committees of the Arlington County Civic Federation.

The present ordinance having recently been declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court of Appeals, it is the opinion of the committees it would be better to retain it, adding restrictions which are not contradictory.

The committee expressing belief in the necessity of burning trash, from a health standpoint, held that burning of only such trash as is collected in the county should be permitted, barring the continued hauling of trash from Washington. They further believe that even the burning of county-collected trash should be under the strict supervision of the health department.

The amendments would permit importation of waste building materials, soil from excavations and other nonobjectionable materials for reclamation purposes.

Another amendment recommended is that permits be issued to expire automatically at the end of the dumping operation, if this came within a year, or that they expire at the end of a year so the county could refuse renewal if the operation was found unsatisfactory.

Welfare Report Submitted.

The annual report of Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare, submitted to the welfare board at its meeting last night held at the courthouse, shows a total of $9,926.75 expended from the county budget funds, and from donations received from residents of the county there was expended $11,480.57. Money collected officially and unofficially for the support of families amounted to $5,504.63.

The report, which covers the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, shows a total of 565 families, of which 365 were new cases assisted. There were 331 calls made in connection with 17 children and adults on probation and only two children were committed to the State board of public welfare.

There were nine investigations made in connection with lunacy commissions held in the county, and 135 outside inquiries were made for other agencies.

The report for July and August follows:

Home visits, 122; office visits, 93; telephone calls, 96, and reference visits, 22.

For August—Home visits, 70; office visits, 152; telephone calls, 89; reference visits, 26; letters, 13.

Letters written during August in an effort to collect approximately $2,083.55 in unpaid and partially paid pledges to the relief drive resulted in the collection of $276.50.

Funds in the Arlington Trust Co. credited to the Arlington County relief fund as of August 29, 1934, amount to $1,960.68.

The balance in the Arlington Trust Co. credited to the Arlington County Board of Public Welfare as of August 31, 1934, amounts to $840.96.

Band Concert Tonight.

A feature of the annual carnival being sponsored by the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Association at Wilson boulevard and Boliver street in Ballston, will be the band concert tonight by the Clarendon Junior Band under its director, Louis Colangelo.

Final plans for entering a float in the parade at the annual Piedmont Dairy Festival to be held at Manassas, September 28, will be made at a joint meeting tomorrow of the Arlington County Dairy Association and business men. The meeting will be held at the courthouse at 8 p. m.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School at Arlington, will hold its first meeting of the school year tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium.

Wife Says Mate Fled To Join 'Father Divine'

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Jean Goldsmith in a divorce complaint filed today said her husband, Maurice Goldsmith, Los Angeles chiropractor, was more interested in "Father Divine," Negro religious leader, than in his home life.

Charging desertion, Mrs. Goldsmith said her spouse neglected her and their daughter and finally went to New York to join the Negro cult leaders.

'The Coming American Boom'

By Maj. Lawrence L. B. Angas

This is the seventh installment of the book by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British economist, which recently caused a flurry in American financial circles. Although some of the economics expounded will not stand an acid test, The Post is nevertheless publishing the book because it does contain interesting material.

Installment VII.

Now in the last chapter we stressed the beneficial effect on trade of redundancy of money in the pockets and passbooks of the public, even though there might be a time lag between the actual inflation and its industrial after-effects.

As a general rule, as we pointed out, this monetary redundancy usually results "automatically" from a fall in prices and in the volume of trade, without the total volume of bank money being increased.

Monetary redundancy among the public, in the form of an intentional expansion of their bank deposits, can, however, be deliberately brought about either (1) by the central bank widening the credit basis by increasing the reserves of the other banks, or (2) by the Government borrowing direct from the central bank, and doing the same thing.

Here again the matter is subtle to discuss, but the matter must receive our care and attention if Roosevelt is to be wholly understood.

First Method Explained.

Method (1), as mentioned above, was in fact adopted by England in 1932-33 as follows: If a country has a central bank in which the member banks keep balances which they regard as "cash reserves," as is the case in England, the central bank can inflate the so-called reserves of the member banks either by lending to them direct or by buying securities from them (or from private individuals who bank with them)—for such purchases can be paid for by the central bank by entering up in its own books additional balances in favor of the member banks, which the member banks thereafter regard as additional "reserves."

For instance, a central bank, by purchasing Government securities on the Stock Exchange, largely from people who bank with the member banks, can actually create additional "reserves" for the member banks by crediting the member banks, with which the sellers of the sccurities bank, with a sum of money equal to the value of the purchases. This is simply a bookkeeping entry on the part of the central bank and is purely inflationary in character and effect.

The member banks then credit the seller with this sum, but they find themselves in possession of extra so-called reserves at the central bank; and if it is their custom to impose credit in the ratio of say nine to one on these extra "reserves" the member banks can, if they march in step, inflate their own credit currency or so-called "deposits" (say by purchasing yet additional Government securities on the Stock Exchange or by granting loans) to nine times the extent to which the central bank has expended its credit.

Plan Used in England.

This, in fact, is what happened in England in 1932-33, largely in order to convert the war loan. The Bank of England bought 28,000,000 pounds of investments on the Stock Exchange. The reserves of the clearing banks were increased by this sum; they then increased their investments by 280,000,000 pounds, i. e., ten times, with the result that the deposit currency of the country was increased from 1,670 to 1,950 millions.

Credit inflation thus occurred, and the money of the public was made redundant. Surplus money and balances began to circulate rapidly, and trade revival rapidly ensued. As was pointed out by Mr. McKenna (ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer) at the last meeting of the Midland Bank in January, 1934, revival in England coincided exactly with the above inflation of the deposit currency of the country. Though certain nonmonetary factors, like tariffs, doubtless contributed to revival, there can be no doubt that it was due more to this inflation than to any other single factor.

In America, however, there is no central bank, there are, however, 12 so-called Reserve Banks in which most of the other smaller banks hold their reserve balances, as though there were ten little Englands.

American Operation.

Each of the 12 Reserve Banks holds a stock of gold, or rather gold certificates issued against gold deposited with the United States Treasury, and held very largely on its behalf by the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

What, therefore, the American Administration has done is to reduce the statutory gold content of the legal tender paper dollar by some 40 per cent, and thus raise the dollar value of the gold stock from about $4,000,000,000 to over $7,000,000,000. This has increased the actual or potential cash reserves of the banks as a whole by a similar ratio, which institutions, being by nature profit seekers, were, and are, being stimulated to increase their investments, thus tending not only to lower the market rate of interest, which in itself is a good thing for trade, but also, which is an even better thing, to increase the credit currency in the hands of the public, which redundancy should eventually stimulate trade further.

There is, however, one point to note of considerable practical importance. Although the reserves of the banks may have been increased, either by artificial or natural methods, the banks themselves, owing to their own lack of willingness to invest or owing to lack of willingness among the public to borrow, may not make full use of their extra reserve resources, and may not pile up thereon what is accepted as the normal ratio of bank credit currency. In other words, lack of confidence may prevent the actual credit currency inflation which a prior inflation of bank reserves has made possible.

Second Method Told.

It his here that Method No. 2, i. e., Government borrowing direct from the banks, may be brought in with beneficial results. If the Government deliberately steps in and borrows money from the banks, the loans so raised are purely inflationary in character, since the Government gives in exchange for it merely some form of promise to pay in the future, which at the time "costs" it nothing. If the Government then spends the money so raised among the public it may, despite the general lack of investment confidence among bankers, increase the total credit currency in the hands of the public and thus make their money balances redundant.

Indeed, if Government borrowing from the banks continues sufficiently, the revival itself is not open to doubt—assuming always, and we do assume it, that our currency theory of redundant balances is correct.

The whole process of progressive credit expansion may, in fact, be compared with a man who holds celluloid in front of a fire. The celluloid becomes gradually though invisibly warmer and warmer, but nothing on the surface "appears" to be happening, and superficial observers are, therefore, inclined to exclaim that the experiment as such is having no results. Eventually, however, when the critics least expect it, the flash point is suddenly reached and the celluloid flares up into flames. This is what will happen in America in respect of the process of credit inflation. The demonstrator will then have the pleasure of convincing his critics of the irresistible efficacy of his monetary theory, although to start with they were skeptical and derisive, despite the success of a similar experiment in England.

Says Success Is Certain.

It is, moreover, just as certain that sufficient credit expansion in America will, via redundancy and cheap money, stimulate trade, as that celluloid, if held sufficiently near to a fire, will eventually burst into flames. The time lag before the flash point is reached may temporarily confuse inexperienced onlookers because of their lack of a technical knowledge of the properties; the success of the experiment, however, is not open to practical or theoretical dispute.

This is, in theory and practice, the core of Mr. Roosevelt's recovery policy. And only those who disagree with my monetary theory can doubt the success of his plan. In simple terms the theory is that "if you go on pumping money into people's pockets and pass books the results will eventually be felt in the shops."

Tomorrow: How Government's cheap money policy is increasing velocity of spending and effecting expansion of credit, while expenditures serve as primer for trade.

Gallinger Gains In Patient Roll

3,192 in July and August Shows Increase of 875 Over Similar Period.

Growth in the service given by Gallinger Hospital was indicated by figures made public yesterday by Elwood Streett, director of public welfare, showing 3,192 patients had been admitted to the hospital from July 1 to the end of August. The number admitted in the first two months of the last fiscal year was 2,317, a gain of 875.

The average daily number of patients during August was 712 as compared with 703 in July and 641 in August of last year. During the month patients were given 22,079 days of care as compared with 21,814 in July and 19,886 in August last year, the summary showed.

There were 172 babies born in the hospital during the month. This was exactly the number born there in July and one more than was born in the hospital during August last year.

Deaths numbered 206 as compared with 211 during August last year. Pulmonary tuberculosis caused more deaths than any other illness. Twenty-one deaths were attributed to that disease and 15 were ascribed to prematurity and other birth conditions.

Mt. Rainier Group Sets Church Party

Plans for the largest card party ever given at St. James' Catholic Church, Mount Rainier, have been completed by the Fitzgerald Club and will be held in the church auditorium, Thirty-sixth street and Rhode Island avenue, Saturday at 8 p. m. Class 16—Championship, open to all horses winning first and second in this show; horses to be judged for conformation and suitability of their type.

School Lunches Left Up to City

Hopkins Unable to See Consumers' Official.

Federal Emergency Relief Administration offices yesterday expressed the opinion that the question of whether the District would begin serving needy children with lunches on September 17 or October 1 is a local issue.

Mrs. John J. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers Council, yesterday called on Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, to ask his help in speeding the District program.

She was told by Hopkins' secretary that the administrator had previous engagements which prevented his seeing her. Other officials expressed the view that Hopkins would approve any decision in the matter reached by District relief officials.

Gerard Had Charge.

At Democratic National committee headquarters it was said that no special significance should be attached to the numerous brewers in the list of contributors. Raising of money, it was said, was in charge of James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, and it was explained that he probably had subdivided the work among various groups, such as hotels, brewers and other classifications.

Reports have been in circulation that the Democrats, in view of the prompt action of the Administration in making beer legal, had made a special drive to raise money from those who had benefited by the legislation of the stein and that a quota of $150,000 had been fixed for the brewers. National committee officials said they knew of no such arrangement.

About 350 pupils were passed by the board. Sessions continue today and tomorrow at Thomson School.

Sugar Action Is Restored

Hawaiian Suit Against Wallace Is Dismissed Through Error.

The suit brought by the Hawaiian Sugar Producers Association to enjoin Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from enforcing the provisions of the Jones-Costigan act as it affected the Islands, was restored to good standing in the District Supreme Court yesterday when it was learned a clerical slip-up had led to the entering of a dismissal of the suit by the Motions clerk.

The suit was to have been called Tuesday before Justice Jennings Bailey. Attorneys for both sides, in agreement upon a postponement, went before another Justice, F. Dickinson Letts, with a stipulation in which they asked that the date of the hearing be put off unti October 2.

This was agreed to by Justice Letts, but meanwhile the clerk of Justice Bailey's court called the case. When neither complainants nor defendant answered the case was entered as dismissed.

The hearing now has been set for early October. The Hawaiian producers contend they are entitled to the same consideration in sugar matters as those in the United States.

Westminster Relief Statement Issued

Westminster, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.). A report made yesterday by Miss Bonnie M. Custenborder, director of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, revealed that 54 children and 41 families are receiving relief through the organization at the present time.

Family relief consists of 19 aged persons, 13 unemployed and 9 cases presenting social problems of various kinds. It was stated that employment had been furnished 28 persons during the past four months, and, according to Miss Custenborder, all persons able to work can obtain employment, owing to local construction projects and seasonal canning operations and farm activity.

Fruits Of Careless Planning.

The suggestion that a traffic tunnel be constructed under the Ellipse to relieve the congestion resulting from a concentration of Government buildings in the Triangle area is especially interesting because it comes from an expert of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Such a costly project would not now be under discussion if Congress had been cognizant of the traffic problem in this neighborhood when development of the Triangle was authorized. Now special means of relieving congestion seem to be inevitable.

Thousands of Federal employes will be concentrated in a relatively small area south of Pennsylvania avenue when this section is fully developed. Nearly all of them are required to report for duty at 9 a. m. and conclude their day's work at 4:30 p. m. A considerable percentage of them drive automobiles between their homes and offices. Yet no provision has been made for parking these cars. Many use street cars and buses; but no special line has been installed to serve them. With such gross neglect in rebuilding this important section, it is not surprising that the Capital City is afflicted with traffic snarls.

Harland Bartholomew's sharp criticism is fully justified. He thinks that the Government is obligated to finance, at least in part, some means of mitigating the results of its careless planning. If this is the attitude of the entire Park and Planning Commission, it may be an important factor in securing new facilities for the Triangle area and in avoiding blunders of this kind in the development of future groups of buildings.

The lessons involved are immediately applicable to the Northwest Rectangle which is to be developed west of Seventeenth street and adjacent to Potomac Park. Only through the exercise of foresight in laying original plans can costly projects to relieve traffic congestion be avoided.

"Probably Showers."

Trusting citizens went to their offices and flocked to the shopping district with neither umbrellas nor boots. Such a mild warning could scarcely be taken seriously. It might rain, and again it might not. Anyway, the weather-man frequently misses the mark.

Then came the deluge—nearly four inches of rain—more than a month's normal supply at this time of year. Streets were flooded; automobiles were swamped; basements suddenly became swimming pools, with light pieces of furniture and sundry household goods doing most of the swimming; residents in some sections fled from their homes fearing their children might drown. The good folks of Washington wouldn't have been prepared for such a soaking if the weather-man had predicted a deluge. But when they refer back to his nonchalant "Probably showers," a certain degree of irritation seems justified.

There are several theories as to the cause of this downpour. One is that Mother Nature sought to vindicate Judge Letts by making the Takoma Park referendum impracticable as well as illegal. Another is that the same mythical director of mundane phenomena, having Republican leanings, was weeping over the Maine election. These are obviously facetious, however, not to say trivial. Our theory is that the elements became peeved over the weather-man's timid interpretation of their threats and cut loose to show him what's what.

Scientific Calm.

The British Association for the Advancement of Science is one of the greatest, and generally one of the most dignified, of learned societies. In both membership and influence it is mighty. Its traditions are venerable and its manners have always heretofore been impeccable.

But at its session in Aberdeen on Wednesday it undertook to discuss the ancient question of whether the lower animals can think—whether their behavior is really only "a mechanical response to outside stimuli." And at the end of two hours the behavior of these upper animals was not greatly elevated above the basement.

Dr. J. B. Bierens de Haan, of Amsterdam University, and Prof. William McDougall, of our own Drake University, were all for the rationality of even the ameobae and thought that the fundamental error of Freudism lay in a neglect to study the mentality—if so it may be called—of creatures nominally below man. Drs. Solly Zuckerman, of Oxford, and H. O. Bull, of Newcastle, responded in terms which recalled that scientific society immortalized by Bret Harte's "Truthful James." Of course, no decision was approached, but according to the New York Times, the gleeful "audience of biologists and psychologists cheered the wranglers on by clapping hands and stamping feet as if the discussion were a prize fight."

Well, after all, the sports writers call pugilism a science. Perhaps these scientists at Aberdeen merely took a leaf from the books of Primo Carnera and Max Baer. Some years ago a trivial book called "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" gained wide popularity. The present state of the human race in general—from the electorate of Louisiana to these squabblers at Aberdeen—makes it appear that the time has arrived for a volume on "Why We Don't Behave Like Human Beings." But then it might be argued in rebuttal that, anyhow, the so-called brutes never worry over why they do not behave like mankind.

A Timely Warning.

Nationalization of banking has long been a theme for academic theorizing. But today the subject is being soberly, indeed apprehensively, discussed by bankers and practical business men who think that the system of private banking as it now exists in the United States, is in immediate jeopardy. Striking evidence of this changed attitude toward the question is found in an address delivered yesterday by James P. Warburg before the Financial Advertisers Association at Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Warburg asserts that the private banking system in the United States is on trial for its life and that a decision which may seal its fate will probably be reached during the coming winter. He then proceeds to sum up the familiar charges brought against the country's private banking system by those who allege that it has proved inadequate and that the Government must consequently step into the breach.

Mr. Warburg does not deny that our private banking system failed to anticipate and to meet the needs of the recent emergency. On the contrary, he freely concedes the defects of a private banking organization consisting of 49 different systems, operating under different banking laws, with no uniformity of inspection or regulation. "What failed to stand up under the strain of the recent depression," he says, "was not a system but a hotch-potch of hybrid remnants of various old systems, incompletely and loosely knit together by an unfinished attempt to build up a system by means of the Federal Reserve mechanism."

This system was woefully ineffective under the best of conditions and was foredoomed to break under such an extraordinary strain as that which followed the speculative collapse of the late twenties. Thorough banking reform that would substitute a unified, centrally supervised system for our present heterogeneous, uncoordinated one does not, however, necessitate impairment of the private character of our banking organization. On the contrary, it offers the most feasible alternative to the kind of so-called reform which would bring the banking system under the control of Government officials and open up opportunities for serious political abuse in the extension of credit.

"Can you picture what business would be like," Mr. Warburg asks, "if banks were run by political appointees, who obtained their jobs under the spoils system?" The question is easily answered: the pressure to grant or to withhold loans for political reasons would be productive of abuses beside which the mistakes and miscalculations of private bankers would pale into insignificance. Moreover, even granting a high degree of conscientiousness and intelligence on the part of the political appointees of a nationalized banking system, the change would have other far-reaching undesirable implications. As Mr. Warburg points out, Government control of credit would mean Government control of prices and production—in other words, the end of individualistic democracy and of that personal freedom which we associate with democratic institutions.

Thus he sounds a timely warning, coupling it with sound advice: (1) to bring our banking laws into "conformity with the requirements of present day economic life; (2) to take steps to raise the standards of the banking profession; and (3) to give the public a better understanding of the nature of banking operations. A campaign of education conducted by trained bankers is greatly needed to protect the uninformed public against the specious popular appeals of those who want to substitute government-owned and operated banks for our privately owned banking system.

Licensing German Trade.

In a speech delivered at the opening of the Leipzig autumn fair, Dr. Schacht, president of the Reichsbank and now head of the Ministry of Economy, stated that the campaign to free Germany from dependence upon foreign raw materials would be continued. At that time, he also indicated that changes were impending in the methods of paying for imports, as efforts to control them by rigid rationing of foreign exchange had broken down.

The abolition of exchange rationing, foreshadowed in the Leipzig address, has now been put into effect, according to a dispatch from Germany. The new economic policy, officially announced by Dr. Schacht, provides, however, for even more rigid methods of control over importations than those which are to be superseded. In the future all imports must be licensed, and, as a result, the Government will have virtually complete control over the country's foreign trade. It will determine what, how much, and where Germany may buy abroad. Furthermore, political as well as commercial considerations will affect the character of the buying. Every endeavor will likewise be made to emancipate the country from dependence upon foreign sources of supply.

Although the extreme demands of the advocates of self-sufficiency are in the nature of official propaganda, which is discounted to some extent, it is obvious that the methods now being followed are calculated to cause a progressive shrinkage of Germany's foreign trade. The latest announcement, therefore, will undoubtedly strengthen the apprehensions of those who, like George P. Auld, former accountant general of the Reparations Commission, fear that the German Government is preparing the way for repudiation of all foreign long-term and medium-term debts.

Certainly, whatever the intentions of public officials may be, payment can not be made unless the foreign exchange to meet external debt payments is provided by sales of goods to foreigners. Unfortunately, the announced intention of rendering the country increasingly independent of foreign supplies means a concomitant decline in exports, which would have to be expanded if Germany is to meet her external obligations in the years ahead.

Recasting The NRA.

Reorganization plans for the National Recovery Administration, as they are vaguely outlined in dispatches from Hyde Park, are apparently intended to overcome outstanding objections raised by critics of the present set-up. Even though the new outline is rather obscure, it is evident that the NRA is undergoing a metamorphosis. No doubt the President is trying to work out a permanent plan that will meet with approval in Congress next winter.

One of the weakest points of the recovery organization is its compliance division. Widespread violation of the codes is frequently reported. In those cases where the NRA has attempted to discipline industrial concerns for failure to comply with code regulations complicated situations have been encountered. Apparently some of the settlements negotiated have caused disagreement within the NRA. An effort is now being made to enforce code regulations through the courts. In short, enforcement of the codes and adjudication of disputes arising under them is in a state of confusion. The plan to create a judicial department, with jurisdiction over code disputes and altercations arising out of code enforcement, is obviously intended to correct this weakness.

Likewise a policy-forming group is needed to steer the NRA through the welter of conflicting ideas in which its present program is bogged. In some respects the Recovery Administration has encouraged industrial self-regulation. But in other recent cases, executive orders have taken precedence over agreements arrived at by negotiations among the interested parties. In which direction is the NRA moving? The policy-forming group will have a most difficult task, complicated by the ambiguities of the Recovery Act and the uncertainty as to what will be the attitude of the Congress which will assemble in January.

It is not yet clear just how the proposed executive, legislative and judicial departments of the NRA would function. This plan is obviously patterned after the Federal Government. But the purpose of thus dividing the powers of government was to provide a system of checks and balances—safeguards against tyranny and usurpation of power. With all of its virtues as an instrument of representative government, this system is cumbersome and often results in a deadlock between the Executive and the Legislature, with consequent inaction and confusion.

What steps will be taken to avoid such contingencies under the proposed new set-up within the NRA? Differences of opinion are known to exist in the present organization. In fact, the movement toward reorganization seems to have arisen from the divergent views of officials. It is very doubtful whether the present confusion of purpose and administration can be eliminated by a shifting of personnel into new departments.

From the very nature of the NRA a clear definition of its policy is most difficult. But unless its efforts can be given positive and consistent direction, such as to enlist the cooperation of industry and labor, there seems to be no alternative to a steady decline in its influence.

Pocahontas Once Again.

In the Virginia Magazine of History and Biography, the Rev. Arthur Gray, of West Point, tells of his long search for the exact spot where Pocahontas rescued Capt. John Smith from the bloodthirsty Indians. As he points out, local traditions, most of them apocryphal, have placed this spot variously on the banks of the James, the Piankatank, and even the Rappahannock. Smith himself was certain it was on the York River. In fact, he described the spot well, and the West Point cleric, who devotes his spare time to assiduous antiquarian research, believes he has found the very place where the most romantic episode of our early history took place.

It is, according to Mr. Gray, who buttresses his arguments with considerable strength, on Purtan Bay. Capt. Smith, telling of the place, said that he and his captors "landed amongst a many of creekes, over which they were to pass such poor bridges, onely made of a few cratches thrust in the ose, and three or four poles laid on them, and at the end of them the like tyed together onely with barke of trees." The cratches and the poles have long since disintegrated, but the "ose" into which they undoubtedly crumbled and rotted is still there.

Purtan Bay is 12 miles below West Point on the Gloucester side of the York River, just where Smith said he was taken. It has successively been called, during 300 or more years, Poetan, Portan, Purton and Purtan Bay. On the highland above was Powhatan's village, where Smith was carried prisoner over the treacherous bridges previously described. This was called Werowocomico, or chief's residence. In short, Purton seems to fit Smith's description. There are a number of creeks there now, running through a broad marsh, or "ose."

Mr. Gray might be right. He seems sure of himself and has a reputation for antiquarian accuracy and ability. But we venture that other redoubtable researchers will soon arise to defend the claims Timberneck, Shelly and Rosewell, each one of which asserts that Pocahontas came to Smith's rescue in its confines.

Does it really matter where the romantic epidsode took place? After all it is the legend that counts, and we have only Capt. Smith's word to prove that it is anything more than a fanciful story.

Don't worry about what people may think of you. They so rarely do.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"Blood and Sand."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on bull-fighting came as a great surprise to me—I was delighted with it. I have seen many bull-fights and I know something about them, and apparently the writers who object to your editorial can not say the same.

Bull-fighting is both a sport and an art and may be enjoyed as both by people who are neither "depraved" nor "lacking normal sensibilities." To become a matador—toreador, by the way, is not a Spanish word—takes years of training. And to speak of the onlookers as "stupid or lazy" is ridiculous. In Spain, particularly in the south, every onlooker considers himself a potential matador. He knows each pass and how it should be made; he knows how the banderillos should be placed, and he knows how the bull should be killed; and, if the matador fails in any way at any of these points he, the onlooker, tells him about it right then and there. It is not uncommon for a young man to jump into the arena and undertake to make a few passes himself, using his coat as a capa.

However, I do not "condone" bull-fighting—it is not required that I do so. But I insist that each one has his or her right to enjoy whatever sport he chooses.

Personally, I can not understand anyone wanting to shoot deer, unless he needed food, nor do I thrill to the idea of bands of beaters driving up pheasants to be shot for pleasure, but many of my friends do, and that is their own affair. I do not consider them either "depraved" or "lacking in normal sensibilities."

There is a cruelty in bull-fighting, but it is rank sentimentality to worry so about the bull—as anyone who has seen a fighting bull will agree. Also, a common bull goes to the slaughterhouse without any glory, so that in the end there is little difference. Incidentally, darts are no longer used and I don't think "spears" ever were. Banderillos are not "spears."

In any case, I shall continue to enjoy whatever bull-fights I may and also I shall feel constrained to listen politely when my acquaintances and friends discuss their shooting and hunting exploits, and shall continue to feel that "de gustibus non est disputandum."

"Curse of Price Cutter."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Robert Quillen, in an article in The Washington Post a short time ago, truly stated, "The curse of America is the price cutter." For his own selfish ends he lulls the public into the idea that he saves them money. In the meantime he is forcing his competitors either out of business or to meet the prices he sets. Those and their clerical help have to hunt other fields, and as a result that of labor becomes overloaded with a class that must compete with them. They and theirs must also eat, and will offer their services far below a standard rate—a lesson they have learned from the price cutter who made them lose their job. Sell for less and you will get the trade; work for less and you will get the job.

The piece of paper stamped "One Dollar" is not money in itself—it is a representation of an effort or effect to facilitate an equitable exchange. All elements in the transfer have been considered until the price cutter opens up. He will tell you that a dollar is worth 65 cents to him. Very pleasant, if you think that piece of paper one passes in is the real dollar, but not so good when one now is requested to do a dollars' worth of work and get but 65 cents for it. The work done was worth a real dollar, but the price cutter standardized the value of it. Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. So today we have financial unrest, millions out of work, millions on a Government dole, billions of paper, but not a 100-cent dollar. FRED HAFELFINGER.

A Fine Distinction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with approval Mr. Grover Ayers' letter in praise of The Post, in the issue of September 8, but offer one criticism—the editorial department does not always consult the legal department. Anent Mr. Hoover's "Challenge to Liberty" you say, in the issue of September 5: "It sounds well to say that 'liberty is an endowment from the Creator to every individual man or woman upon which no power, whether economic or political, can encroach, and not even the Government may deny.' But every jail throughout the land refutes the validity of the assertion."

With the Declaration of Independence proclaiming that man is endowed by the Creator with the inalienable right to liberty, and the Constitution declaring that it is ordained and established "to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity," I can not believe that Congress and the legislatures of all the States have violated the spirit of these two great documents in imposing imprisonment for crime. Maybe imprisonment for crime is not an encroachment upon liberty. CRITICAL.

Washington, Sept. 8.

As Others See It.

Relief—an Unruly Giant

The dangers of Governmental almsgiving on an unprecedented scale become daily more apparent. In the United States today no one questions the desire of citizens to alleviate suffering and prevent starvation. Yet the difficulty of doing so without encouraging corruption and pauperism is being illustrated on every hand. In New York City alone, William Hodson, Commissioner of Public Welfare, has just declared that probably 5,000 persons on the relief rolls are impostors.

But Mr. Hodson's estimate of impostors is only 2 per cent of the 400,000 families on relief in New York. And right here is the gravest danger—the wholesale scope of Governmental almoning. Harry F. Hopkins, the Federal Relief Administrator, believes 16,000,000 Americans are now drawing aid from the Government. Frauds may run to only 2 per cent, but what is the percentage of conscious and unconscious pauperism? Who can measure the subtle sapping of individual independence and initiative that is operating in this situation?

Relief has come to be regarded as a right. Perhaps it is. Our civilization should have reached a point where collective responsibility and cooperative effort can save helpless and blameless victims of the economic system from its most extreme cruelties. But when the saving has to be done through political agencies it is well to recognize the dangers. There is not only the effect on recipients of Federal alms; there is the effect on democratic government.

Threats of "strikes" by unions of workers "employed" by the Emergency Relief Administration—unions organized incidentally under the provisions of the recovery act—and threats of a march on Washington to demand higher "wages" are signs of the kind of pressure to which Government may be subjected. And now there is the question of Federal relief funds taking the place of union strike funds in the textile walkout. Mr. Hopkins has stated that the Government will neither subsidize nor break a strike, but that workers would not be barred from relief because they were out on strike.

For the Government this position may be almost unavoidable; it would be accused of strike breaking were it to discriminate. And it may be found that some employers involved in strikes are themselves getting loans from the Government. Moreover, certain industries have always relied on community charity to supplement inadequate or seasonal wages, thus in effect subsidizing dividends.

Indeed industries which have sought special favors from Government have helped to teach workers to do the same. And unions are likely to have more votes than employers. There can be little objection to relief carefully provided out of a humane desire to prevent suffering. But there is great objection to Federal alms giving motivated either by the hope of obtaining votes or preventing violence.

It is sometimes said that America must choose between relief and revolution. If that is true the revolution is already under way. For if relief is granted under threat of violence the chief purpose of violence is accomplished. Government is coerced. There have been few open threats of violence if relief was not provided, but Mr. Hopkins' statement that giving aid to the unemployed without discrimination has helped preserve order is plain warning as to how the situation looks to those close to it.

Much of the present relief work is writing a chapter of which Americans may well be proud. But never before has the Government assumed such complete responsibility for the welfare of the individual. Never before was there such need for the individual to resist both the insidious influence of alms offered to himself and the political pressure for alms demanded by others.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

Inconsistencies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the Government has considered helping to finance the textile strike was stated in press stories emanating from Washington. Strike leaders assert that at various strike centers in different parts of the country the FERA has been feeding strikers and will doubtless feed the textile strikers, thus giving very substantial aid in the financing of this strike.

So we have the strange spectacle of the Administration, which has promised to reduce unemployment, indirectly encouraging the employed to strike and remain idle by feeding the strikers. Furthermore, although it is well known that strikes retard recovery, strikes are being fomented by section 7 (a) of the NRA code and by an official attitude that leads labor to presume it can dominate capital.

As a crowning inconsistency, the NRA—supposed to raise wages—and the AAA—supposed to create a better market for the products of labor, are increasing the cost of living to make labor strike for higher wages which nobody can afford to pay.

Are we any better off than we were last year?

Kings At The Cure

Postoffice, Thursday.

THE Column's Temporary European Correspondent has been in Vichy for the past few weeks—Vichy, where some of the vichy comes from, and where all Europe goes, at one time or another, to drink the rest of it and "take the cure." It appears, also, that several other distinguished personages have recently been there, among them several other distinguished American personages, as you shall presently see.

* * *

For the Column's Temporary European Correspondent's daughter accompanied her mother to Vichy, and this is what that twelve-year-old distinguished personage communicates to us:

"We are in Vichy now at the Hotel Radio, the hotel served as hospital to the United States Army in the world war. Just now Mr. McAdoo and a friend, a Mr. Williame Woodward, were here taking the cure. I suppose it is to get thin 'cause Mr. McAdoo's trousers go this way:

"I mean the flaps at their back separate because he's got fat. And Mr. Bernard Baruch left just before we arrived, but he hasn't.

"The other day we paid our respecs to the Metropolitan Staphane"—Orthodox Archbishop of Bulgaria and one of the best-trusted advisers of King Boris—"and he said the whole work was pretty sick and had better look out or it would get a lot si ker, and he was going to say so at that big world's religious conference he is going to in Stockholm.

"Nearly everything you do here you can't do unless M. Loiseau arranges for you to do it of which Mother has surely spocken to you."

* * *

Well, the parent indicated has indeed spocken of M. Loiseau—and all of you who are going to Vichy this autumn had better get letters of introduction to him. He appears to be a personage even more important than his most important guests.

Thus, anyhow, writes the European Correspondent:

"Here, to the main offices of the Compagnie Fermiere, which controls all things thermal—under franchise from the French Government—until something like 1970, there flows daily a steady stream of visitors. One and all, big and little, they must write their wants and their names upon a card. Then they have to wait their turns in an antechamber which is never empty.

"In the lapels of these men you see the ribbon of almost every decoration in Europe. On the cards of the women a coronet is a commonplace. And there are innumerable liver-ruined African missionaries and British-Indian officers.

"'All sorts and conditions of men:' while we too waited we noticed especially an Oriental. He was advanced in years, but obviously had been born to dignity. He was slim, with a finely carved, calm face, dark, highly intellectual, and, whereas he had an aloof air and an unemotional face, his eyes were smiling. His long hair he wore knotted at the back of his finely shaped head, over which was a scarf. But he wore Occidental trousers well-creased, brown shoes fitting his slim feet neatly, and although his black jacket was of Asiatic cut, and although the gold spheres which were its buttons could be duplicated nowhere outside of Asia, his cufflinks were entirely European, and he carried a silver case for his gold-rimmed spectacles.

"Well, then, there was that mixed company. Everybody is treated with the utmost courtesy, yet everybody is treated alike. And everybody—prince, statesman, army-officer and missionary and the wives of them all—comes to make some petition to M. Loiseau, the thermal company's Chef du Service Exterieur.

"'All to seek favors,' he sighed when we, in our turn, were shown into his office. 'What do they not want? Reductions in prices—tickets to the theater—everything.'

"'Might one inquire who was the Oriental?'

"'Ah, now,' said M. Loiseau, 'there is indeed a story. That gentleman is—or I should say was—an emperor.

"'More than this, madame,' continued M. Loiseau; 'he was one of the youngest of the few emperors of modern times, for he became an emperor at the tender age of four. And more than even that, madame, he ceased to be an emperor when he was eight years old.

"'Ah, yes,' said M. Loiseau; 'he was the Emperor of Annam!

* * *

"'He reigned for that so brief time under the regency of an uncle. This uncle and some fellow-malcontents decided to revolt against the French influence. A group of our officers were invited to the palace—where they were to be murdered. However, the plot was discovered in time. The uncle was put to death, but the little boy—why, he was only a baby!—he was merely dispossessed and sent to Algiers.

"'There he grew up, overseen while he was educated. He developed fine artistic abilities, loved art and letters. And see how well the mercy of France was justified! He married the daughter of a Frenchman of consequence; politically correct, he has a son at St. Cyr, our West Point; he has a daughter who is a brilliant engineer; he has a splendid property in Perigord—and he comes yearly to Vichy!'.

"Thus M. Loiseau concluded," writes our Correspondent; "but," she herself concludes, "don't cable me for the Emperor's name, because I am just leaving here. Get it out of the Encyclopedia Britannica."

* * *

We are glad to publish this romantic story. But we won't get its hero's name out of the Encyclopedia Britannica. That informative work's article on Annam ceases and terminates with 1801. It refers us to its article on Indo-China and gracefully sidesteps all definite account of Annam's rulers.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

The Agitator Who Made Good!

MOSCOW—I suppose there is no more impressive spot in the world than the tomb of Lenin, the father of modern Russia.

BARGERON

It is 5 o'clock or visiting time. An endless queue of Russians is passing slowly through. Our Intourist guide, immediately we arrive, says "Intourist" to one of the additional guards handling the crowd, and he quickly holds up his hand to stop the line and let us through. In the class society of the United States there would have been catcalls and jeers and questions of "Hey, how do you get that way?" Among the classless Russians there is no complaint or comment at all.

We go downstairs to several feet below the ground and past numbers of OGPU men who, as our Secret Service men insist with people approaching the President, demand that we keep our hands down beside our hips. There he is in the death chamber lying exposed in a glass-incased chamber, lying with his head and shoulders slightly hoisted as the Russians sleep. A rigidly erect soldier stands at his head and another at his feet looking squarely into his face. His stature seems to have dwindled. The guide later says this is so.

When we have had a thorough look at him we involuntarily study the Russians. They stare at him fixedly immediately he comes into view until they reluctantly finish the circle. It is a question whether they are awed by him or the majesty of death. They are, however, awed. They can not for a second take their faces off of him, his red chin whiskers and his bald head, his slender, pointed fingers, the red robe which lies over the lower part of him. They move as if in a trance.

The mind goes back to the Lenin of 1917, the Lenin who from the security of the United States and Switzerland had written of his discontent, had urged his fellow countrymen to arise and throw off the yoke, who in fiery language and with fiery pen had told what he would do if given the chance, and who when the czaristic government finally broke down from the war, from inefficiency, from the weakness of the czar, the German leanings of the czarina and the machinations of the monk Rasputin, had to be pushed into the country by the Germans to do anything.

The mind goes back, too, to those fateful days of the provisional government when the government seemed to be just begging for some one to step up and take it over, when the provisional leader, Kerensky, seemed not to know what to do, and Lenin and his fiery colleagues most reluctant to make a move. Then Lenin stepped forward, as if finally summoning enough courage, and once he got it and knowing, or at least assuming, it was his death if he let go, fought with every ounce of strength in his frail body to maintain his hold. And thus became one of the world's great men. What a chapter in history the whole thing makes!

And what has become of Trotsky, another refugee at the time, who came running back for the great opportunity and who started out so ambitiously with Lenin to reform the world? Ah, he is in banishment, a disgruntled old man. He had his chance with Lenin, but could not hold on with Stalin. He can only sit on the sidelines now and kibitz Stalin and his crowd, while they go on with their experiment that has attracted the whole world. It makes one feel very sad.

Japan Regains 1929 World Trade Level

Gold Embargo, Yen Depreciation Aids Nation in Establishing Balance; Modernization Is Aid to Industry and Agriculture.

The Post presents herewith two articles by David Wills, noted British economist and journalist, who has been traveling throughout the Orient. The first discusses the industrial situation in Japan. The second, which will appear here tomorrow, is from Keru, and goes into the agricultural question.

By David Wills
(Special Correspondent of The Post.)

After two weeks of rain across the Pacific, we arrive at Yokohama to find the hot season postponed indefinitely, and the rain still in possession. From the harbor entrance, Yokohama might be any modern port in any country; its panorama of wharves and sheds, factories and office buildings has nothing immediately Japanese about it, and in rain a mushroom crop of black umbrellas makes it still more like an English port in traditional weather, or a California in phenomenal. But as you leave the boat a thousand evidences contradict this impression: kimonos are almost universal; footgear is still wooden geta; there are even a few rikishas making losing competition with 1934 Ford and Chevrolet taxis. Within a stone's throw of a 10-story department store you see a handloom weaver, or a flour mill such as you will find grinding corn for moonshiners in the Great Smoky Mountains.

On the way to Tokyo by express electric trains you pass all the evidence of a great industrialization side by side with that of a domestic and handicraft economy; arrived in Tokyo you find yourself in the third largest city in the world, and as you pass through the wide streets and fine office centers, or down the shopping streets with more electric lights and neon signs than New York; as you risk your life in what must be the most reckless taxis in any country; as you sit at the Takaratzuka Review and see Roxy made to look like a provincial cinema with a one-man band, you are almost persuaded that Japan has successfully conjured the rabbit out of the hat, and in 77 years produced a modern country with all the advantages of an industrial civilization.

But you must no more over-estimate Japan than under-estimate; with patience you overcome the diffidence of some Japanese, and the over-patriotism of others with regard to their affairs, and you try to get a fair impression of the economic organization of the country. Whereas in England only about 7 per cent of the employed population is engaged in agricultural and fishing pursuits, and in the United States about 22 per cent, in Japan over 50 per cent are so employed. The country is therefore predominantly agricultural.

Small Plants Dominate In Industrial Scheme.

Of the 11,000,000 persons engaged in manufacture, more than 9,000,000 are employed in concerns with less than five employes. Of those working for concerns with five and more employes over 51 per cent are in textiles; the next largest group of industries, that of machines and tool manufacturers, ship builders, &c., employ about 10 per cent, and the next largest individual industry, brewing, employs 4.6 per cent. It is clear that the vast majority of the organizations are on a very small scale; and that the large scale organizations are very concentrated.

The industrialization of the older countries was a matter of slow growth, without much deliberate policy behind it, but in Japan right from the Restoration in 1868 industrialization has been pursued vigorously with every possible government assistance. The temper of Japanese government has been aristocratic and paternal rather than democratic, and at no time was it necessary for the government to fight strong opposition to its power to control industry, particularly since its main concern has been to promote rather than to regulate. It is only recently, for instance, that a law has been passed for the control of public utilities and their rates, and the degree of control is far less than in America.

Under the stimulus of the World War Japanese industrial production rose from a value of 1,300,000,000 yen in 1914, to 6,470,000,000 yen in 1919, and reached a peak of 7,415,000,000 yen in 1929. From 1921 to 1930 Japanese prices were slowly falling, and in January, 1930, the gold embargo which had been imposed in 1917 was lifted in the hope that depression would be avoided.

Exports Aid Recovery Of Nation's Industries.

But Japan sank lower into the slump with the rest of the world and gold reserves dropped from the 1922 peak of over 2,000,000,000 yen to 450,000,000 yen. The gold embargo was reintroduced in 1931, the value of the yen in external exchange depreciated, and in July 1934, it is reported that industrial activity is near the 1929 figures and that Japan's industrial recovery is complete.

If attention is concentrated on the large industries producing to a great extent for export, this opinion is justified. In cotton textiles the May export was the highest in the history of the industry, and although cotton mills are working nominally at only 72.4 per cent of capacity, it is not expected that the sealed spindles will ever be used again, since they are older spindles which have been replaced by new, and the latter are working at near full capacity. Rayon exports outdo all precedents in rapidity of increase, and rayon companies are making fabulous profits which to a large extent are being turned back into the industry. In woolen textiles present production is little more than home demand, but the exports are increasing rapidly, and the existing suppliers of world markets would do well to read the writing on the wall; to repeat the error of Lancashire and stay content with a superior skill gained through generations of experience would be to write the epitaph on a suicide's grave.

Under subsidy from the government old shipping vessels are being scrapped and replaced by a smaller tonnage of new motor equipped vessels. Fishing boats are being fitted with Diesel engines, even down to the six-footers, and the vast majority of the engines are manufactured in Japan; imports have practically ceased.

Government Aid Is Spur To Smaller Industries.

In many of the smaller industries, which cover by far the largest part of the productive field, there is considered to be unintelligent management, excessive competition, and a great lack of mutual helpfulness, to the detriment of the quality of the product and the stability of finances. There has been of late years a determined effort on the part of the government to promote rationalization schemes by the formation of trade associations, which have the duty to increase the efficiency of manufacture within individual firms, and the power to control the market on the supply side, allot production quotas and compel observance by all members of the industry, whether inside the association or not.

These organizations cover not only manufacturing firms, but also commercial and retail traders. At the present time many of these small concerns are finding a demand for their products abroad, yet have no experience of export trade. For their assistance the government has aided in the formation of trade associations and export guilds.

In internal markets production is increasing in a number of heavy industries, partly under the stimulus of government expenditures for army and navy, but although the budget for 1933-1934 was unbalanced to the extent of nearly 900,000,000 yen, mainly on account of these defense expenditures, there has been practically no inflation of the currency, since the bonds issued for the deficit were absorbed by the public through the market operations of the Bank of Japan, and the result has been mainly to increase bank deposits and bank holdings of securities, and develop a cheap money position without, as yet, much stimulation of productive employment.

Turkey Show Planned For Roanoke Meeting

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—A turkey show sponsored by the Virginia State Turkey Growers Association will be held in connection with the Virginia Poultry Federation convention scheduled at Hotel Roanoke on November 1 and 2, it is announced by the local Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber has appointed Leslie A. Kimble chairman of its conventions committee. Other members are M. Carl Richards, George C. Davis, A. B. Moody, Joseph Davidson, Lloyd M. Engleby, K. R. Hyde, William Lukens and G. W. Miller.

Abell to Direct Relief Work.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—B. Kennedy Abell has been appointed in charge of the Federal relief work for St. Marys County with the local headquarters here, replacing Miss Miriam McCaffery, who went to the main office in Hyattsville.

Rough Stuff for Old Smoothies

MOST of last year's haberdashery now belongs to the ages, having been given to the poor in the Spring or devoured by hungry moths during the Summer. What's left is dowdy . . . so as usual, there will have to be new clothes this Fall.

This year, it's rough stuff if you want to be a smoothie. Lovely coarse fabrics, bright plaids, dashing swagger coats of entrancing new weaves. Entirely new designs in footwear . . . interesting new cosmetics . . . furs . . . jewelry and accessories of metal and wood . . . handsome new housefurnishings.

Autumn fashions for men and women . . . and for the home . . . will be described and illustrated in The Post's Special Fashion Supplement . . . tomorrow.

Miss Atkinson, 84, Dies in Maryland

Funeral Rites to Be Held at the Home Today.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Miss Fanny Brent Atkinson, 84, member of a family long resident in Maryland and Virginia, died late yesterday at the home of her nephew, George B. Garrott, near Knoxville, after a long illness.

Miss Atkinson was educated at the Academy of the Visitation, Frederick. During her youth she lived at Hallton, W. Va., and Hagerstown. In later years she lived part of the time with her sister, the late Mrs. Barton Van Buren Garrott, Knoxville, and her brother, George Atkinson, Berryville, Va. Since the death of her brother last spring she had lived with her nephew at Knoxville. She also is survived by a sister, Miss Emma Atkinson.

Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow at 10 a. m., conducted by the Rev. G. G. Sydner, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Charles Town, W. Va. Burial will be in the Lutheran Cemetery, Bolivar, W. Va.

10,816 On Relief Jobs.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Figures showing 10,816 men and women were employed on work relief projects in Virginia during the week ended August 30 were released today by Asher W. Harman, director of the work division of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Still Glancing.

REGRETFULLY, I have to put in shortest compass the qualities of these books which piled up during my vacation. A very few will be set aside for more generous mention later.

THEO. HALL

"Dusk at the Grove," a novel by Samuel Rogers (Little Brown - Atlantic Monthly Press, $2.50). The Atlantic's $10,000 prize novel this year, the first by an American author. The story tells of three generations of home-life at "The Grove," a summer house on the Rhode Island coast, and does it thoughtfully, maturely and memorably. The Atlantic's choice should bring novel contests into far better repute.

• • • •

"Modern Photography: 1934," edited by Geoffrey Holme (The Studio, $4.50). A valuable annual comes forward with the best photographs of the year, handsomely reproduced and with notes and comment. More later.

• • • •

"Hours of Leisure" Booklets, by various authors (The Studio, 35c. each). A remarkable series of instructive and fully illustrated little paperbound pamphlets, each one outlining the practice of a hobby. The titles are The Model Theater; Cut Paper Decoration; Fabric Printing; The Doll's House; Cushion Making, and Radio and Gramophone Cabinets. More about these later.

• • • •

"Industrial Design and the Future," by Geoffrey Holme (The Studio, $7.50). How can we make manufactured products look better? Mr. Holme takes up this problem with 80 pages of text (including questionnaire-answers from the leading industrial designers of the world) and 80 pages of photographs of everything from an evening dress to a Rolls-Royce aeroplane engine. The book calls aloud for more comment, and will get it.

• • • •

"Those Who Perish," a novel by Edward Dahlberg (John Day, $2). An intensely wrought, dazzlingly written story of Nazi sentiment in America and its effect here upon two Jewish men and a Jewish woman. Nothing quite so powerful has appeared on Hitler's racial program.

• • • •

"Goethe and the Jews," a study by Mark Waldman (Putnam, $2.75). A scholarly analysis of the marked Jewish influence upon Germany's greatest poet.

• • • •

"Honor Bound," a romance by Faith Baldwin (Farrar & Rinehart, $2). Can two young people marry successfully without first falling in love? Miss Baldwin turns this moot point into very popular fiction.

• • • •

"Followers in the Way," by H. F. B. Mackay (Macmillan, $1.75). The prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, writes of the lives of some famous Christians from Gaius and Constantine to Sir Thomas More and St. Francis de Sales. Recommended for reading at retreats.

• • • •

"Black God," a story by D. Manners-Sutton (Longmans Green, $2.50). A chilling tale of African superstitions, chiefly about a black named M'Kato, who sat by a river for 20 years and watched the Congo life go on about him until his day came. We'll have more of this later on.

• • • •

"Family Matters," a novel by Louise Platt Hauck (Penn, $2). Ordinary family life put optimistically.

• • • •

"The Web," a mystery by Hugh Brooke (Doubleday-Doran, $2). A pretty horrid old lady, who looks as if butter wouldn't melt in her mouth, weaves everyone into her web. It will give you either the chilblains or the giggles.

• • • •

"Basket for a Fair," a book of poems by Laura Benet (Doubleday-Doran, $1.75). The sister of William Rose, and Stephen Vincent Benet collects her third volume of characteristic lyrics. Lovely as they are, I'll save more notice of them until another time.

• • • •

"The Passing Chapter," by Shane Leslie (Scribner, $2). A totally indefinable book, narrating the informal history, customs, manners, ideas, anecdotes and great names of England between 1918 and 1934—as if Mark Sullivan were stirred into Christopher Morley, and a dash of Havelock Ellis' "Dance of Life" were added.

Mr. Leslie will write about Lady Colfax, famous hostess, who "invited so well in advance that Mr. Balfour was credited with referring her invitation to his executors." Or about English postage stamps, which "are unique in their insufferable pride, for they fail to infrom the world of the country of their origin—foreigners can find out for themselves."

Everything in between he touches upon with a wit and wisdom about as rare in this world as a Chinese ostrich.

Snake Victim Improved After Serum Is Rushed

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Ira Mezick, Clara farmer, is recovering at Peninsula General Hospital here today from the effects of the bite of a copperhead snake. Serum from Philadelphia was rushed to the hospital by special messenger. Physicians said Mezick reacted immediately.

Mezick had missed fowls from his poultry yard and set a trap. Later seeing the trap had been sprung he tried to retrieve what he thought was a weasel and was struck by the copperhead.

The National Gallery

HARRY LLOYD HOPKINS, Federal relief administrator. The fire of social justice burns intensely in the breast of this creator of the CWA wherein anyone willing to work may earn a decent subsistence. A social settlement worker in New York for 20 years, he gave politics a wide berth, wrote pithy and pertinent letters to newspapers and developed a deep human sympathy for victims of the depression. He has spent $1,500,000,000, the greatest amount ever put forth by one man to alleviate suffering. Blond, tall, youthful, with lanky sloping shoulders, his bite is much worse than his bark. Goes on vacations to "get away from you birds," he tells newsmen. Shrewd, an apt phrase-maker, his favorite adjective is "lousy," which he probably uses more than anyone else in the New Deal. His credo: "I admire politicians. For one thing, they're not afraid to stick out their necks and run for office."

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

The Building Won't Stand Without a Foundation

By Robert Quillen

You may not be a church member. You may know little about religion, and care less. But you are interested in the security of your civilization and the future of your children, and thus the cause of the church becomes your cause whether you realize it or not.

Something is happening in the world to threaten everything you hold dear.

Want and suffering and hopelessness have made people sullen and reckless and desperate. They are resentful without knowing the cause of their resentment.

As the Chinese farmer curses the paper-doll god in his field when it fails to bring rain, and the Latin overthrows his government when times are hard, so these other people, hurt by something unseen, turn against every institution that is part of the old order.

Since Christianity ruled when ruin came, it must share the blame for their suffering. God let them be hurt; they are through with Him.

Thus in many lands the victims of war and tyranny and economic exploitation have lost faith in their religion and become the tools of fanatics who would destroy the old civilization.

Mexico and Spain make war on the Catholic Church; Russia has virtually uprooted Christianity, and morality with it; Germany has turned against Christians as against Jews; and here in America it has become the fashion to ridicule religion along with yokels.

Once the Bible was revered in America; now "the Bible belt" is a term of contempt.

This generation is pagan. It knows no higher law than its own will. It feeds its desires. The thing it wishes to do becomes the right thing to do. "Chastity" is made a joke. Few have any capacity for moral indignation.

Do you realize that mankind is inviting ruin?

Two thousand years ago the pagan nations had an established civilization. Compare them today—China and India for example—with the nations built by Christianity. That tells the story.

It is the one hope of mankind, and those who destroy it will deliver the world to pagan rule or red anarchy.

200 Will Attend W.C.T.U. Meet

Moundsville, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The annual Women's Christian Temperance Union State convention will convene in Moundsville October 16, 17 and 18, according to an announcement made by Mrs. W. M. Crouch, Moundsville union president.

All sessions will be conducted at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, with approximately 200 delegates representing unions all over the State present. A banquet will feature one evening, with the National president, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, from National headquarters, Evanston, Ill., as the principal speaker.

Mrs. Ernest Hemson, of Bluefield, State president, will be in charge of all business sessions. Separate meetings of the Young People's Branch, the Loyal Temperance Legion, and other departments are planned. Mrs. W. A. Koenemund, active worker, of Moundsville, and chairman of the committee in charge of the program.

Mrs. M. W. Crouch, Moundsville president, is general chairman and she has appointed the following as heads of the various committees: Mrs. Frank Robert, banquet chairman; Mrs. A. W. Koenemund, program chairman; Mrs. Blanche Pierce, entertainment; Miss Eva Barnete, registration; Mrs. W. A. Shoehian, finance; Dr. Madge I. McCracken, Miss Mattie Stewart, publicity; Mrs. J. L. Bonar, housing; Mrs. Van Parriott, transportation.

Roanoke Catholics Plan 50-Year Fete

Celebration Will Be Held September 23.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Roanoke Catholics are planning a golden jubilee celebration for St. Andrew's Church here on September 23, 50 years from the date the Rev. J. W. Lynch said the first mass on Catholic-owned property in Roanoke.

Former Mayor S. P. Seifert is chairman of the committee arranging for the celebration. Other members are Mrs. Corbin Glass, Mrs. M. A. Lovette, Mrs. Catherine Craddock, Mrs. Jesse German, Mrs. J. O. Clendennon, Mrs. Mary Toland, Miss Mae Zerbee, Mrs. B. J. Carden, M. J. Waters, T. F. Sheehan, J. H. McCaffrey, Joseph J. McCaffrey, Hugh Haley, Joseph W. Murphy, Leo F. Henebry and Joseph D. Hebert.

The first Catholic mass was said here on November 19, 1822, in a Shenandoah Valley railroad car. The railroad later was taken over by the Norfolk & Western. In addition to St. Andrew's, Catholic churches cooperating in the celebration are Our Lady of Nazareth, and the Maronite Rite Church, St. Elias.

G. O. P. Hopkins Would Aid Brother Harry in '36

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 12 (AP).—Dr. L. A. Hopkins, brother of Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, today was victor in the race for the Republican nomination for Pierce County coroner.

Just before the primaries Harry Hopkins twitted his brother, expressing surprise that Dr. Hopkins was running on the Republican ticket. Dr. Hopkins replied today, stating, "I just wanted to be in a position to give Harry a job in 1936."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Epic of the Morro Castle.

(Acting Capt. William F. Warms and 12 men stuck to the Morro Castle until just before she went aground, refusing to quit the ship until an effort to tow her into port had proved futile—News item.)

There was death on the decks about them,
There was doom in the seas below—
They could see death rip through the blazing ship,
But they still were the last to go;
There was fright in salon and cabin,
There was horror from stem to stern,
But the thirteen stayed as if unafraid

II

In the heat that was simply hellish
And the smoke that was foul and blue
They watched others flee to the raging sea,
But elected to see it through;
Through the flare of the flames fast mounting
They were seen on the foredeck high—
Thirteen sailormen, not in terror when

III

As the winds from the coast storm gathered
And the gale fanned the flames anew,
Capt. Warms he stood with his gallant brood—
For he thought it the thing to do;
Though the Morro was doomed and helpless
And her hulk was a ghastly ghost,
There were thirteen there who showed no despair

IV

Through the hell of the night they stuck there
As the skipper, whom death had picked
To command that ship on her last, grim trip
Refused to confess "We're licked!"
To the call of the ships of rescue
There was simply a firm "Not yet!"
They were men indeed of the sturdy breed
That the mothers of men beget.

V

With the last of the living over
And no more on the ship to save,
With a fury rare they fought to spare
The Morro an ocean grave;
A line from the cutter Tampa,
Tense work in the driving rain
With hands that bled in a puddle red
To sever the anchor chain.

VI

At last to a hawser fastened
And then through the murk a path . . .
But the hawser parts ere the Morro starts
And the sea shows a greater wrath;
'Tis folly to labor longer . . .
They rescue the remnant crew—
And our glasses raise with a hymn of praise
To the thirteen who saw it through!

And Won't Cotton to Anybody.

All parties concerned in the textile strike are afraid somebody will pull the wool over their eyes.

Wm. Lyon Phelps

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

William Lyon Phelps. Augustus Thomas.

Augustus Thomas, the famous American dramatist, died on Sunday, August 12, 77 years old.

He wrote 50 plays, but did so many other things that playwriting with him was never a full-time job. His autobiography, which is unintentionally dramatic, reveals a career so filled with varied occupations and interests that it would seem he had as many lives as a cat.

Born in St. Louis in 1857, the son of a physician who was an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, young Augustus at the age of 11 got a job as page boy in the Missouri Legislature. There he learned three things that interested him all his life—the intricacies of politics, the art of public speaking, and the technical details of parliamentary law. He was one of the best after-dinner speakers in America; and I have seen him preside at public meetings, where he was the only one who apparently knew how deliberative assemblies could transact business.

When he was an older boy, he got a bigger and better job as page in the National House of Representatives; there he obtained material for future plays; also plenty of material for developing another talent, that of graphic caricatures with the pencil.

When he was 17, he was clerk in a railroad office, and after six years of this became treasurer of a theater in St. Louis. He was always a practical man, with a good head for business. In later life when successful as a playwright, he said that if he were not writing plays, he would not be writing books; he would be building bridges.

His success as a dramatist began about 1890, just when Bronson Howard was leaving the throne. Clyde Fitch, about eight years younger than Thomas, was even more successful. These three men, Howard, Thomas and Fitch held about the same position in the American theater as that occupied in England by Pienere and Jones. All these men produced well-made plays; but gave way later to men of an entirely new school and different methods.

The best play Thomas ever wrote was "The Witching Hour," with John Mason playing the leading part, this had a great and well-deserved success. In "The Copperhead" Lionel Barrymore made a tremendous hit; and one of Thomas' early farces, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," had a long run.

For some years it seemed as if he had determined to dramatize the man of the United States. "Alabama," "In Mizzoura," "In Illinoy," "Arizona," "Colorado" were some of his better known plays.

The keen intelligence of his mind was matched by the austere integrity of his character. He was full of fun, could tell innumerable amusing stories; but fundamentally he was a serious, thoughtful man, with a deep interest in life.

City Manager Of Alexandria Resigns Office

Wallace Lawrence Will Take Position With Private Concern.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

City Manager Wallace Lawrence of Alexandria, Va., tendered his resignation yesterday as city manager, the office which he has held for the past five years. The resignation will become effective Tuesday, according to his letter, mailed to Mayor E. C. Davison last night.

Mr. Lawrence said yesterday that he had already accepted a position outside of Alexandria with a private concern and he will assume his new duties within a few days after his resignation becomes effective. He came to Alexandria from Salem, Va., where he was city manager.

The City Council will meet Tuesday night to fill the vacancy. It is believed that the council already has some one in mind for the position.

Mr. Lawrence's resignation followed closely the move of Councilman Percy E. Clift, who introduced a resolution at the first regular meeting of the new council Tuesday night asking that he resign. The resolution, tabled for the time being, asked for the resignation by September 30, but, following a long discussion, action on the resolution was postponed.

The Clift resolution is seen by many persons as the first move for a number of changes to be attempted in the city government by the new members of council.

Although a large number of items on the program were considered during the four-hour session of the council, the majority were referred to special committees for report. A motion was adopted instructing the City Manager to give business of the city only to firms complying with the NRA requirements. The report of the street-naming committee, changing the names of 30 streets in the suburban section to eliminate duplications, was adopted.

At the suggestion of Mayor E. C. Davison a committee was appointed to investigate the Alexandria Department of Public Welfare. The committee will be composed of Councilmen L. C. Barley, A. Slater Lamond and Charles L. Burgess. An appropriation of $500 was made to start a campaign to bring industry to Alexandria. The police were granted permission to sell tickets to a police baseball game in Alexandria, on September 19, while in uniform.

Action on requests of residents in the vicinity of Cameron and Patrick streets for a rerouting of through truck traffic was referred to the city manager and a council committee.

A special grand jury of the Corporation Court of Alexandria returned indictments against the following ten persons: Thomas Byrd, 22, colored, charged with attempted criminal assault on a white woman; Edward Pinkett, colored, charged with the murder of a colored woman; James Wells, 17, attempted hold-up and robbery; Leonard Taylor, J. W. Shaver, A. C. Slagle and Lucien Clarke, larceny; Victoria Johnson, felonious assault; John Conkey, housebreaking; James Johnson, housebreaking, and Rozier Lyons, felonious assault. No indictment was returned in the case of Ernest Dixon, charged with felonious assault. Pleas of guilty were entered by James Johnson and Rozier Lyons and each was sentenced to a year and a day, and John Conkey was sentenced to six months.

Mayor E. C. Davison and members of the city council will be guests of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at a luncheon meeting today in the George Mason Hotel. Supt. C. Marshall Finnan of the National Capital Parks and Supt. Charles S. Watson of the Fort Hunt CCC camp will be the guests of honor.

Truck Kills Girl Leaving School

Death of Charlottesville Child Held Accidental.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12 (AP). On the way home from school this afternoon, Juanita Shiflett, 9, of Charlottesville, was struck and fatally injured by a truck driven by Cecil Wade, of Greenwood.

The child was walking along Monticello avenue when hit by the truck, headed in the same direction. She died shortly afterward in University Hospital.

Police investigated and reported the tragedy as "accidental." Wade, a driver for Fox Bros., of Greenwood, was held on technical charges for a hearing tomorrow in police court.

Annapolis Records 605 in Fourth Class

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.). Entry of another member of the new fourth class today at the Naval Academy, believed by the officials to be the last to become a midshipman this year, raised the class to a membership of 605. It is the largest naval class since one formed in 1930.

The large membership, exceeding by more than 50 the estimate of the officials, is caused partly by a high percentage of those passing the mental examinations, but to a large degree because of full exercise by members of Congress of their right to make appointments of candidates.

Mrs. Anton Lang, Jr., Passion Play Magdalene, Simple, Demure, Dramatic, Is to Live Here

Former Klara Mayr Comes From Noted Play Family in Oberammergau.

By Elizabeth Young.

Mrs. Anton Lang, jr.?"

The question lifted on an involuntary note of surprise as it left the interviewer's tongue.

Surely the confronting bit of demure femininity in smart print frock with ash blonde hair folded winglike into a soft knot on the nape of her neck, was not that same woman whose moving portrayal of Mary Magdalene in Oberammergau's 1934 Passion Play excited the acclaim of patrons from two continents.

"But yes. I am 25 already," Mrs. Lang, jr., explained away the visitor's astonishment, dignity and apology blending in her voice; humor and welcome in her sweet blue-green eyes.

Gifted in Languages.

Gifted in languages—and she speaks English fluently—Klara Mayr Lang has a talent for silence—easy, restful, unembarrassed silence. False modesty seems unknown to her, yet none could imagine her competing for place.

She conceded the great honor that had come to her in being chosen a year ago to play the role of Mary Magdalene in Oberammergau's tercentennial presentation of the Passion Play this past summer. Vainly she sought for words with which to tell what the role had meant to her.

"It is a beautiful part. I can't explain. The Magdalene's conversion. Her sorrow; her joy; when she bathes the feet of Christ . . . at the foot of the Cross with Our Lady . . . coming to the tomb to anoint His broken body and finding Him risen . . ."

One listening could understand why she postponed for one whole year her marriage to Dr. Anton Lang, jr.—her childhood sweetheart, now professor of German at Georgetown University—to embrace this profound experience.

Followed Family Tradition.

She was following in the footsteps of a family tradition dating back to the inception of the Passion Play in 1634. She had trained for it since childhood, playing in the crowd scenes of the youthful Christ's entrance into Jerusalem. Her father twice played Judas, only this last year being demoted—as prescribed by custom—to the part of Datha, one of the traders in the temple, when the eldest of his five daughters was assigned to the principal role of Mary Magdalene.

"Principal parts are never given two members of one family at the same time," she explained.

Her grandfather, too, played Datha, and principal parts have been assigned to some member of her family each decade for the past 300 years. So, too, has it been with her husband's family. The senior Lang was Christus in each presentation of the Passion Play from 1900 to 1930.

Mrs. Lang is glad to be in America, and Washington, while new to her, is not strange.

She went on a brief twilight-hour sightseeing trip of the Capital City with her husband immediately after arriving here Tuesday evening—saw the White House, Connecticut avenue, —"and F street, of course," she smiled. She saw the outside of motion-picture houses that seemed of stupendous size to her, compared to the one little motion-picture theater in Oberammergau, which is open to public patronage only three nights a week, and then attracts but 20 to 40 people out of the 2,500 inhabitants.

Home Life Simple.

Life is very simple, but very satisfying, in Oberammergau, thinks Mrs. Lang. Preferred diversions are walking, skiing, bicycling, mountain climbing, singing. The women do a great deal of needlework.

Mrs. Lang made all the clothing for her trousseau, as well as all the linens. She excels—not only by her own, but by her husband's admission—in housekeeping, cooking, needlework.

Her beautifully modeled face was guiltless of make-up. She wore her wedding ring on the third finger of her right hand. Both are traditional customs in Oberammergau. No nice girl in Oberammergau powders or uses rouge, and when a couple become engaged, they exchange plain gold circlets which are placed on the third finger of the left hand. During the marriage ceremony, these are transferred to the right hand. There is no such thing as a jeweled engagement ring.

Just now, Mrs. Lang and her husband—who were married in Oberammergau by Roman Catholic ritual August 29 before the assembled villagers—made a honeymoon trip by car through the Black Forest, and returned to America by the first boat—are domiciled at the Fairfax Hotel, while hunting an apartment.

School Packed In Montgomery

Completion of Building Program Expected to Lessen Congestion.

Overflow enrollments were reported from practically all of the Montgomery County schools opened yesterday. The two suburban high schools reported especially heavy enrollment.

Classes are to be held in all available space in the county schools until the completion of the building program lessens the congestion. Two new suburban high schools are in process of construction. Students will not be put on part-time classes, however, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, announced.

Children of the Chevy Chase Elementary School received a real break yesterday. While other schools weer struggling with the three "R's" the children of this school were ordered home until Monday because the building had not been completed.

Delay in shipment of floor covering for the four-room addition caused dismissal of the classes. Workmen are laying the coverings so school can start Monday.

Fairfax Horse Show Attracts Many Entrants

Twentieth Annual Event Scheduled to Begin Tomorrow.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The twentieth annual horse and pony show at Fairfax, Va., promises to be the largest ever held, according to the announcement yesterday of Robert D. Graham, secretary of the Fairfax Horse Show Association.

The show will be tomorrow, Friday and Saturday on the old Fairfax Fair Grounds on the Lee Highway cut-off. The local association is a member of the Virginia Horse Show Association and for the first time in its history will be licensed by the American Horse Show Association of New York State.

The show is a non-profit sporting event financing itself each year through the cooperation of horsemen of Washington, Maryland and Northern Virginia.

More Entries Received.

Secretary Graham declared more entries have been received than for any previous show. Among leading exhibitors this year will be Mrs. D. N. Lee, of Middleburg; Mrs. Margaret G. Hill and daughter, of Bethesda, Md.; Charles H. Carrico, of Rockville, Md., and Miss Margaret Cotter, A. N. Miller, Capt. C. R. P. Rodgers and son and daughter; Vernon G. Owen, Miss Edna Roth, Robert B. Montgomery and W. Carlton Eacho, all of Washington.

Other prominent exhibitors from Virginia are Dr. Frederick Reuder, of Aldie; George Benoit, of Fredericksburg; James N. Andrews, of Somerset; Capt. Marion Carson, of Fort Myer; Mrs. Eselin, of Middleburg, and Stanley Green, of Leesburg.

Broken Glass, the hunter of Mrs. Lee, which won the championship of many of the official horse shows in northern Virginia captured his old laurels. The association is offering trophies, cash prizes and ribbons.

Events tomorrow will include the following classes: Hunters—Yearlings, 2-year-olds, green hunters, lightweight hunters, middle weight hunters, hunter hacks, King Joy class, Corinthian and ladies hunters.

Saddle Classes.

Saddle horses, open to all—Thoroughbred type and the hunter championships will be awarded at the close of the day to the horse winning the greatest number of points in classes in which conformation counts.

Saturday will be devoted to the showing of ponies and children's classes. The first even will begin at 1 p. m. The classes will include small saddle ponies, model pony hunters, small child's class, touch and out, seat and hands class, bantam saddle class, pony hunters, family class, pony Corinthian, pony hunt team, large saddle pony, bantam jumping class, pair pony hunters and the Fairfax Hunt class for members and residents of Fairfax County. The pony championship will be awarded the pony winning the greatest number of points in the show. The bantam championship will be awarded on the same basis.

but didn't bother to save his family!

But when it comes to his own family's health and comfort, it is another matter. They have to get along with a wheezy old furnace and uncertain heat.

Probably he's too busy to realize it. So we'll remind him and remind you, that QUIET MAY Oil Heat will save money, tempers and health. Whether you need the New QUIET MAY Oil Furnace for complete installations or the QUIET MAY Oil Heating System for converting existing coal-fired boilers, you'll find that either means great savings in fuel costs over anything on the market.

THE POWER in one gallon could lift world's largest tree 8 feet!

15% to 20% More Smooth Power Shown in Auto Test

Towering nearly 274 feet high in the Sequoia National Park, California, is the General Sherman tree. This world's largest tree measures 102 feet around its trunk at the base and weighs 6,167 tons. Imagine the energy necessary to lift such a mass! And yet, the power in a single gallon of the new Sinclair H-C Gasoline could hoist the General Sherman tree 8 feet—if all H-C's energy could be fully utilized.

In a recent road test, where the new H-C Gasoline was tried out against 12 other gasolines, the new H-C gave from 15% to 20% more smooth power. Ask the Sinclair dealer for his "99 Million Foot-Pound" folder.

Ashurst Widens Lead for Senate; Moeur Ahead

Stanford Won't Concede Defeat in Arizona Governor Race.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 12 (AP).—Senator Henry F. Ashurst, standing on his long record in Washington, both before and since the New Deal, and Gov. B. B. Moeur, sponsor of a State taxation program now in operation, apparently won Democratic renomination in Tuesday's primary.

Although his battle in a field of five had appeared earlier to be a nip-and-tuck affair, Ashurts's lead over his nearest opponent, Sidney P. Osborn, collector of customs here, increased on today's returns.

Stanford Clings to Hope.

Returns from 208 complete and 136 incomplete precincts out of the State's 433 gave Ashurst 20,000; Osborn, 14,163, and Renz L. Jennings, 8,880.

R. C. Stanford, Moeur's leading opponent, declined to concede victory to the Governor on the basis of the same precinct count which gave the incumbent 20,297 and Stanford 18,594. George W. P. Hunt, seven times Governor, polled 15,567. The Stanford camp clung to hope that late returns would change the picture.

Moeur Hails Returns.

Hailing the returns as a victory for his revenue system, which includes a privilege sales tax and income and luxury taxes, Gov. Moeur said:

"I am confident that the next two years will bring hope and happiness to the people."

"I am a consistent friend of President Roosevelt," said Senator Ashurst, in Prescott, commenting on his nomination, "and a supporter of his valiant efforts to liquidate this depression. He has given hope to the American people, and when hope is gone a nation is dead."

Virginia Tests To Be Resumed

State Literary, Athletic League Competitions Set for Year.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—With the opening of public schools in the State, thousands of boys and girls will begin competitions conducted throughout the year by the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League, an organization sponsored jointly by the University of Virginia and the secondary schools.

In addition to various athletic events, the league's program includes contests in debating, public speaking, reading, spelling, dramatics, verse and short-story writing, and high school publications. Debating will receive first attention this fall when students begin preliminary debates for the purpose of selecting representatives from each school to compete in State championship contests at the University of Virginia in May.

The question selected for debate this year is: "Resolved, that Virginia should adopt a general retail sales tax." All available material on the subject is furnished in the form of package libraries by the university's extension department library.

Now entering the twenty-second year of its activity, the league's membership consists of ten of the larger city high schools grouped in class A; 35 smaller city and county high schools forming the class B division, and 96 county high schools with enrollments falling below 150 listed in class C division.

Besides Charles H. Kauffmann, secretary and director of activities, members of the State executive committee of the league are A. B. Bristow, principal of Maury High School, Norfolk; R. Claude Graham, principal of Greenwood High School; Eliot V. Graves, State supervisor of physical and health education; Prof. L. T. Ludwig, of the University of Virginia; Dr. D. W. Peters, State supervisor of instruction; Dr. Charles G. Maphis, of the University of Virgihia; J. Milton Shue, superintendent of Henrico County schools; B. L. Stanley, principal of Harrisonburg High School, and Prof. George B. Zehmer, of the University of Virginia.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

A. F. G. E. Convention, New York, Sept. 11.—Speaking for the President, before the American Federation of Government Employes' representative, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed to the day soon when the Federal workers will be the pattern for all employers and employes throughout the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt's speech was the highlight of the second day's session of the A. F. G. E. convention, which is scheduled to close Wednesday night.

Demise of the National Federation of Federal Employes within three years was implied in a speech of Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, who predicted that all Government employes would be under one banner, that of the American Federation of Government Employes. It is recalled that the N. F. F. E., the largest and oldest Government employe organization, withdrew from the A. F. of L. three years ago. The A. F. G. E. was formed by the former N. F. F. E. members who desired to remain affiliated with the A. F. of L. The 16-year-old N. F. F. E. has more than 500 local unions throughout the country and has reported increased membership in the past year.

Membership Tripled.

The A. F. G. E. has more than tripled its membership in the past year; established a weekly house organ and many other labor features.

Mr. Woll pledged the A. F. G. E. delegates the renewed support of the A. F. of L. in every demand for improvement of the status of the Government employe, stressing the 5-day, 30-hour week as most vital. The entire prestige, power and influence of the A. F. of L. also was pledged again toward achievement of full restoration of pay and leave and all other A. F. G. E. demands.

The picketing fight which has been boiling in discussions off the convention floor is expected to burst on the floor Wednesday. E. Claude Babcock, A. F. G. E. president, made a plea at the opening session to place an official ban on picketing or other physical demonstration protests.

While the recent picketing of the Commerce Building that followed the dismissal of John L. Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, has not been mentioned openly, that incident is recognized as the raison d'etra of Mr. Babcock's move.

McLane Leads Proponents.

Proponents of picketing, who term it the one powerful force left to Government employes to effect favorable legislation, are led by Clarke J. McLane, Library of Congress; Mr. Donovan and Henry Rhine, TVRA. Mr. Donovan, while not a delegate, is taking an active part in the convention.

Reports are widely prevalent among the delegates that the charter of NRA Lodge will be revoked. Mr. Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, No. 91, was reinstated after being dismissed by Gen. Johnson on charges of inefficiency and absence from duty. He was publicly exonerated by the Labor Review Board. He and his colleagues are regarded by many of the AFGE delegates as being "leftists," "radicals" and "Communists."

Mrs. Jessie Eliot Perez, Commerce; LaRue E. Tanner, president of Internal Revenue Lodge (second largest AFGE unit), and George J. Simmons, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, will lead the majority of delegates standing unequivocally against any physical demonstrations against the Government.

The social features of the convention, under direction of the New York lodges, reached a climax Tuesday night with a gala banquet, entertainment and ball at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Members of the Washington delegation will entrain for home at 6:40 p. m. Wednesday, arriving on the Western States Limited of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at 11:25 p. m.

Thank you first for the flowers and then I think that what I have really come here to do today is to say just a word of greeting not only for myself but from my husband to you. I am very much interested in Government employes. You have a great responsibility. You are also in many cases in a position to make the Government an efficient and a moving machine. You can do it purely as a routine thing or take a great interest in what is happening in the Government and make it a real life piece of work.

I think that because of the fact that you have these responsibilities with the Government, the Government also has great responsibilities toward you, and I do believe that sometimes government does forget quite what its responsibilities are. But I hope very much that we are going to move forward in this country to a realization that the Government employes are really the pattern for all employers and employes throughout the country and that it may be in our ability to talk to each other and tell each other what our mutual interests are and what we would like to do.

Wants Clear Understanding.

I hope that we may be able to work out a very clear understanding. I think very often that it has been the case in the Government that the space between the Government as an employer as represented by the head officials and the employes themselves has been very great because they go on and on and on and very often they hardly know the people who may be formulating policies on which they work and you may be carrying out ideas in which the employes may not even be conversant with. I think that that is a very great mistake and I personally would like to see a very much closer tie between the Government officials and those who represent the Government as an employer and the actual employes who carry on the work from year to year. When we get that we are going to be able to do a great many things which have not so far been possible.

I am a great believer, as you know, in people knowing each other and people talking to each other about their difficulties, their problems and their aspiration, and I hope we will be able sometime to get that over all the Government and see how efficient we can make the Government as an employer and as a group of employes because, as you know, it is often said that people who work for the Government get in grooves and don't give the maximum that is in them to the Government. I think that comes from the fact that they don't have the opportunity to know what is happening in the minds of the people for whom they work.

"Best in World."

Therefore, I would like you to start out on a real campaign on getting together as a whole and see if altogether we can not make the Government machinery of employer and employes the very best in the world. If you do we will have a very happy family. I hope that all of you see your work as a growing interest as the years go on, for nothing is worth doing which doesn't continue to give you interest and stimulation. I don't think that there is any work that can be done for money alone which is worth that, unless with it goes real interest in what we are accomplishing and real joy in what we are doing.

Thank you, and I am glad to have been with you.

Convention Postettes.

Honoring the memory of John J. Manning, head of the union label department, American Federation of Labor, who died early in the summer, a resolution of tribute was adopted by the AFGE delegates. The resolution was sponsored by George Warren, president of Interior Lodge, No. 35, who recited a laudatory poem at the conclusion.

One of the busiest delegates is Dewey E. Dent, of Lodge No. 127, Fort Worth, Tex. Mr. Dent also represents the Wichita Falls and Dallas lodges. He will pilot six resolutions through the convention.

A veteran delegate who knows how to get action on her resolutions is the calm and alert Miss Helen C. McCarty, of Navy Department Lodge No. 1. Miss McCarty has attended all three AFGE conventions and was thrice a delegate from the District Department, American Legion, to National conventions. In addition to Miss McCarty, the Navy unit is exceptionally fortunate in its delegates, having Michael D. Schaefer, president of the AFGE District Department, in New York.

Midsummer atmosphere prevails in the convention hall—sultry weather—perspiring men shedding their coats—women wearily draping their furs over round-backed chairs, only to have them slide off and the procedure repeated ad infinitum—smoke-filled rooms—droning undertones of conversation, rising to spirited arguments here and there—rap, rap, rap of President Babcock's toy gavel—"the convention will be in order"—resolutions, credentials, resolutions, Washington problems, resolutions, National problems, resolutions, field activities, salaries, leave—enthusiasm, hopefulness, fraternal spirit.

Colored employes are being ably represented by George H. Rycraw, of Interdepartmental Lodge, No. 20, who is accompanied by Mrs. Rycraw.

The largest delegation is from Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, consisting of LaRue E. Tanner, president; Ira Y. Bain, Miss Inez Justus, Mrs. Maude Anderson, Miss Marguerite Hughey and Raymond A. Babb.

Individually, it is also the most active delegation. Mr. Tanner, who is being boomed to succeed Michael D. Schaefer, Navy, as president of the District Department, is at the helm of piloting through several resolutions. Mr. Bain is somewhat in the role of good-will ambassador, as is Mr. Babb. Miss Justus and Mrs. Anderson are keenly interested in that part of the convention business affecting the status of the women employes. Miss Hughey is acting secretary of the delegation and liaison officer. This vivacious young woman from Arizona is a thorough organizer and is proving to be one of the most popular attendants at the convention.

Dr. Emma H. Eichelberger, only delegate from District Building Lodge, No. 87, is sponsoring legislation to help the Government per diem employes. Dr. Eichelberger was confined to her room the first evening of the session by a sprained ankle. However, this energetic woman was back in the midst of the convention business Tuesday and was one of the delegates who escorted Mrs. Roosevelt to the speaker's platform.

A six-hour day, five-day week for all Government employes will be requested in a bill to be introduced in the House in January by Representative Martin J. Kennedy, Democrat, Eighteenth New York District. The measure also will apply to all persons employed on projects financed by the Government.

Among other bills Mr. Kennedy plans to introduce are Government guarantee of savings bank deposits, Federal supervision of interstate bus lines and employment of American citizens on American ships.

Corn-Hog Payment Made in Frederick

Farmers Getting $25,177 Under Program.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Three hundred and forty-five checks aggregating $25,177.20, the first payment to Frederick County farmers of the Federal Government's corn-hog adjustment plan, were received at the office of Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent, yesterday. About 65 more checks totaling slightly more than $10,000 are expected in a few days. The next payment of about $20,000 is due January 1, and the final payment about $20,000 is expected several months later.

Distribution of the checks began today in Middletown and Jefferson. Tomorrow checks will be distributed at New Market, Libertytown and Walkersville; Friday, Lewistown, Thurmont and Emmitsburg, and Saturday in Frederick at the courthouse.

The final payment of about $40,000 under the wheat curtailment program is expected in a few days. The first payment of $101,000 was received last December. There were approximately 1,420 wheat and about 400 corn-hog contracts. The entire benefit for the year aggregates approximately $210,000.

Hampshire Mine Resumes.

Barton, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The Hampshire mine of the Campbell Coal Co. resumed operations yesterday for the first time in three weeks. About 100 men returned. Notice was posted on Saturday throughout the Georges Creek section of resumption of work.

Frisco in Solvency Quiz.

St. Louis, Sept. 12 (AP).—John T. Harding, Kansas City attorney, was appointed by Federal Judge Charles B. Faris today as master to conduct a hearing into the solvency of the St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railway Co., now in the hands of the court under the new bankruptcy reorganization act.

First "Ziegfeld Follies" Was Plodding Into the Old National Just 27 Years Ago

Old Uncle Tom Is Coming Here Week of Oct. 2

By Gerald G. Gross.
(Batting for Nelson B. Bell.)

Twenty-seven years ago this month Washington was being plastered with signs and advance notices heralding the imminent arrival of a certain stage production, full of music and pretty girls, from New York. Handling the ballyhoo, a pretty responsible job for one of his tender years, was an enthusiastic 22-year-old with ideas.

"Oh, what can we lose?" the show's backers must have thought when they gave him the assignment. Their musical had opened as a hit on the old New York Theater roof, then flopped when transferred to a playhouse. Such a flop it was that for 2 cents the week bookings in Washington and Baltimore would have been canceled.

Apparently no one came forth with 2 cents because Nora Bayes, Mae Murray and the rest of the show were hauled down to the Capitol City. From a Liberty Theater egg the song-dance-comedy concoction became a National theater success. After a week here it was as big, if not bigger, a hit in Baltimore.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Scheduled to close after the Washington and Baltimore engagements had been fulfilled, so gloomy was the outlook when the production left New York, it went on to become something of an institution. Yesterday Chicago had its name in lights.

Yesterday, too, the erstwhile 22-year-old was in this office. It is he who tells the story printed above. Twenty-seven years later he is advance man for "The Affairs of Cellini," which comes to the Palace Friday. Possibly you've read or heard before this the circumstances surrounding the introduction of the "Ziegfeld Follies" to Washington. If so, please excuse it. Even so, we think it's good enough to bear repeating.

Oh, yes, the press agent's name. Ed Rosenbaum. Between him and his United Artists colleague, Mark N. Silver, the District and its environs should be plenty Cellini and Cristo-conscious for the next week.

This is a dirty trick, not only reading but printing this Los Angeles postcard to Nelson Bell, but——

"Could not get so far from home without missing your clever column in The Post. At present time 'One Night of Love' and 'Dames' have their big premier nights here. Both are excellent. (Signed) Guy Robertson."

Incidentally, just incidentally, "Dames" bows in at the Earle Friday. The same theater will exhibit "One Night of Love," said to be a Grace Moore triumph, during the week beginning October 5.

That "Tom" Show.

There was something, after all, to those reports of an amateur production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" being plotted in Washington.

With Eugene Kressin, popular local performer, playing Simon Legree, Harriet Beecher Stowe's classic will be staged the week of October 2 at a house tentatively known as the City Theater. It is on N street northwest between Seventh and Eighth.

James Tate will be producer and director, according to the welcome announcement. Among other salient facts are: (1) The theater is fully equipped and has a seating capacity in orchestra and balcony of 500; (2) none of the "heat-rending moments" or "blood curdling scenes" will be omitted, meaning Eliza will cross the ice and Little Eva will ascend to heaven; (3) Edith I. Allen, who did the same thing at the Roadside Theater, will design settings; (4) Eldred Wilson, ditto, will be stage manager, and (5) all of the characters will be taken by white actors and actresses, although the playhouse is located in a colored neighborhood.

Hurray for the newest "Tom" show!

Stars of This Week.

Otto Kruger, at the Palace in "Chained," played tutor to Francis X. Bushman's son, Ralph, while the film was in production. The former matinee idol's heir has a small role in the picture.

Madeleine Carroll's mother is French and her father an Irish college professor. England's first lady of the screen, she hesitated to embrace Franchot Tone while making "The World Moves On" (Loew's Fox), does not believe in dieting, says "Hollywood lives in a glass house," and has been presented at the Court of St. James.

Seigfried Rumann, also in "The World Moves On," is known as Hollywood's champion gadabout. Since deserting the Broadway stage for the screen, he has seen more of California than most natives.

Peeping Into Next Week.

Lois Wilson, an ingenue back in the silent days, is now typed as a screen mother. That's what she was in "Seed" and that's what she is in "There's Always Tomorrow," heading for the Rialto tomorrow. Directors look at her, then cast her as a mother, though she has no children and even admits her maternal instinct is nothing to brag about.

Joe Sherman, who adapted "Death on the Diamond" (Loew's Fox) to the screen, was a newspaper reporter in Seattle when a trial he was covering gave him the idea of becoming a fictionist.

Although Clarence Muse, colored actor and composer, has what critics pronounced one of America's finest speaking voices, his role in "The Count of Monte Cristo" (RKO-Keith's) does not permit him to utter a sound. He plays Ali, the mute.

Another Who Remembers.

"Pardon my use of pencil," writes E. S., "for I have been critically ill for a long time and find a pen a bit difficult. In your . . . article in today's Post you speak of Robert Warwick appearing in 'The Face in the Moonlight.' As long ago as 1892 I saw Robert Mantell in that play of French life wherein the star impersonated dual characters: the hero and a murderer who resembled one another.

"I hardly think that Warwick ever appeared in the mentioned play. Again you have Richard Bennett in 'The Barker.' I saw Walter Huston in 1927 in that play. Did Bennett soon after take it up? I think not.

"From the time I was 19 in 1888 up to 1928 I had a large collection of theater programs of all the plays I had seen in those 40 years. Two years ago my precious mementoes were destroyed in a fire, much, very much, to my regret. . . . Faithfully yours, (signed E. S."

We meant the film, "The Face in the Moonlight," not the stage play, Mr. E. S. Yes, Walter Huston did take "The Barker" on tour; indeed, he was to have appeared in the particular production which we saw but an eleventh-hour change brought Bennett as "Nifty" instead. Thanks for an interesting letter.

Bill Fischer, for five years associated with Loew's Columbia, the last two of which he was manager, was promoted yesterday to the management of Poli's Palace in New Haven, Conn., a screen and stage presentation house.

Before coming to Washington in 1929 as assistant manager of the Columbia, Mr. Fischer was connected with the Eastern studios of M. G. M. He studied to become a physician, completing his pre-medic training at Columbia.

Reminiscences.

Lighting Up Rialto's Marquee

Frank Morgan, pictured here with Binnie Barnes, will be seen both at the Rialto and Palace next week. He and Miss Barnes are costarred in "There's Always Tomorrow," which tomorrow opens the Rialto for the season.

Film Table

Richmond Socialists Hold Open Air Meeting

Speakers were Herman R. Ansell, candidate for the United States Senate, and Hilliard Bernstein, candidate for the House of Representatives from the Third District. The meeting was called by Carey White.

Court Session Postponed.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Because of so few criminal cases, the special term of court scheduled to open September 17 was called off following a conference between Judge Frank G. Wagaman and States Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman. The few cases pending will be carried over until the November grand jury.

Roadside Cast Presents a Hit In 'The Tavern'

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"THE TAVERN." The satiric melodrama in two acts by George M. Cohan, presented by and at the Roadside Theater. Directed by Harold A. Weinberger. Setting designed by Edith I. Allen.

The Woman.....Ruth Perrott
The Governor.....Harold Stepler
The Governor's Wife..Jane Plummer Rice
The Governor's Daughter..Virginia Rand
The Fiance.....Arthur Westover
The Sheriff.....Harrison Hathaway
The Sheriff's Men....Harry C. Whiting, William Prince and Herman Spachner
The Attendant.....Francis Koonce
Townsfolk.....Mary Perrott, Cynthia Hathaway, Harry Whiting, Francis Koonce, William Prince and Herman Spachner.

By Gerald G. Gross.

"Thank you for a few delicious, delightful hours."

So spake the vagabond last night, preparing to make his exit. We can think of no more appropriate phrase with which to express our satisfaction with the Roadside Theater's final production of the season.

Any review of "The Tavern" must, we believe, resolve itself into a dissection of the players, rather than a dissection of the play. Mr. Cohan's tongue-in-both-cheeks satire is too well known to make a resume of its plot necessary.

So, with no more ado, we say that Denis E. Connell is splendidly cast as the vagabond. "The Tavern" is all vagabond and the vagabond is Mr. Connell. He is supposed to carry the play on his shoulders and he fulfills his obligation nobly.

When the vagabond is not on stage—which, fortunately, is very seldom—it seems that the comedy marks time, like the property clock suspended above the staircase landing. When he is reading his lines, shouting "What a night!" and peter pannishly asking the audience "Is there no drama left in the world?" he is bringing George M. himself before you.

Through coincidence or diligent make-up, Mr. Connell bears a striking resemblance in this production to the play's author, too. But his performance would merit acclaim no matter if he looked like Banquo's ghost.

Fortunately, the other important role has been given to a young woman who can do it justice, Miss Ruth Perrott. This, we have been told, is the first Roadside production in which she has appeared. It is too bad that this barn group, which persents its offerings in a bucolic barn at Halpine, Md., is closing its season after "The Tavern" concludes a five-performance run Saturday night. Then, again, maybe Miss Perrott will appear in other amateur plays.

Of the others, Virginia Rand and Kenn Romney do the best with their parts (the governor's daughter and the hired man). Harold Stepler is a governor who reads lines monotonously, never getting away from an irritating habit of voice-quavering. Helena Cook could get more comedy out of her hired girl part. Walter Pick and Arthur Westover are unobstrusively satisfactory. Jane Plummer Rice does very well what little she has to do.

Last night's premiere, attended by a dressy but appreciative audience, was a notable event right down to the bit contributed by a passenger train which practically ran into and through the rustic theater while the richest of the play's rich satire was being unraveled. Regular Roadside patrons doubtless are used to such intrusions—the railroad tracks are within a few yards of the stage—but to us, a first timer, it was a momentous novelty.

Straight From the Studios

Singer Sought for Role of Jenny Lind in "The Mighty Barnum;" Una Merkel and Charles Butterworth as New Comedy Team.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Sept. 11.—Janet Beecher, the sapphire blonde will play opposite Wallace Beery in "The Mighty Barnum," which is proposed as a most spectacular picture on the Twentieth Century program. Also the cast is otherwise probably settled, with Donald Meek, Charles Judels, Herman Bing and Tammany Young, among those added. Previously announced was Adolphe Menjou as primary support to the star. Miss Beecher has won interest by her impersonations in such features as "Gallant Lady," which starred Ann Harding, and in "The Last Gentleman" with George Arliss.

ANN HARDING.

Much speculation there is about who will be the songbird to enact Jenny Lind in the feature, a role once played in another film by Grace Moore. It is understood that the effort was made to secure Miss Moore, but her concert engagements interfered. Also thought to be a possible choice is Jeanette MacDonald. Real singing stars are all too rare in the film world, which is what makes the selection especially difficult.

New Comedy Team Looks Promising.

Glimmering on the horizon is a new comedy team. That is what may eventuate through the combining of the talents of Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel in "The Night is Young," in which picture they appear in support of Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye. . . . Miss Merkel will portray a ballet dancer, who is companion of the heroine, and Butterworth will interpret her fiance, driver of a Viennese horse car. If this union of comedy talents turns out favorably as anticipated, the two may be starred in a picture. Comedy teams of this order are rather rare, and the Butterworth and Merkel talents should rather ideally match.

Owen Features in Harding Film.

Reginald Owen's popularity is being testified to in various ways since he enjoyed success by his interpretation of the country doctor in "Of Human Bondage" and Louis XV in "Du Barry," starring Dolores del Rio. He is regarded as an unusually versatile actor. . . . The newest assignment for Owen is in the Ann Harding production, "Enchanted April," which Kenneth Macgowan will produce prior to "Becky Sharp."

Fay Wray in Maroin Plot.

The cast of "Cheating Cheaters" has been pretty well assembled. This is the picture that will bring the young Cuban, Cesar Romero, to the fore. In the feminine lead will be Fay Wray, while Francis L. Sullivan, newly brought from England; Hugh O'Connell, Henry Armetta and Ann Shoemaker are others. Filming is to start Monday under the direction of Richard Thorpe. The original is by Max Marion and was adapted by Gladys Unger, Ellen Rivkin and James Mulhauser.

McCrea Mentioned for Train Opus.

Provided the offer of British Gaumont, which he has received, does not prove too alluring, Joel McRea will likely assume the leading role in "Silver Streak," which is to be the story of the new type of train for transcontinental service. The production is to start shortly, and the Burlington line is supplying the train for the picture, and has even changed its name from the Burlington Zephyr to the Silver Streak. As yet no selection has been made of cast or director for the film, though McRea is considered the right leading man possibility.

Independants Find. Paramount Haven.

Paramount is evidently becoming, of a sudden, the gateway for the release of independently-made productions of a sudden, despite the fact that the company itself has some sixty-five features of its own scheduled for the year. The Walter Wanger films are to be released through that organization, with "The President Vanishes" and "The Peacock's Feather," starring Ann Harding, the vanguard of offerings. In addition to this the company has planned to put out six pictures made by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, the first of which is "Crime Without Passion."

Lucille Ball, who appeared in the Eddie Cantor film "Kid Millions," has signed for a seven-year contract with Columbia. She formerly posed for cigarette ads . . . Sidney Howard, the English comedian, who played in "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," plans to leave for his native land this week, but will return later for pictures here . . . Berta Singerman, the Argentina diseuse, under contract to Fox, is also leaving for a trip that will take her to Cuba, Spain and Portugal. The date set for her departure is September 24, and she will return for picture work about November 16 . . . John Arledge has joined the cast of "Bachelor of Arts" with Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Henry Walthal and Arline Judge. William Thiele will direct "Lottery Lover," with Pat Peterson, Lew Ayres, Sterling Holloway and Peggy Fears as principals.

Brazil's New Ambassador Docks Today

Family to Occupy Embassy Until McCormick House Is Ready.

The new Ambassador of Brazil, Senhor Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, will arrive in New York this morning aboard the Rex from Europe, accompanied by Senhora de Aranha and their two daughters. They will remain in New York a few days before coming to the Capital.

This evening Senhor Aranha will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria by a group of his friends, among them bankers and business men interested in the affairs of Brazil. The dinner is being given by the Pan American Society, at which Mr. John L. Merrill, president of the society, will preside.

Dr. Aranha resigned as secretary of finance to represent his country in connection with the reciprocal trade agreement to be negotiated between the United States and Brazil. Dr. Aranha has had a brilliant official career in Brazil. He was one of the leaders of the revolution which has culminated in the election of Gertulio Vargas as constitutional president under the newly adopted charter. Holding successively the cabinet portfolios of interior, justice and finance, he has been an influential factor in formulating the policies of the present government. In selecting him for the Washington mission at present, President Vargas paid high compliment to his qualification for handling the treaty negotiations with this country, which are considered all-important.

Leader in Brazil.

Graduating from the law school of Rio de Janerio in 1916 at the age of 22, Dr. Aranha practiced law for eight years, during which time he also served, in turn, as Mayor of Allegrete, member of the State Legislature, representative of Rio Grande do Sul to the Federal Congress and secretary of state of Rio Grande do Sul. He has been minister of finance in the Vargas cabinet since 1931, where he has been instrumental in the solution of many of Brazil's problems, including the project regulating payment of the external debt, enactment of the new tariff law, creation of the new national economic council, and adoption of a free exchange market for all export products except coffee.

Dr. Aranha is married to the former Delminda Gudole. They have three daughters, Luisa, Zilda, and Delinda; two sons, Euclides and Oswaldo.

When the Ambassador and Senhora de Aranha arrive in Washington they will establish themselves in the Embassy on Fifteenth street temporarily until the newly purchased embassy at 3000 Massachusetts avenue is ready for their occupancy.

Home Closed for Years.

Senhora de Aranha will have the pleasure, as well as the task, of settling herself in one of the famous old residences of Washington, where social and diplomatic history have been made — the former home of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sanderson McCormick.

The handsome home on Massachusetts avenue, just south of the British Embassy, has been closed for a number of years; but at one time it was a mecca for the smartest and choicest members of Capital society.

The late Mr. McCormick, father of Mr. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, and of the late Senator Medill McCormick, was for many years diplomatic representative of this country in the great capitals of Europe.

Mr. McCormick was the first United States Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, and from the gay life of Vienna he went to Russia as Ambassador to the Imperial Court from 1902 until 1905. The next two years he represented his country in France, and before becoming Ambassador to the Court of St. James he went as official representative of the United States to the Columbian Exposition.

Rich Furnishings.

After living amid the beauties of the Old World, Mr. McCormick and his wife, who was the former Katherine van Etta Medill, determined to bring to their home in Washington many of the rare things they had collected in their travels. They furnished the drawing room with authentic Napoleonic pieces, and in the library they placed what came to be renowned over the world—a vast collection of books on Napoleon, and many books by the "Little Corporal." Throughout the house were scattered pieces of furniture that Josephine de Beauharnais had chosen herself when she had the finest craftsmen of the whole world at her command.

The house was decorated throughout in Empire style. Marble and Caen stone, oak and crystal went into the making. After the death of Mr. McCormick in 1919 Mrs. McCormick kept the house open, and after her death in 1923 in Versailles, her daughter-in-law, then Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, widow of Senator Medill McCormick, now Mrs. Albert G. Simms, closed the house.

Within the next six weeks the Brazilian Embassy will move into the famous house, and again it will be a place of much entertaining and gayety.

Mr. Bert Fish Sojourns In Capital This Week

MRS. FRANK BLAKE MILLER,

who before her marriage yesterday to Lieut. Miller, U. S. N., was Miss Dorothy Darrow Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron U. Graham. Lieut. Miller is the son of Dr. G. Brown Miller, of Washington, and of the late Mrs. Miller.

Lieut. Miller, Miss Graham Are Married

Ceremony Held at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Platt, Chevy Chase.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Darrow Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Ulmer Graham, to Lieut. (J. G.) Frank Blake Miller, U. S. N., son of Dr. G Brown Miller and the late Mrs Miller, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Landra B. Platt, in Chevy Chase. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Henry Teller Cocke in the presence of members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The bride was given in marriage by her father..

Bride in Satin.

She wore a becoming gown of ivory satin made on princess lines. The fitted bodice had a cowl neck finished with a narrow collar. The sleeves were full from the shoulder to the elbows and fitted from there to the wrists, where they ended in points. The flaring skirt ended in a long train. Her veil of tulle was caught into a cap of rose point lace, a family heirloom, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mr. G. Brown Miller, jr., attended his brother as best man. Following the ceremony, there was a small reception for the guests.

Later Lieut. Miller and his bride left on a wedding trip, the latter wearing a smart ensemble of black crepe, the girdle of which was a wide band of gold, silver and scarlet. With this she wore a hat of black velvet, trimmed with scarlet. The young couple will return to Washington at the end of the month and will be with the bride's parents in their home on East Bradley lane until Lieut. Miller leaves for Houston, Tex., where he will join his ship, the U. S. S. Houston.

Reside in San Diego.

He will be joined later by Mrs. Miller in San Diego, Calif., where they expect to make their future home.

Mrs. Miller is a graduate of Holton Arms School in Washington. Lieut. Miller was graduated from the United States Naval Academy with the class of 1930.

It is a coincidence that the bride's oldest sister, the former Miss Elaine Graham, now Mrs. G. Brown Miller, jr., is the wife of yesterday's bridegroom's brother. Mrs. Landra Platt, at whose home the wedding took place, is the former Miss Virginia Graham.

Admiral and Mrs. Bass Are Guests of Holmeses

The Tragedy of a Trickless Dummy.

When I saw the following hand played I thought what a thrill I should be experiencing if it were part of the coming International match in which my teammates and I will defend the Charles M. Schwab World's Championship Trophy and for which I am now in England. Not that I really hope to score any sets of 5,400 points, but there's no harm in thinking about it—and even a good player might venture to bid two notrump with a hand like South's.

West, Dealer.
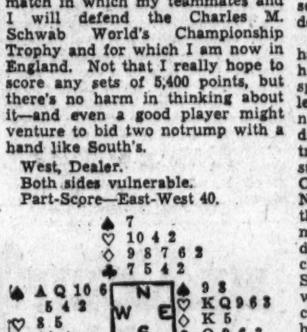
Part-Score—East-West 40.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass	2♡	2NT
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Redbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

South's reason for not allowing East and West to obtain the contract was their part-score; and even though his redouble was dangerous, with such a wealth of high cards South could hardly be blamed for thinking that he could take eight tricks. South should have been wise enough to foresee the fact that if North's hand were barren of entries he would become bottled up in his own hand and be set, but hardly anyone could have foretold the fact that all but two of South's honors would "go to bed," and that he would be set the staggering total of 5,400 points.

Against the redoubled two-no-trump contract West opened the heart eight, on which East played the Queen and South the Ace. A glance at the Dummy revealed the fact that there was no chance of taking the diamond finesse, and South should have laid down the Ace, hoping that the King would by some chance be a singleton and drop. But South misread the hand and thought that West, having bid and doubled, must hold the diamond King, whereupon South attempted a very futile bit of deception and led the diamond Jack. This trick East won with the King and led the nine of spades, on which South played the Jack and West the Queen. West put East back in the lead with the heart King, and by leading through South's King of spades again East established the entire spade suit for West.

Now when West ran off the balance of his spades South was forced to discard down to three cards. One of these had to be the high diamond, or West could have won a trick with the Ten. Likewise, two of them had to be clubs, or West could have dropped South's Club King by leading the Ace, and thus have allowed East to win tricks with the club Queen and nine. At the end South therefore held the Ace of diamonds and the King-Jack of clubs and West had the Ten of diamonds and the Ace-eight of clubs. East had nothing left but clubs. West led the diamond, forcing South into the lead with his Ace. Now South was forced to lead a club from the King-Jack combination, and East and West won the last two tricks. The only tricks South won were his two Aces, and he was set six tricks, vulnerable and redoubled.

Consider the startling difference had South, holding nothing more in high cards, been able by some special dispensation of the gods to lead from Dummy after winning the Ace of hearts. A small diamond led by North would have trapped East's King, and the entire suit would have become established. On the fourth round of diamonds North could have been placed in the lead again, and the fifth diamond led, on which South would discard the heart seven. Now a club would be led by Dummy and South's Ten played. West could win this with the Ace, and then could put East in the lead with a heart. But when East led a spade South would simply play the Jack and West would be forced either to lay down the spade Ace and concede tricks to South's spade King and club King, or to lead a club into South's King-Jack tenace and give him two tricks that way. South would thus win five diamonds, one heart, and either two clubs or one club and one spade—eight tricks in all, which would have given him the redoubled contract (280 points), and the rubber (500 points). The right to lead from Dummy would have made a difference of 6,180 points in South's score.

President's Son Cousin's Guest At Dinner Dance

Party Given in New York by Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt.

New York, Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Although reams have been written concerning the coolness existing between the families of President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the children of the latter's uncle, the late President Roosevelt, they seem to get on famously despite the difference in political beliefs. At least the Kermit Roosevelts and the present occupants of the White House are on the best of terms, and the former have on several occasions been guests at the Executive Mansion in Washington since Franklin D. Roosevelt has been in the President's chair.

Therefore it was no surprise to their many friends to discover that Mr. John A. Roosevelt, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt's youngest son, was included among the guests at the dinner dance Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, of 29 East Sixty-ninth street, gave at their Oyster Bay home, Mohannes, last night for their son, Kermit Roosevelt, jr., who returned only a few days ago after having attended the special summer course for foreign students at the university at Moscow.

Graduate of Groton.

The party was to have been a surprise, but as in the case of most entertainments of this sort, news of it had leaked out among members of the younger set. The guest of honor, like his cousin, the President's son, who is his house guest, was graduated from Groton in June. They will both enter Harvard this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are entertaining a group of friends of their son, several of them classmates at Groton, among them Messrs. Harvey H. Bundy, jr., H. Shippen Goodhue and George Folsom Bigelow, all of Boston; Edward Blair, of Chicago, and William J. Clothier 2d, of Philadelphia. The house guests included also Miss Marianna Dunn, of Washington; Miss Betty Brookes, who was introduced to society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Brookes, of Philadelphia, at a dance on August 4 at their Newport home, and Miss Leith Symington, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fife Symington, of Baltimore.

Other Guests.

Other guests at the dinner dance were Miss Anne Paul, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Paul, of Philadelphia, and the following members of the debutante set: The Misses Genevieve Brady, Virginia Bacon, Mary Josephine Cutting, Alison Grace, Sheila Potter, Hope Noyes, Edith De Forest Lord, Sylvie Redmond, Margaret Delano, Virginia Winmill and Martha Allen.

In addition to the young men in the house party, the guests also included Messrs. Deering Danielson, Francis Keppel, John Hay, Bayard Warren, jr., George C. Meyer, jr., Eben Pyne, Frank Lawrence and Joseph W. Roosevelt, a younger son of the hosts, who is following the family tradition by receiving his preparatory education at Groton before entering Harvard.

The dancing took place in the large living room, and dinner was served in the adjoining dining room.

Dinner to Mark Mexican Holiday

Ambassador Roa Host at Dinner Sunday.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Fernando Gonzalez Roa, will entertain at a luncheon on Sunday at Olney Inn, in celebration of the 124th anniversary of the establishment of the Republic of Mexico.

The Commercial Attache and Senora de Gaxiola, with their small child, accompanied by the former's mother, Senora Ana Estrada de Gaxiola, will arrive in New York Saturday, and will come to Washington in time to celebrate the national day of their country.

Minister Due This Month

Ratib Bey Embarks From Egypt for Europe on Way Here.

The newly appointed Minister of Egypt, Ibrahim Ratib Bey, will arrive in Washington the end of this month to assume his duties. The minister has sailed from Cairo for Europe, and after a brief stay in Paris will sail for this country.

Ratib Bey is a distinguished statesman of his country, having served as senator for some time and having represented his country as Minister to Turkey in 1929.

The Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Nicholas Khalil Bey, returned to Washington Tuesday from Chicago, where he spent several days. He will go to New York to meet the minister on his arrival.

Lotion Tints, Waves Hair All at Once

Two Operations Combined Without Use of Heavy Dye.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SOMEBODY a long time ago set it down in black and white that a woman's hair was her crowning glory. Ever since then, and particularly in the last few years, chemists and hairdressers have been endeavoring to make it possible for hair to be just that. For centuries the coiffure was the center of interest. Later dyes were developed from crude coloring matter into natural-looking and easily applied tints. Next came the rinses, wonderful aids to women anxious only to accentuate and bring out the color and lights in their hair. Now, here at last, is a lotion with the double purpose of waving and tinting the hair at the same time.

Instead of giving the hair a color rinse before the wave, it's now necessary only to shampoo the hair and set the wave with this lotion. The result is a symphony of smooth, graceful waves alive with color.

Colors in Easy Reach.

Certainly no woman need be content longer with nondescript hair. If hers is an in-between shade she can change it with small expense to a definitely lovely color. Dull brown hair can be vivid chestnut.

This combination wave fluid hair rinse may be bought at a local beauty salon, or you may call there, and have your hair waved (and at the same time tinted) with it.

Don't fear that it is a dye that will color the hair until it grows out. It's merely a slight tint which comes off with the next shampoo.

Frosted Satin Neckwear.

Neckwear, being such an interesting sideline in style this year, has inspired more than one shopper to comb the town for exactly the goods she wants. Many feet have grown weary hiking over the concrete from store to store.

That is why a local shop wishes the news broadcast that a new supply of most interesting neckwear has just arrived. A variety of styles range from tailored bibs to frills.

All-Water Soap.

Washingtonians have long since found that it pays to provide themselves with a means of combating the hardness of the water here. Those who have never gotten around to installing one of those wondrous water-softening machines are usually careful to use soaps that will lather as freely and wash as well in hard water as soft. Some people, however, continue to struggle with hard water because they know of no convenient and inexpensive way to combat it.

Right now they should call up the toilet goods departments of a downtown store and ask for a box of special all-water, or as some say, buttermilk soap. It comes in green, violet, yellow, white, blue and peach colors. The scents are bouquet, lavender, verbena, lilac, jasmin and rose. A box of 12 cakes is only 69 cents.

Facial Kit at Bargain.

It was quite a surprise to find a simple facial kit of such a fine make selling for such an absurdly small sum. Ordinarily a small jar of the cream or a bottle of lotion are very expensive.

But here, and no mistaking the price tag, was a "quick facial" kit providing the means for carrying out the three steps essential to a good complexion—cleansing, lubricating and stimulating.

A cream, which has a reputation for really cleaning; an emollient to make the skin supple and smooth; and a stimulating lotion with tonic properties for use in the morning, are included in the kit.

The package comes in two types, one for oily skin, the other for dry.

—And Now "Skirtchiefs."

The question mark which has been wrapped around the "What shall I wear today" question may be taken down and thrown away. The answer is found. On these in-between days when it's neither hot nor cold, or both, the ideal costume consists of a jaunty plaid skirt, matching kerchief and plain blouse. When winter comes, add a suede jacket, and what could be finer for sports?

A downtown store has just gotten in what they call "skirtchiefs"—skirt and kerchief to match. They're available in black and red, black and white, brown and green, and brown and blue. The price is positively negligible!

Marble Dust Statuettes.

White marble dust has been chemically treated and then molded to form the pure white, graceful little statuettes in a local shop. There are two sizes, at 25 cents and 50 cents.

Season's Knit Fashions Attain Popularity for Wear All Day

Equally Smart for Bridge, Tea, Cocktails and Dinner; Styles Range From Sports to Formal Dresses of Floor Length.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Knitwear fans—and their numbers are increasing every day—have at last achieved one of their ambitions. They can wear their beloved knit costumes all day long * * * wherever they go * * * even to bridge, tea, cocktails and dinner. And be in fashion.

This season knitwear means active sports costumes, tailored costumes, soft afternoon dresses and floor-length formal dresses * * * and sweaters, blouses, two and three-piece suits, coats, one and two-piece dresses. And they are all ready-made or to be made by yourself.

The costumes themselves are quite simple, but the yarns that make them have burst out into all sorts of novelty effects.

Chenilles Are Dressy.

Novelty chenilles look heavier and bulkier but are very light and soft. They are dressier, too, and take color beautifully.

Wool and worsted yarns are often mixed with rabbit hair or mohair and made up into very comfortable sports garments.

And the novelty boucles in their silky but dull finish are the ones to look for in the dressier, softer costumes, especially the cocktail type.

You'll notice a number of softening details on the new knit costumes * * * even the tailored ones * * * which make them easier and more becoming to wear.

Scarfs and bows at the neckline are just as much in fashion in these knit things as in silk and wool costumes. And the dressier knitted dresses, such as the one sketched at the right in the illustration, even put silk or velvet trimmings on, as the big bow of this dress.

Make a Coat Yourself.

Dresses of this type are growing more and more popular for wear at bridge parties in the afternoon, or for other such informal yet "dressed up" events.

They usually look hand knit * * * and often actually are * * * and use the same rich colors which you find in dressy silk dresses.

Anybody who's ever worn one knows how comfortable and practical a knitted coat is. And the one sketched is a coat you can make for yourself. It's designed by Marcel Rochas, the Paris couturier, to be made of a medium heavy yarn, which works up quickly and is a most comfortable weight.

This coat isn't actually a knitted fashion, since it's crocheted (a very simple stitch). But crocheting and knitting belong in the same class as far as fashion and smartness go. And if you'd like to make it, we'll send you the directions on receipt of the filled-in coupon and requested inclosures.

Keep Well How to

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

All That Glitters Is Not Food.

MENTION has been made in this column of the inherent tendency on the part of children to put objects of various sorts into their mouths. The infant from birth struggles to gratify the sense of hunger and, in the attempt, tastes everything within reach. As he grows a bit older the imitative factor becomes highly developed. He sees older persons putting things into their mouths and, without the sense of discrimination which adults are supposed to possess, anything and everything goes into the mouth.

Mothers are never willfully careless, but they are sometimes carelessly careless, and in spite of what seem to be adequate precautions babies and young children will get hold of objects and swallow them. A mother holding an open safety pin in her mouth may unwittingly be teaching her child to do the same thing. Occasionally carpet and upholsterer's tacks, small nails, or screws are left within reach of the child.

Now and then the object is so large that it lodges in the tube leading from the mouth to the stomach (esophagus). This is frequently true of open safety pins, metal objects, small bones, and coins. More important than swallowed objects are those that are breathed in and that lodge in the air passages, such as the trachea and the bronchi. Whenever this occurs the entrance and exit of air to and from the lung is blocked and serious symptoms ensue.

Children must be taught (1) to eat slowly; (2) to avoid chewing pencils, toothpicks, bits of straw, etc.; (3) not to put filthy objects, such as coins, in the mouth.

Home removal of objects that have been swallowed or breathed in should never be attempted. Such attempts will usually result in pushing them farther down.

Sometimes the child has swallowed an object that he can not or will not tell about. In any unexplained difficulty in breathing or marked hoarseness a careful examination should be made to rule out the possibility of a foreign body in the trachea, bronchi, or lungs. If the object is metal it can be located by means of the X-ray. Instruments are now available by means of which objects in the bronchi may be safely removed.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

A LIBRARY shelf of authentic books on child care and psychology is helpful and interesting, but the mother who can not afford them need not do without the information they contain. The United States Children's Bureau has provided it in a series of booklets available for 10 cents each.

"Prenatal Care," Bureau Publication No. 4, covers not only the directions for the care of the mother but detailed information on what preparations should be made for the arrival, the essentials of the layette and other helpful suggestions.

"Infant Care," Bureau Publication No. 8, tells just about everything that a mother needs to know about her baby—what he should wear; when, what and how he should be fed; bathing, airing, all the details that may perplex the mother.

"The Child From One to Six," Bureau Publication No. 30, deals with preserving health and preventing disease, sleep habits, proper clothing, toys, intellectual development and similar topics.

All three booklets are indexed and contain lists of other books and booklets available at varying prices. They can be obtained by sending 10 cents for each, with the title and number of the publication wanted, to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C.

Advice on books for and about children may be obtained by writing Alice Fox Pitts in care of The Washington Post.

The Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

TASTES, particularly along culinary lines differ. Some people like their flavors simple and unadulterated, others delight in odd mixtures and surprising combinations.

Your cookbook will furnish you with the simple recipes. Here are several that may seem startling. If you like straight-forward recipes, beware; if you are adventurous in the kitchen, try them. But whatever you do, don't say you weren't warned.

Arabian Nights Sauce.

1 cup very strong coffee infusion
1 cup strained honey
½ cup peanut butter
12 marshmallows
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped pasteurized dates
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla

Put all ingredients, except marshmallows, in top of a double boiler. Mix very thoroughly and when mixture is hot, stir in marshmallows cut in small pieces. Remove from fire when they are melted and serve either hot or cold over ice cream, puddings or plain boiled rice. Sufficient for 5 to 6 portions.

Fried Bananas and Onions.

2 tablespoons butter.
1 cup shredded onion
½ teaspoonful salt.
2 bananas

Use Spanish or Bermuda onions for this, not the small white ones. You may use the partially ripe or green-tipped bananas since the cooking makes them as completely digestible as the fully ripe ones. Cut bananas in half lengthwise then again crosswise. Melt the butter, add onion and cook covered a few minutes until onions soften a little. Then roll bananas in lemon juice and place on onions. Sift on a little salt. Cook slowly until onions begin to brown and banana becomes rather soft and transparent; then turn over and allow to brown on other side. Serve hot with roast pork.

Codfish Canadian.

1 pound dried salt codfish
¼ cup butter
1-3 cup chopped onions
1-3 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons heavy cream
1 tablespoon vegetable oil.
Paprika
Lemon slices

Pick codfish apart and soak in cold water 24 hours, changing water frequently. Cook in boiling water 15 minutes. Then drain and toss over fire in a saucepan until dry. Add the butter and chopped onion and cook 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice slowly to cream and beat in vegetable oil. Blend well with codfish.

Parsnip Croquettes.

4 medium sized parsnips
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 egg
Egg and crumb mixture

Wash and pare the parsnips. Cook them in boiling, salted water 30 to 40 minutes or until tender. Drain and mash them thoroughly. Then add butter, salt, pepper, paprika, lemon juice and well-beaten egg. Stir the parsnip mixture over the fire until it is of a creamy consistency. Spread on a platter and chill. Form into croquettes, dip in fine crumbs, then in slightly beaten egg, diluted with one tablespoon water and again in crumbs. Fry in deep, hot vegetable oil (375 degrees F.) 2 or 3 minutes until brown.

HUNDRED GRAND

By Erle Stanley Gardner

Annette Morton, the adopted child of the wealthy Mortons, and Sylvia Galen, her companion, social secretary to the child's mother, have been kidnaped. Carlton Lanlie, criminal lawyer, was upset, for he was in love with Sylvia. Also, his legal work brought him in contact with gangland, even with that underworld power, Jimmy Cordell, and he knew the girl was in danger. Just as frantic as Lanlie was Annette's father. When he received a demand for $100,000 as the price of his daughter's safety, he determined to pay it at once, in spite of the fact that Roger Terry, of the United States Bureau of Investigation, insisted it was unwise to do so yet. In yesterday's chapter, detectives were bickering over the handling of the case.

IT was Morton who lost control of himself. He pounded with his fist on the table. There was a trace almost of hysteria in his voice.

"It's horrible," he said. "Can't you understand what it means? You men are sitting here bickering and frittering time away. Either get the girl or get out and let us get her. She's a helpless little thing, and right now she's in the custody of desperate criminals. God knows what's happening to her. I can't stand it. You talk about her as if she were a stolen automobile or something inanimate. Can't you damn fools understand that she's human? That she's part of our life? That she's dearer to us than our own lives? That this is tearing our hearts out This is the time when we usually sit around the fireplace and tune-in the radio on children's bedtime stories. She should be tucked into her little bed. And now, God knows where she is!"

Letter Arrived.

Capt. Carr nodded grimly.

"I know," he said, "and we've got something else to think of—that woman who's with her, Sylvia Galen. Either she's an accomplice or she's a victim, too."

"Well, do something—something—do something!" Morton cried. "Don't sit around here jabbering. Do something!"

A man knocked on the door of the library. Capt. Carr strode to the door and opened it. "A special delivery letter," he said, "addressed to you, Mr. Morton."

With hands that shook so he could hardly tear open the flap, Morton opened the letter, gave it one glance and said, "It's from the kidnapers."

Acting upon sudden impulse, he folded it and started to thrust it in his pocket. Frank Mayer grabbed his wrist. Lieut. Pelton pulled the letter from his hand.

"You've got to trust us," he said.

Penciled Scrawl.

The letter was printed in a rude, penciled scrawl, and read simply:

"You told the police. If you violate our instructions again, the child dies. The woman is already dead. At 2 o'clock in the morning, take the $100,000 and drive south on Maple avenue. Be sure that no one follows you. Be alone and unarmed. Drive not more than 25 miles an hour. If you follow these instructions we will get in contact with you and tell you what to do. If you don't follow them, your child dies."

The note was unsigned.

"I'm going to do what that note says," Morton declared, glowering at the men.

Terry's voice was vibrant with sympathy.

"You can't do it, Mr. Morton," he said.

"You don't know that you're dealing with the kidnapers. You don't know that your child is safe. You're simply jeopardizing your own life and the money you've got together for the ransom."

"I'm going to do it," Morton declared grimly. "You can all go to the devil!"

Barclay Temple was a self-contained man with grizzled hair and eyes that were calm, steady and filled with a cold, unwavering interrogation. He was an operative ho had been sent by train to assist Terry. He sat on one side of the desk, Terry on the other. Between them was a telephone directly connected with the Morton residence, where an operative was keeping in close touch with developments, reporting at intervals over the wire.

Barclay Temple said. "You're satisfied he's going to follow the instructions?"

"Yes."

"There's nothing in the note to show that it's genuine?"

"No."

"Then we can't let him do it."

"How are we going to stop him?"

"There's just one way," Temple said. "I hate to do it, but we've done it before and it's worked."

"What?"

Ruse Planned.

"Write another note with conflicting instructions."

"Then what?"

"Then he doesn't know which is genuine—which one came from the real kidnapers. As a result, he won't dare to follow either one of them. He'll give both notes to the newspapers to show that he can't tell what to do because some one is trying to chisel in on the ransom money. The kidnapers will see what they're up against. They'll try to get in touch with him in some other way to convince him that they're the ones with whom he should deal.

"In this game, the more times the snatchers have to contact the parents of the victim, the more chance we stand of getting them. In the long run, we may be able to force them to use the telephone. If they do that, they're lost."

Note Written.

"We've got to get that note out without wasting any time," Terry said.

"Give me a sheet of paper, then."

Terry passed over a sheet of paper. Temple held a pencil in his left hand and printed the letters of a ransom note—a note that had no salutation, no signature. It read simply:

"We have the child and the woman who was with her. They are both safe. We don't want them. We want the hundred grand. At midnight get in your car and leave your house alone. You can have your chauffeur with you. You must not let any one know where you're going. You must not be followed. We will know. If you are followed you won't even get near us. Go to 1924 South Eighteenth street. That's a vacant building. There's a mail box on the garage. Look in the mail box. There'll be a letter giving you further instructions."

Letter Mailed.

Temple folded the letter and pushed it into an envelope.

"Put a special-delivery stamp on it,' he said. "Drop it in the air-mail box around the corner. They pick up air mail from there in about 20 minutes. They'll find the special-delivery letter and notice the address. All of the mail employes have been notified to keep a particular lookout for any letter addressed to the Mortons. The letter will be rushed out there within 15 minutes of the time it's taken from the box."

"How about that address?" asked Terry. "Is there a vacant house at that address? They'll go there, you know, first thing."

"Sure there is. I've picked it out. That's one of the first things I did when I hit town. I figured we might have to work this stunt."

"What do we do there?"

"Simply leave another letter in the mail box saying that he didn't follow instrucitons; that he gave out the information about the letter, and therefore he'll have to wait for further instructions; that we'll give him one more chance."

A Ghastly Trick.

"It is," Terry said, "a ghastly trick to play on heartbroken parents."

"The thing we've got to do," Temple answered, grimly, "is to get our hands on the kidnapers. If they had given some proof that the woman and the child were alive, I wouldn't do it. But it's better than an even chance that the note was written by chiselers who want to collect a hundred thousand dollars easy money."

"Then that's where the newspapers come in," Terry remarked.

"That," Temple agreed, "is where the newspapers are worth their weight in gold. Don't forget this—publicity is a bad thing for kidnapers, that's why they always try to avoid it. Moreover, newspapers furnish a direct means of contact between parents and kidnapers. By using the newspapers, the parents can always send out any message they want."

The telephone on the desk rang. Terry picked up the receiver and listened to a masculine voice that gave a crisp report; then as the voice ceased Terry said: "Okay, Johnson, stay on the job. I want to know everything he does. I want to know every person whom he sees."

He hung up the telephone and turned to Temple.

"Carlton Lanlie," he said, "that criminal attorney I was telling you about, has been in conference with Jimmy Cordell. Cordell is a notorious gangster. Lanlie is in love with Sylvia Galen. He had a date with her tonight at a cabaret. She didn't keep it. He seemed impatient. After a while he became alarmed. He telephoned Morton's residence. We checked back on the call as it came in, and had it traced. He was calling from the cabaret. Later on, Jimmy Cordell, with a couple of body guards, met him at the cabaret. They talked for about 10 or 15 minutes. The newspapers were just hitting the streets with news of the kidnaping. Lanlie seemed to be all upset."

"Is he a good actor?" asked Temple.

"He's got that reputation. He's dramatic as the devil."

Might Be Accomplice.

"There's a chance the woman was his accomplice," Temple said. "It wouldn't be the first criminal attorney who had taken the chance to pick up some easy money by dabbling in a little crime on the side."

The telephone on the table rang. Terry picked up the receiver and heard the voice of the man who was covering the situation at the Morton residence.

"Here's a new one. A telegram has just been received from Judge Tallman J. Karpin. He says that he's very much disturbed over the kidnaping, that his heart bleeds for the suffering parents. He offers his services as an intermediary to get in touch with the kidnapers, and says that he is sending a copy of the telegram to the press, so that it can be broadcast to the kidnapers that he's willing to act as go-between."

Barclay Temple's eyes narrowed.

"What's Judge Karpin's record?" he asked.

Terry reached for another one of the telephones.

"I don't know," he said grimly, "but I'm going to find out."

Grandma Cooks a "Swell" Dinner.

After they got over the scare from that popcorn last night, they all fell in love with it, and after Howler had popped a lot of it and had put salt and lard on it, he couldn't pop it fast enough for them, and Grandpa said he would rather eat it than sure-enough white snow. Every now and then Jenny would stop eating and would shell a grain off the cob and lay it beside a popped grain and look wonderingly at it. And then she asked how in the world all of that big bunch of white stuff ever got into that little shell, but nobody could tell her.

They all ate till Howler told them that he was not going to pop any more, and he put up the popper and the other ears of corn, but Grandma had already eaten enough to make her feel good and comfortable and very much like talking. So, after she had got her knitting and had picked up a few dropstitches or loops or whatever she called them, she said:

"The way that corn swelled up made me think of the first time I ever cooked any whippoorwill peas. I was nothing but a child, and I never had done any cooking, and I didn't know a thing about what peas do when they get wet and hot. One day my mother had to go away right after breakfast, and she told me that she might not get back in time to start dinner, and that I must put a cupful of peas in the boiler with some water, and put it on the fire a good while before dinner time. There were two or three boilers in the kitchen, big ones and little ones, and I didn't know which one to put the peas in. And she had said to put on just a cupful. That looked like a mighty little bit of peas for dinner for three people, and I thought she had made a mistake, so I put three cupfuls in a boiler that they just about filled, and then I poured in some water and put the boiler on the fire. It wasn't but a little while before I heard water frying on the stove, and when I looked at the boiler I saw water and peas just spilling out of the top. I grabbed a little boiler and cup and I dipped out a lot of the peas and put them in this other boiler and put it on the stove.

"I noticed that the peas were a lot bigger than when I put them on the stove, and it seemed mighty funny that they had swelled up so big. I went back and sat down in the door to watch for my mother, but it wasn't but just a little while before I heard the water sputtering on the stove again and when I ran to it both boilers were running over with peas and water, and the peas were a lot bigger than they were a few minutes ago. For a few seconds I just stood there and didn't know what to do and then I saw the big dishpan hanging on a nail and I grabbed it and set it on the floor and I poured all the peas from both boilers in it and put it back on the stove.

"Well, those peas kept on getting bigger until they had that pan nearly filled when my mother came back. When she saw the other boilers lying on the floor and what looked like about a peck of peas boiling in the dishpan, she knew what had happened and she seemed not to know whether to scold or laugh, but when she looked at me and saw how worried I was, she decided to laugh, and she gave me a hug. But I shall never forget how long those peas lasted, for it seemed to me that we had nothing but peas for a week. And this popcorn reminds me of those peas, because it swells so."

"Cribbing" Blame Laid to Teacher

Cheating in school has been found to be in a large measure the responsibility of the teacher and not the product of the "bad character" of pupils, it was found in a survey of the out-of-school activities of adjusted and maladjusted elementary school students. The survey results were presented to a meeting of the American Psychological Association recently at Columbia University.

A general lowering in class morale was held to be the cause of cheating; and this in turn was found to depend on the teacher's personality and her ability to inspire confidence in the students.

The survey showed that maladjusted pupils spend their free hours in smaller play groups than do adjusted pupils, and that they favor more vigorous types of play and go to movies more frequently.

The maladjusted become so largely through reaction to unpleasant experiences in the classroom, the study found.

The survey was made by Martha Crumpton Hardy, of the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund.

Pallid Ears To Be Rouged This Autumn

Beauticians Decree That Lobes Be Made Up to Match Face.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP).—Feminine ears are going to be rouged this fall, painted to match the lips.

So it was said today at the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association convention, where leading hair stylists predicted that modern Eve's crown of glory was going to be worn so that it could be seen that she really had ears, although pale from long absence from the sun.

"Women have kept their ears covered by hair, hats and bathing caps until their aural appendages are white and naked-looking when suddenly exposed," said Emile Wilkens, of the Coiffeurs Guild, of New York, which confines its membership to 30 outstanding Gotham hairdressers.

And so, woman should give ears cosmetic attention, as follows:

First, her ears should be carefully powdered, and because those ears have been so long hid from view perhaps the powder should be a bit darker than that used for the face and neck.

Then the outer rim of the ear and the tip, especially the tip, should be rouged, and the paint carefully blended. The raised portion of the ear inside the rim might likewise be touched with rouge, but with a lighter hand.

The rouge should be the same shade as that used for lips or cheeks, and paste rouge is preferable.

The lobe should be more deeply rouged than the rim, and if one wants to be a bit daring, one can redden the lobe as brightly as the lips.

Canadian Family of 12 Boast Total Age of 809

The records of a family of 12, seven brothers and five sisters, whose combined ages total 809 years, have been filed at Drummondville, Canada, according to the Canadian press.

The father of this tribe, J. L. C. Manseau, a notary, died in 1897. His wife died five years earlier. The 12 children are the survivors of an original family of 16 children.

Velveteen Jackets Blend Well With Tweed Suits

Velveteen jackets are striking when combined with two-piece tweed suits. Many of the new ones blend with the darker tone of the tweed.

Tourists Total at Parks In Utah Nears Record

More tourists have visited the Southern Utah National Parks this year than in any similar period since the parks were established, according to a Federal bulletin.

The total number of visitors this year is expected to exceed 50,000 at Bryce Canyon Park. The greatest number of visitors recorded in former years was in 1931, when 41,572 tourists visited the park.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF September 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

On this date it might be advisable to be considerate in demanding or expecting service from others, regardless whether you are paying for it, or consider it should be offered voluntarily. An outside influence inducive to irascibility may have to be counteracted on this date by kindly thoughts and actions if you desire a peaceful state of mind. Profitable business possibly might be secured if consistent efforts are made to find it. Personality may probably play an important part on this day's commercial transactions.

If a woman and September 13 is your natal day, it might mean a great deal to you to learn to take life easier than you do. Do not let mole hills assume the proportion of mountains in your eyes. It may be possible if you have more confidence in the kindliness of human nature, as well as its trustworthiness, things that now appear obstacles in your path of progress will disappear. Writing, designing, teaching, painting or demonstrating are good fields of activity for one of your temperament. If you do not demand your husband to be a paragon of all the virtues you should find a great deal of happiness through matrimony.

The child born on September 13, as soon as it is old enough to understand, should be taught to express appreciation for all the good things bestowed on it and that grumbling over things it does not like will not be tolerated.

If a man and September 13 is your birthday, if you will avoid assuming too great a feeling of responsibility for the actions of others and confine yourself to your own, you may make marvelous headway in your profession or business. A wife should prove a blessing to you. Longevity and plenty of money should rightfully be yours.

Mexico's Women Prefer Home Life to Any Job

"Why Should We Do Man's Work Unless We Have To?" Ask Wives Hailed by Their Men as Exemplars of Feminine Mystery.

"To know the Mexican man is easy," so the saying goes, "but Mexican women are eternal mysteries."

Is this true? Is it, indeed, difficult to fathom the mind and heart of these natives of the mysterious land to the south of the Rio Grande?

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MEXICO City, Sept. 12.—Mexico, probably more successfully than any other country, has glorified the sentiment, "Woman's place is in the home."

By her own desire and in keeping with her heritage, every Mexican woman who can afford to do so devotes her time to her home, her husband, and her children.

"Because why should we go out and do man's work unless we have to?" asked one Mexican woman who moves in the highest circles of the Capital City. "You English-speaking women give up the comforts of an easy home life to make a place for yourselves in the world of business. We in Mexico realize we belong within the four walls of our dwellings. Some women, even here, must work for the public, but all of us prefer to stay within our homes."

It would seem this idea is prevalent throughout Mexico. For, while the market places are filled with ambulant women venders—full-skirted and black-shawled—displaying their feather pictures, drawn work, pottery, serapes, flowers and tropical fruit; while the streets are alive with bare-footed, ragged women selling lottery tickets; while one sees as many women behind shop counters in Mexico as in the United States—all these apparently must have some means of making money in order to exist.

Few Women in Professions.

Women lawyers, physicians, and even writers in Mexico constitute an almost negligible number.

"We have, of course, some women artists and a few musicians and actresses of great talent," said a Mexican man who had lived ten years in the United States, "but for the most part they are not full-blood Mexicans or they have spent most of their lives out of our native country.

"This does not mean our women have none but domestic interests," he hastened to explain, "for in our highest circles women are well educated and can speak three or four languages. Often, too, they can sing and play some musical instrument.

"But when a woman marries in Mexico her chief interests center around her home. If she has servants and leisure time, she frequently engages in welfare work, helping the poor Indians in the outlying districts or even those within the cities.

"It is a much better state of affairs than you have in the United States, where so many women are in the commercial world, in direct competition with men. Our women are not restless and eager for money, or a career, or fame. They are more charming than English women because they take more time to be so, and because they are more difficult to know, harder to understand.

The Cloistered Home.

"Women in the United States, on the other hand, are easy to become acquainted with because they have everything on the surface and because they work side by side with men in offices every day, the year around. Our women stay at home, devote themselves to their children and find enough leisure to enjoy life. Not all our women can do this, unfortunately, for many have to earn a living. But it will not always be so. Some day every woman in Mexico can spend her time in her home—where she belongs and where she delights to stay."

Very well. But what of these homes? In most cases presenting to the outside world a blank wall hard on the street, what is behind that stolid exterior that satisfies the Mexican woman and keeps her from longing to make a place for herself in the outside world?

Unfortunately, thousands of travelers spend months in Mexico without even crossing the threshold of a Mexican home. And they leave wondering how Mexican women can be content in dwellings as unattractive as they appear from the street.

Hand-Carved Furniture.

But the Mexican home in reality presents its worst side to the public. Behind the impersonal wall of the average dwelling is a patio filled with greenery, colorful tropical birds—parrots and parakeets—and perhaps a fountain and inviting carved benches. One glimpse of such a delightful garden is proof enough it contains beauty never suspected from the outside—loveliness not for the casual passer-by but for members of the family and friends.

The front door of a typical dwelling in the Capital opens into a reception hall leading to the patio. The "sala," corresponding to the living room in a home in the United States, has doors to both the hall and the patio.

Furniture for this, the dining room and the four bedrooms was made to order and carved from virgin wood by an expert craftsman. Paintings by Mexico's greatest modernistic artist, Diego Rivera, decorate the walls of the "sala," while a work of Velasquez is the only painting in the dining group.

Quaint Kitchens.

In every room heavy curtains of bright velvet hang on either side of long windows almost reaching the thick carpet covering the entire floor of each room.

But no feature of this house is more interesting than the kitchen. As there is no natural gas in Mexico, and as it is difficult to teach domestics how to use electric or oil stoves, this kitchen, as most others, has "braseros"—steel receptacles lined with tile, having an opening at the bottom. There are four of these in which charcoal is burned, the heat being regulated by fanning the charcoal from the lower opening.

Here "tortillas" and "enchilladas" are prepared in pottery vessels and cooked, later to be served in the dining room or on the second-floor veranda overlooking the verdant patio, where the Mexican hostess frequently entertains her friends.

Mexican Workers and a Home of Leisure

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I need your advice badly. I am a stenographer, 23 years old and have earned my own living since I left high school and finished up with a business course. When I was 21 I fell in love with a man of 28. He never actually asked me to marry him, but it seemed understood that we would. He never went with other girls, and I didn't go with any other man for a year and a half. Then he began to be rather cruelly indifferent by spells, not coming to see me and making no explanations for days at a time. I found out he was seeing other girls.

* * * *

I was living in another city at the time, and in order to get hold of myself, I gave up my job there and came here and got one. That was six months ago. Six weeks ago I met a man whom I didn't like at first, and refused several dates with him. Then I finally went to a show with him, and from that time on have been seeing him every night. He is very much in love with me; in fact, to an almost frightening degree. He seems almost insane over me. He urges me to marry him. I like him very much, but the only thing I don't like is his terrible jealousy.

* * * *

Naturally, I told him about this other man in my life, and how I had come here to try to figure things out and forget him if necessary. This other man has come to see me twice, and writes to me and telephones me occasionally. He tells me he thinks more of me than any girl he has ever known, and asks me teasingly why I ran away. But still he doesn't ask me to marry him.

* * * *

The second man tells me if I don't stop seeing this first man, whom he says means me no good, he is going to thrash him within an inch of his life. Other times, he says if I don't marry him, he will kill himself. Still other times, he is a wonderful, understanding, gentle, sympathetic companion, and there can be no doubt he loves me far more than this other man does.

* * * *

Do you think I should put the first man out of my life, and give this second opportunity for love a chance to develop? Do you think, if the cause for jealousy was removed, he would settle down into a more normal person? Sometimes his intensity frightens me. ELSBETH.

Get a New Deal.

DEAR ELSBETH: I think two cruelly selfish men are making your life a hell on earth. The first man is playing a cat-and-mouse game with you, and as the second one says, means you no good. But the second one, in his different way, is no better.

* * * *

Put them both out of your life. Don't write to, see, or talk with the first man. Make a definite break with him. If he possessed any real generosity of nature, knowing how much you care for him and how little he cares for you—judging from his performance—he would want you to forget him.

* * * *

And the second man is just as lacking in generosity. What feels for you may pass for love in his vocabulary, but it isn't love. It's a greedy, selfish, egotistical desire to possess and dominate. Love in its finest aspect is an infinite, ineffable gentleness, a desire to protect, to contribute a feeling of security, protectedness and limitless understanding. Has he shown such a feeling for you? Judging from your letter, I would say he hasn't.

* * * *

Unselfish love never exacts the undivided attention of the beloved. It never seeks to limit, to stifle, or to direct according to its own desires, the flowering of the loved one's personality.

* * * *

The second man is an ugly, if persistent and declarative suitor. He would be an even worse bet as a husband. Waste no time on developing his inverted emotions. There are other men in the world far worthier of your attentions, and you must give yourself time and opportunity to meet them. M. H.

Lovely Hands Are Possible To Housewife

May Be Attained by Use of Gloves and Much Cold Cream.

By Frances Mangum.

IT IS generally thought that lovely hands are an expensive luxury.

The average housewife will hold hers up with a resigned gesture and say, "How can I keep my hands smooth and white with all the work I have to do?"

She is right in asking the question. But she is wrong in stopping there. If she sought an answer she would find that with a minimum of care and small expense she could soon erase the wrinkles and remove the discolorations that mar the beauty of her hands.

First of all she must cultivate the habit of wearing gloves when she works around the house. When she sweeps and dusts she can wear loose cloth gloves. But when she washes dishes or clothes they must be rubber.

Secondly, she must not put her hands in hot water any oftener than possible. When she washes them she should use lukewarm water and plenty of a good but mild soap. Each time let her push the cuticle back from her nails with the towel. Now for a dab of lotion.

Every day without fail she should use a good hand cream, rubbing it well in and massaging it gently from the tips of the fingers back. It is this part of hand care that bothers most women. "We haven't the leisure time for this," they say. But it takes no leisure time. A second to apply the cream, three or four minutes to rub it in, and then they can don their gloves and continue their housework.

By making the care of the hands a part of the daily routine, it becomes a matter of no bother at all. In most cases it's thinking about it that turns it into an unpleasant performance. And then the expense of the creams and lotions bother some budgeteers. It shouldn't. There are dozens of kinds, ranging in price to meet any demand.

Deaconesses Vote "No" on Marriage

Work Held Too Exacting to Permit Home Ties.

No marriages for deaconesses of the Protestant Episcopal Church will be the rule if a majority report of a special commission appointed three years ago "to study the question" is adopted at the triennial general convention of that body which will open in Atlantic City October 10.

The deaconesses, according to a questiannaire submitted to them, favor the ban. Out of 148 who responded, 129 voted against married deaconesses.

"The reason given indicate that the deaconesses gave no thought of requiring celibacy, even by implication, as a condition of membership in the order, but rather because their experience shows that the work of a deaconess is so exacting that it can not be reconciled with the responsibilities and claims of marriage," says the majority report.

The vocation of a deaconess can not be a part time job; the woman who undertakes it must devote her entire time to it, laying aside all other concerns and occupations, according to the report.

A Renaissance Custom.

Many English artists still grind their own pigments, just as Michelangelo, Raffael and Leonardo did, reports a representative of the London Times. They say the colors are more permanent and shades can be depended on.

Few Frenchwomen Are Real Smokers

Rarely Take Cigarettes in Public Places.

"And only about 2 per cent of the women in France smoke at all," he adds. "Most of those who do smoke live in the cities. In the French provinces it would never enter a woman's head to smoke. There is no smoking among Frenchwomen of the working classes, either; there has never been a campaign against women smoking as in Germany, for there has been no need for it.

Llama and Ostrich Friendship Ceases

Zoo Companions Parted by Baby's Arrival.

WHEN, a few weeks ago, Victoria, a llama at the London Zoo, lost her mate, she appeared so lonely that her keeper put her in the same paddock with an ostrich named William, who was from Victoria's own South American country.

After a short period of coolness the two became firm friends. They even ate out of the same pan and took little walks together in their inclosure.

Then Victoria had a baby, and the friendship ended. William was interested in the newcomer, and cordial. But the arrival of her child changed Victoria strangely. Whenever William made friendly advances to the baby llama she flew into a rage.

The domestic situation is further complicated by the child's natural curiosity. He likes William and wants to cultivate his acquaintance. But every time he approaches the ostrich Victoria attacks him in ferocious fashion.

Women Take Gallant Stand Before the Ridicule of Men; Continue to Widen Horizons

By Malvina Lindsay

MEN OF the Nation should chip in and erect monuments to at least three notable feminine types; the old maid, the nit-wit girl, and the strong-minded Amazon. For these women have kept them laughing through the years.

* * * *

The collection of nineteenth century humorous magazines recently assembled in the rare bookroom of the Library of Congress reveal to what an extent man has kept his wit whetted and his ego bolstered by the simple expedient of laughing at women. Popular jokes of today show that he is still finding solace in ridiculing the same general type he found so amusing a half-century ago.

* * * *

Despite the advance of feminism, man-chasing in one form or another continues one of the funniest things in the world. The spinster, symbol of the loser in this pursuit, still is a sure-fire laugh getter, as almost any political or after-dinner speaker can testify. The dumb Dora also produces as much mirth and masculine self-esteem today as ever. And the Amazon, who has appeared variously as a reformer, a suffragette and a career woman, now, as a dowager of many chins and many fads, is a leading figure in humor magazines.

STRANGELY, the history of humor indicates that women have done little laughing at men. As a reviewer of Martha Bensley Bruere's and Mary Ritter Beard's recent "Laughing Their Way" points out, woman's humor has been directed chiefly at her own sex.

* * * *

It is not, however, that women haven't laughed at men. Among themselves they have smiled, even shouted with mirth at the petty Napoleons, the would-be Don Juans, the Mr. Wordly Wisemans, the Dangerous Dans, the Sentimental Tommies, and the aging Casanovas. But they have laughed tenderly as they would at lovable, naive, clumsy children. And they have been far, far too wise to laugh out loud.

* * * *

Perhaps being laughed at by men has been good for women's souls. It has kept them from taking themselves too seriously. It has helped give them realism in outlook. And above all it has fostered their courage.

To advance in the face of ridicule is, as everyone knows, much harder than to advance in the face of opposition. Most of the leaders of women's forward movements have fought their battles under the fire of men's jibes. The trail-blazers for higher education for women at first were derided as sexless fanatics. The early suffrage leaders—and indeed many of the later ones—were the butt of cartoon and coarse jest.

PROFESSIONAL women were caricatured and ridiculed every time they laid seige to a new occupational bulwark. Club women for half a century have been pictured by men jokesmiths as busybodies who neglected home and family. Even women who have taken the lead in humanitarian movements such as maternal welfare and the prevention of child labor have been ridiculed as "meddling old maids" and discontented wives.

* * * *

In view of the gallant way in which women have stood up to the world's laughter, there need be little fear that they can not take care of themselves in the future. If ridicule, deadliest of all weapons, has not halted their advance, certainly laws, movements, nor dictators' decrees can stop them in their efforts to expand their lives.

Farmers Seek One-Cent Rise For Milk Here

Retail Price Will Be 14 Cents a Quart if Demand Is Granted.

An increase of a cent a bottle or more, in the price of milk to District consumers is in prospect if demands of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association are complied with. The producers have determined to seek an increase of 4 cents a gallon on the so-called basic price of milk delivered in the District. Washington distributors are expected to pass this increase along to the consumer, bringing the retail price of milk up to 14 cents a quart.

Although the local distributors are not bound by any central authority, the little fellows go along with the big fellows when it comes to prices. "Of course the matter has just been talked about yet," one local dairy head said. "I don't know what will be done about prices to the consumer. They have not decided yet. I don't believe the increase will be more than 1 cent."

The basic price of milk now is 26 cents a gallon. To this is added 2½ cents as a farm premium paid the producer. A 4-cent increase on this would bring the price to 32½ cents a gallon. At 14 cents a quart the consumer would pay 56 cents a gallon.

Plans are being formed to combat the proposed increase to the consumer. Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, is in the forefront of this movement with Mrs. John J. Boyle, jr., chairman of the consumers' council.

District officials also are moving to forestall the increase. This they propose to do by taking off the hands of producers and processors the so-called surplus milk delivered in the District. This they propose to distribute among families on the relief rolls.

Cooperation of several dairies has been promised Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, to whom has been entrusted the task of getting the machinery of the plan in order.

Judges Appointed For 4-H Club Meet

Contests to Be Held Near Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The judges for the annual county-wide contests among 4-H Club members in demonstrations at the jubilee to be held September 15 at the Camp Frame near here, were announced as follows:

Mrs. Jennings Ashton, Mrs. Daisy Williams, Mrs. Dorothy McDonald, Miss Ameille McKown, Miss Minnie Thatcher, Mrs. Carra P. Gall and Mrs. O. C. Mason.

Bunker Hill is to be represented by Mary Ada Busey and Lydia Williams as the judging team and Helen Jane Tabb and Catherine LeFevre as the demonstrating team. Inwood 4-H Club chose Nellene Staub and Helen du Bruile as their demonstrating team, with "sewing finishes" as their project. The winning team will represent the county at Petersburg regional 4-H fair later.

Swimming, Diving Contests Set for Virginia Police Meet

Three Conventions Will Be Conducted at Staunton Next Week.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—As one of the entertainment features here next Monday evening in connection with the annual convention of the Virginia Police Executives Association, contests in swimming and diving, for the championship of Augusta County, will be staged in the natatorium at Staunton Military Academy.

The police executives will hold their annual banquet in the S. M. A. mess hall, and the nautical events will take place afterward. The competition is open to all residents of Augusta County, Waynesboro and Staunton. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded winners.

Events will be 25-yard dash for boys 14 and under; the same distance for girls in the same age group; the same distance, dash, backstroke, men, unlimited; 100-yard dash, free style, men, unlimited; 25-yard dash, backstroke, women, unlimited; 50-yard dash, free style, women, unlimited; fancy diving for men and for women. George P. Peyton, of the S. M. A. faculty, is arranging the program and will be in charge of the competition.

The State police will be in session here next Monday and Tuesday; the Virginia Building Inspectors' conference, Tuesday, and the League of Virginia Municipalities, Wednesday and Thursday.

In connection with these conventions, Staunton will stage an autumn festival next week, with special features—dances, parades, sports events and other entertainments and displays—scheduled for each day and night.

Roanoke Men to Speak.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Several Roanoke men will be on the program of the conventions of the Virginia Police Executives Association, the Building Officials' Conference of Virginia and the League of Virginia Municipalities to be held at Staunton September 17-20.

J. L. Manning, who recently retired as superintendent of police here, is first vice president of the Police Executives Association. He will make the response to the address of welcome at Staunton. D. P. Magann, city building inspector here and president of the Building Officials Convention, will preside at that session, and J. W. Comer, vice mayor of Roanoke, will preside at a meeting of mayors, councilmen and city managers.

President Accepts Williamsburg Bid

Will Receive Degree at W. & M., Pollard Says.

President Roosevelt was said today by former Gov. John Garland Pollard, of Virginia, to have accepted the invitation of William and Mary College at Williamsburg to receive an honorary degree October 20, the Associated Press reported.

The invitation was extended to the President by Pollard.

It was understood President Roosevelt would go to Roanoke October 19, to dedicate the new veterans' hospital there and would receive the degree from William and Mary the following day at exercises inaugurating John Stewart Bryan, of Richmond, as president of the college, and opening restored Williamsburg to the public. John D. Rockefeller, jr., who financed the restoration of Virginia's colonial capital, is among those to be present for the day's program.

Another excursion into Virginia also is planned by the Chief Executive. He has indicated he would motor down to Shenandoah National Park, the main thoroughfare of which is to be opened to the public Saturday, September 15. The date of his visit to the park has not yet been determined.

Louise Hendricks Elected by Teachers

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Miss Louise Hendricks was elected president of the Fredericksburg Teachers' Association at a meeting preceding opening of the 1934-35 school session.

Edward Walton was named vice president, Miss Gladys Warren, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Alma Keel, publicity agent. Delegates to the State teachers meeting in Richmond during the Thanksgiving holidays are Miss Marion Weedon and Miss Edith Boulward, with Mrs. Lula Rawlings and Edward Walton as alternates.

Two Oppose Drewry For Seat in Congress

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Representative P. H. Drewry of the Fourth Congressional District, who has served in the Congress for the past 14 years, will face two opponents in the November election. Dainel Killinger, Socialist, of Hopewell, and Mary Frances Leslie, of Burkeville, who will make the race as an independent candidate, are his opponents.

This is the first time Representative Drewry has had opposition from a woman.

Half Rural Virginia Called Barely Living

Richmond, Sept. 12 (AP).—Measuring Virginia on the basis of ability, income and living standards, W. W. Garnett, rural sociologist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, today said approximately half Virginia's rural population, even in normal times, may be classed as marginal.

He said he referred to those so near the margin economically and culturally that they are on a bare subsistence plane of living. In a classification he said he referred to the 150,000 poor whites, 118,000 white tenants and families, 164,000 white hired laborers and their families, 118,000 white marginal farm owners and marginal nonfarm rural people not included in other groups, and 325,000 Negroes.

Virginia G. O. P. Club Opens Drive Tomorrow

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—The Republican Club of Virginia will open the party's congressional campaign in Richmond Friday night.

Speakers will be L. C. Page, of Norfolk, candidate for the United States Senate, and Roy C. Parks, of Henrico, candidate for Congress from the Third District.

Dog Muzzling Act Suspended

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Suspension of the city ordinance requiring muzzling of dogs was voted by the city council last night following several weeks of agitation over the control of vicious dogs.

Widespread controversy over the observance of the dog muzzling law arose recently when two children were bitten by a dog owned by Broughton M. Rowe. Many citizens demanded a more stringent observance of the law. Mr. Rowe appeared before the council in a conference Monday night and declared that the biting occurred in his own yard, and not on the public street as had been previously asserted.

The ordinance was adopted in 1913, and provides for a fine of from $1 to $3 for any person whose dog is permitted to run at large without a muzzle. It contains a provision for suspension at the order of the council. Suspension for eight months was moved by Councilman George L. Hunter. The council took no action on a later ordinance requiring that any dog know to be vicious shall be killed.

Appropriation of $667 to assist the General Textile Corporation, local silk manufacturers, in carrying on its activities here was voted. The silk mills employs approximately 500 residents of Fredericksburg and the surrounding territory. City Treasurer C. R. Howard was voted an additional $300 compensation for work handled by his office on FERA activities. The present salary is $1,400 per year.

Frederick County Honor Court Chosen for Baltimore Event

Mrs. Charles Mathias to Act as Duchess Oct. 5 and 6.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Announcement was made yesterday that a court of honor had been selected to represent Frederick County in the "Soul of Maryland," a tercentenary pageant to be held in Baltimore October 5 and 6, at which time similar courts will represent other counties of the State. About 3,000 persons will take part in the event, which will be under the auspices of the Maryland Tercentenary Commission in the Baltimore Stadium.

The Frederick County court will be Mrs. Charles McC. Mathias, as duchess; Miss Helen Potts and Miss Mary Cromwell, maids of honor; Miss Virginia Gambrill and Charles McC. Mathias, jr., pages, and Richard Cromwell, standard bearer. Mrs. Mathias, formerly Miss Theresa Trail, is one of Frederick's most attractive and popular young matrons, and Miss Potts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Potts, was chosen Miss Frederick County at the recent historical tercentenary pageant in this city.

The selection of the local group was made by the Frederick Civic Club at the request of Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, who has charge of the selection of the courts and has asked women's clubs in the counties to select the representatives from those localities. The Frederick group will wear costumes appropriate to the earliest period in Freedrick's history. Mrs. C. W. Gregory, president of the Civic Club, and an executive committee from the club is in charge of the local phase of the event. Rural clubwomen will assist in making the pageant a success.

"The Soul of Maryland" depicts the founding of the State in drama, music and dance. It was written by Matthew Page Andrews, Maryland historian, and is sponsored by a large group of prominent Marylanders.

15-Minute Sentence Is Served by Woman

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—A 15-minute jail sentence was served here last night by Mrs. Nettie C. Carter, of this city, for disorderly conduct during a trial at which she accused John Bryant, colored, of disorderly conduct in the vicinity of the Colonial Hotel here, of which she is manager, according to Magistrate Leven H. Hall.

Bryant was given one year in the House of Correction, but his sentence was suspended.

2 Face Holdup Charge; Arrested on 'Hunch'

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Harry Wheeler, 26, Binghamton, N. Y., and John Lamabee, alias Johnson, 25, Harrisburg, Pa., arrested here on a "hunch" by a local officer, were returned to Harrisburg, where they face a charge of holding up a gas station attendent last Friday night.

They confessed to the theft of an automobile at Elmira, N. Y. and Capt. Clarence Emmert, of the local police department, will go to Elmira to testify this week before the grand jury.

Banquet Committee Named.

Westminster, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Francis Keefer, Westminster, and Howard Roop, New Windsor, were appointed last night as members of a committee to arrange for the annual banquet of the Independent Retail Grocerymen's Association of Carroll County. No definite date for the banquet has been announced.

Rules Changed By Milk Group

Interstate Association's Territory Split Into 27 Districts.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—B. H. Welty, of Waynesboro, president of the Interstate Milk Producers Association, has announced important changes in the by-laws of the organization.

The changes made by the board of directors reduce the executive committee from nine to seven members, provide for cancellation of membership, permit withdrawal of active members, and divide the territory served by the association into 27 districts.

Memberships may not be canceled by members who cease producing milk. Active members may withdraw by surrendering their stock and contracts. Only active milk producers may take out new stock, the amount to be governed by the size of herds. Members taking out additional stock must sign the sales contract of the association.

Under the new division of territory there is a division for each of the 27 members of the board of directors. The changed by-law also provides that ten or more members in a district where a vacancy on the board is to occur may sign nominating petitions and all members of the district must vote by mail on the names, the three highest to be the official nominees of the district.

Mr. Welty said there is an ample supply of milk now available in the Philadelphia milk shed, and that receipts are 9 per cent higher than in 1933.

More Pupils in Carroll.

Westminster, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—With a present enrollment of approximately 6,500 pupils in Carroll County schools, school officials believe that by the end of September more than 7,000 students will be registered, exceeding last year's maximum enrollment of 6,824.

Hatfield Addresses Railroad Conductors

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Members of the legislative board of the Order of Railroad Conductors held an executive session here today. Senator Henry D. Hatfield, Republican nominee for reelection; John B. Easton, president of the State Federation of Labor, and Charles E. Jarrett, State Labor Commission, addressed the meeting.

Committee members present included E. H. Johnson, of Bluefield, vice chairman; E. M. Lee, of McMechan, secretary-treasurer; W. E. Burton, of Huntington; L. V. Atha, of Grafton; C. R. Howell, of Parkersburg; H. W. Doolittle, of Raleigh; Owen McCormick, of St. Albans; B. R. Bragg, of Gassaway; J. R. Crist, of Huntington; D. F. Phares, of Elkins, and J. R. Casebolt, of Charleston, chairman, who presided.

"Did you create Old Golds especially for people with sensitive throats?" asks Dolores Del Rio

Dear Miss Del Rio:

Our aim, when we created Old Golds, was simply to produce a smoother cigarette than America had ever known before . . .

A cigarette that would appeal to everyone by reason of its mellow mildness—its freedom from rasp and bite.

The tobaccos used in Old Gold are free from artificial flavoring and other seasonings. Hence the throat-ease . . . without any irritation even for the most sensitive throat.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.

The Capital's Younger Set—

Francesca McKenney, a favorite wherever Washington Society gathers, who writes—"I find my Ford V-8 very economical and easy to drive. It fills every need."

CASTS ITS VOTE FOR THE FORD V-8

ALL eyes are on Washington these days. For our fast-moving capital represents the entire nation. And when it comes to motor cars you'll find that Washington's younger set has had its say. They like the Ford V-8. For its smart, modern beauty—for its luxurious comfort. And for its economical, dependable performance.

Drive the new Ford V-8 yourself and find out why. The only V-8 engine in a car selling for less than $2500 is one reason . . . but there are many others. Brakes that act surely and smoothly. Ease of steering and quick parking, so important to women. An all-steel body with safety glass. Plenty of body room. Luxury equipment . . . from quality upholstery to rustless metal fittings.

Remember, the new Ford V-8 is even more economical to operate than any Ford car ever built. You actually save money, too, when you buy it. Ford prices were not raised this year—instead, substantially reduced. Easy terms through Universal Credit Company—the Authorized Ford Finance Plan. Call on your nearest Ford dealer soon and ask for a demonstration.

FORD DEALERS OF WASHINGTON

No one loves sport more than attractive, vivacious Virginia Crisp, as popular on local tennis courts as her smart Ford V-8 is among those of her set.

Lucia Murchison, Director of Social Service at the Junior League-sponsored Children's Hospital, states—"The Ford car is most satisfactory in every way . . . ideal for any woman who of necessity must drive in congested traffic."

DELIVERED PRICES FOR THE FORD V-8 ARE LOW! $609.03 AND UP

Turnesa Upsets Dunlap as Many Stars Fail in Amateur; McCarthy Bows

District Ace Beaten by 5 and 4

1933 Champion Loses, 3 and 2, to 'Baby' of Golfing Brothers.

Little, Eavns, Yates in Running; Somerville, Westland Out.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

THE Country Club, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Not fully recovered from the shocking experiences of the first two days, the all-match play National Amateur Golf Championship today went through another series of volcanic golfing upheavals, in which the defending title holder, freckle-faced George Dunlap, of New York, 1933 champion, was numbered among the casualties.

Dunlap, battling grimly to regain his prized simon-pure possession, went the way of all good men, bowing to the versatile 19-year-old Willie Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., 3 and 2, in his morning battle.

Dunlap was not alone. Relegated to the sidelines with him were a flock of golfing greats and near-greats, who found the pace of today's "suicide" matches much too fast, and wilted before the withering blast unloosed by the younger brigade, including Martin F. McCarthy, Washington's last hope, who lost to Bob Kepler, of Dayton, Ohio, 5 and 4.

Littered With Wreckage.

Tonight the fairways and greens of mighty old Brookline were littered with the wreckage of the hopes of such stars as Ross ("Sandy") Somerville, Canada's handsome athlete, champion in 1932; Jack Westland, of Chicago, Walker Cup star, 1931 finalist; H. Chandler Egan, of Medfort, Oreg., 1904-05 champion; Zell Eaton, of Oklahoma City, Western amateur champion; Jess Sweetser, of New York, former British and American champion; Maurice McCarthy, of Cleveland, former Walker Cup ace; Leland Hamman, of Paris, Tex., trans-Mississippi title holder, and Albert ("Scotty") Campbell, of California, Canadian amateur ruler.

Sixty-four started out bright and early this morning, and by nightfall the field was reduced to 16. Tomorrow they continue the "suicidal" procedure of playing two matches, and on Friday the four survivors will start the 36-hole grind.

With 125-pound Willie Turnesa, who is one of six golfing brothers, member of the most famous golfing family in America, taking over the role of "Giant killer" by removing Champion Dunlap, and later blasting out the Canadian threat, John B. Nash, 4 and 2, that championship reached the stage where it would be quite difficult to select a probable winner.

Turnesa Shows Form.

Turnesa, as smooth a golfer as ever trod over these hallowed grounds, was only one over par against Dunlap, and one over against Nash. He is playing almost flawless golf.

Joining little Willie in the fifth round were Lawson Little, odds-on favorite, the British champion, and Chick Evans, of Chicago, the lone surviving former title holder. Charlie Yates, of Atlanta, favored in many quarters on the strength of his performance in winning the National Intercollegiates and his scoring in his matches today, and Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, Southern amateur champion, remained to uphold the prestige of Dixie. Two more Californians, Ernest Pieper, of San Jose, and Ernest Combs, of Long Beach, triumphed today, as did a pair of Texans, David (Specs) Goldman and Reynolds Smith, both of Dallas, the latter State champion, and conqueror of Somerville on the nineteenth hole this afternoon.

The Scot threat, Tony Torrance, British member of the Walker Cup team, flung his challenge at the 16 survivors after his two impressive victories, and became the lone foreign contestant.

Five other comparatively unknown golfers continued in the running. They are Harry (Mahatma) Gandy, of Oklahoma City; Mark J. Stuart, of New York; Don Arm-

Goldman, Texan, Winner After Trailing by Hole at the Turn.

(Post Staff Correspondent).

THE COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—The last of the Virginia survivors in the National Amateur Golf championship was blasted out of the tournament today when David (Specs) Goldman, of Dallas, Tex., was runner-up for the Western championship, defeated Bobby Riegel, of Richmond, young Middle Atlantic title holder, 2 and 1.

Riegel held his ground well during the first nine, taking the lead on the first hole, winning the fifth, but dropping the sixth and seventh, the sixth to a birdie 3. A 5 on the ninth gave the Virginian a 1-up advantage at the turn, but Goldman birdied the tenth for a win, took the fifteenth, and ended the battle with a par 4 to Riegel's 5 on the seventeenth.

Rowe's Fiancee Hies Self to City

Eldorado, Ark., Sept. 12 (AP).—Slender, brunette Edna Skinner was off to the big city today to see for herself why the baseball world has proclaimed as a hero the man she is going to marry, Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe.

Refusing to consider the possibility that Detroit may not participate in the world series, Miss Skinner plans to remain with the club for the remainder of the season and during the annual classic.

She and Lynwood plan to be married in Detroit after the series. They will visit Jimmy Foxx and his wife for a honeymoon before returning to Arkansas in time for the quail hunting season, which Rowe ranks next to baseball in sport.

Red Sox Cut Tiger Lead, Win, 1-0

Detroit Tops Yankees 3½ Games, Still in Hitting Slump.

Hits by Almada and Reynolds and Fly Bring Game's Lone Run.

DETROIT, Sept. 12. — Although held to four hits, the Boston Red Sox made three of them count today as they shut out the Detroit Tigers, 1 to 0, and reduced the league leaders' margin over the second place Yankees, who were idle, to 3½ games.

The lone run of the game was manufactured in the fourth inning, when Mel Almada, Carl Reynolds and Rick Ferrell drove out singles. Ferrell's blow did not figure in the scoring, however, as Almada, Spanish recruit, scored from third after Goose Goslin had caught Julius Solters' long fly.

Tigers in Slump.

The Tigers remained in a hitting slump, which has led to the tightening of the American League race. While they outhit the Sox, 6 to 4, today, they were unable to cluster their blows off Fred Ostermueller and Rube Walberg. Goslin and Gerald Walker connected with four of the hits, two each. Hank Greenberg revived the Tigers' hopes in the ninth, when he doubled with one out, but was left stranded on third.

Ostermueller opened on the mound for the Sox, but was taken out after Fox had led off with a single and Gehringer walked with only one out. Walberg came in and held the Bengals to five hits, no more than one in a single inning, for the remainder of the game.

Pitcher's Pinch Homer Futile, Tribe Beats A's

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 12 (AP).—Closing their season with the Philadelphia Athletics today, the Cleveland Indians won a pitcher's battle, 3 to 2, giving them a one-game edge in the current five-day series.

Johnny Marcum smashed out a pinch home run in the ninth, but it wasn't quite enough to win. The Indians won 13 of their 22 games with the Mackmen this year, the first time in several seasons they have had the margin.

Hubbell Is Star As Giants Add To Margin

Gives Pirates Six Hits in 3-2 Victory; Singles in Tying, Winning Runs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP).—The New York Giants lengthened their lead over the Cardinals to 5½ games today when Carl Hubbell shaded Ralph Birkofer in a southpaw pitching duel, to give the world champions a 3-to-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and an even break in the four-game series.

The Giants' screw-ball ace not only held the Pirates to six hits, but started the two-run rally that tied the score in the sixth, and rapped out a single that brought Blondy Ryan home with what proved to be the deciding tally in the seventh. The triumph was Hubbell's twentieth of the season and marked his forty-fourth appearance on the mound, only one under his total number of games last season.

Lieber Singles Two Home.

Hank Lieber, who was advanced to the clean-up position, drove in the Giants' first two runs after the Pirates had got to Hubbell for two hits in the fifth. With the bases loaded, as the result of singles by Hubbell and Joe Moore and a base on balls to Terry, Lieber poked a single into center field.

Hubbell and Birkofer hurled hitless ball for the first four innings. The Pirate hurler got out of a hole in the fifth when, with Giants on first and third, Danning grounded into a double play. Altogether the Giants got to Birkofer for eight hits, six of them coming in the two innings in which the champions scored all of their runs.

Sykes Credited With Pitching First Curve for W. & L. in 1878

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 12 (AP). George A. Sykes, who died in Marietta, Ga., and was buried at Aberdeen, Miss., today, is credited with pitching the first curved ball in Southern collegiate baseball.

It was in the spring of 1878, the story goes, that Sykes, pitching for the Washington and Lee team, uncorked his curve against the University of Virginia nine and so led the Lexington club to an easy 12-to-0 victory.

Sykes, it is recorded here, "invented" the curve ball when a student at Washington and Lee in the spring of 1877, but did not use it until the next year.

Only three members of the Washington and Lee nine of 1878 survive. They are William M. McElwee, of Lexington, catcher for Sykes; Dr. Ed Randall, of Galveston, Tex., and W. B. McCleur, of Chicago.

A protrait of Sykes in his baseball uniform hangs now in the Alumni Building at Washington and Lee, and a similar portrait of McElwee has been completed and will be hung by its side at an early date. Both portraits were done by Dudley Ferguson Hewitt, a niece of Sykes.

Yacht Races Have Social Angles

Newport's Plans Call for Dinners, Dances This Week.

Week-end's Program Lists Rowing, Soccer and Cricket.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 12 (AP).—Newport, yachting capital of the world by virtue of the races for the America's Cup, is playing the gracious hostess in her handsomest manner and few cities have ever embarked upon such an ambitious program of entertainment for visiting sportsmen.

All hands involved in the international competition have been invited by Mayor Mortimer A. Sullivan to attend a dinner tendered by the city Thursday night, at which T. O. M. Sopwith, the British challenger, and Mrs. Sopwith, a member of Endeavour's afterguard, will be guests of honor. Invitations include all the America's Cup boats—Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow, the defender; Yankee and Weetamoe, unsuccessful candidates for that honor, and Vanitie, Gerard Lambert's old and now ineligible cup aspirant.

British Officers Invited.

Capt. Wake-Walter, of the British warship H. M. S. Dragon, who arrived here on a challenge of her own, and his officers, Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, of the U. S. S. Arkansas, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt are among the invited guests.

Although President Roosevelt is not expected in Newport before the first race, next Saturday, Mrs. Roosevelt may come in time for the dinner.

The Dragon's arrival will mark resumption of another international rivalry. She has challenged the U. S. S. Salt Lake City to a 12-oared boat race for the Lord Battenbergh Cup, which the American cruiser now holds. The cup is a perpetual trophy for competition between American and British sailormen.

Time has been the only check upon Newport's desire to entertain her visitors, and it will be difficult to find an idle hour for the duration of the races.

Saturday night the crews of Rainbow and Endeavour will be guests of honor at a dance at the Torpedo Station, in the "House that Jack Built." Uncle Sam's enlisted men were responsible for construction of the building.

Yachtsmen May Dance.

If the yachtsmen are not worn out by Tuesday night they will be expected to dance aboard the Dragon. And if the party on the Dragon does not finish them, they will be expected at the City of Newport's dance, on a date yet to be set.

Soccer and cricket games have been arranged especially for the enjoyment of the British visitors, between Newport teams and teams composed of members of Dragon's crew. The British Speaking Union is trying to find a quiet evening on which to hold a smoker for the crews of Endeavour, Dragon and the American yachts. In addition to all the public and semipublic functions, the summer colony is trying to wedge in private dinners and entertainments.

Warneke Wins 21st, Beating Braves, 5-2

Boston, Sept. 12 (AP).—Lon Warneke scored his twenty-first victory of the season and his fifth straight today when he twirled the Chicago Cubs to a 5-2 win over the Boston Braves.

The game marked the final meeting for the 1934 season between the two teams, their series record being 12 wins for Boston as against 10 for the Cubs.

Vance, J. Dean Fail, Phils Jolt Cards, 3-1

Philadelphia, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Phillies sank another harpoon into the pennant hopes of the St. Louis Cardinals today when they suddenly turned on Dazzy Vance and Dizzy Dean in an eighth-inning rally and scored all their runs for a 3-to-1 win.

Their attack came with two out in the eighth, and at a time when the Cards' one-run edge—gained, incidentally, through a long homer by the "Old Dazzler," himself—was looming larger and larger.

On five hits the three runs were scored. Jimmy Wilson singled and after Pinch-hitter Andy High lined into a double play, George Davis doubled, and Bartell and Chiozza singled. That was enough for Vance, but Dean was treated little better as Ethan Allen hit safely to score Bartell and Chiozza.

Clarify, Paying $50 Mutuel, Upsets Dope With Length Victory at Rockingham

Four Winners For Jockey Peters

Pretty Soft, $52, Among Quartet; Sation Second in Feature.

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 12 (AP).—Clarify, a rank outsider from W. C. Stroube's Barns, upset the calculations at Rockingham Park today when he won the Suffolk handicap for his first victory since early in the season.

Jockey Peters was the day's riding hero, piloting home four winners. In the opener, he scored on Pretty Soft, the day's biggest-priced winner, which paid $52.40 for $2, while he made it two in a row with Hasty Peter in the second. Molly Greenock won the fourth under Peter's guidance and he ended his day's work with a victory on Polly Cee in the seventh.

Slow to settle into his best stride, Clarify the 4-year-old son of Chatterton, which once starred for M. L. Schwartz, closed with a rush in the stretch to score by a length. He won $2,120 for his owner and paid his scattered backers $50.40 for a $2 win ticket in the mutuels.

Sation, Choice, Second.

At the end of the 5½ furlongs, run in 1:05 2-5, was G. D. Widener's speedy Sation, heavily burdened with 132 pounds and the 2 to 1 choice. Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Bamboula, another outsider, lost the place by a neck.

With ten starters of all ages, H. M. Haword's 3-year-old Polyclétus, trained by Earl Sande, jumped into an early lead. The Gelding set a burning pace and lead Sation by one and one-half lengths heading into the stretch with Clarify in fifth place after moving up from ninth. Charley Landolt gave the Stroube colt a great ride in the stretch, however, while Polyclétus weakened, finishing sixth. Time Supply, the second choice, was seventh.

Dark Secret Wins.

Belmont Park Racetrack, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret ran to the form that made him champion cup horse of 1933 when he galloped to victory in the Manhattan Handicap for the second year in a row here this afternoon. Carrying 122 pounds, the 5-year-old son of Flying Ebony-Silencia completed 1¼ miles in the sterling time of 2:29 1-5. Only two-fifths of a second away from Man 'o War's record, to win by four lengths.

The Maemere Farm's Somebody was second, eight lengths in advance of Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart's Lady Reigh. Watch Him and Red John, both representing Mrs. J. D. Hertz, brought up the rear. The race was worth $4,230 to the winner, which was favorite at 4 to 5. Charles Kurtsinger earned a double by dint of the victory.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRETTY SOFT, $52.40, $17.60, $10.70; SWEEPOGAN, $4.70, $4.80; WITTEKIND, $12.70.

PRETTY SOFT went into contention in the opening strides, followed in pursuit of the pace, fought it out with SWEEPOGAN for the lead and drew out in the last furlong. SWEEPOGAN had speed from the start and fought it out gamely to the end. WITTEKIND, restrained early, closed with good speed in the last quarter mile. WEEDIDIT, shuffled back at the start, closed with good energy on the outside, but was unable to reach the leaders. DONNA TUTTI moved up fast leaving the back stretch and held on gamely in the drive. MISS VINCE was unable to reach the leaders. SUNDROPS weakened in the last furlong. VALISE slow to begin, was outrun throughout. JOHN GILPIN had brief early speed, faltering badly in the last five-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:11½. Winner, Mrs. J. Burks' blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HASTY PETER, $5.00, $2.70, $2.60; HAPPY BOOT, $2.90, $2.70; JIM ORMONT, $6.20.

HASTY PETER went into the command at once, was never menaced, winning with speed in reserve. HAPPY BOOT, in closest pursuit of the pace from practically the beginning, held on gamely to the end. TOM ORMONT moved up readily on the outside down the back stretch, loomed up threateningly nearing the stretch, but was unable to improve his position in the drive. MEETING PLACE made up some ground. YANCEY closed willingly to urging, but was unable to enter into contention. SARSITA was outrun. WISE REVUE stopped badly.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start, good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34½. Off at 3:36½. Winner, J. E. Kenney's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY SABLE, $5.50, $3.10, $2.70; CIVIL WAR, $3.80, $3.40; TEDDY CARL, $6.00.

LADY SABLE, with the wall, were down CIVIL WAR nearing the stretch, went slightly wide on the run, but closed willingly and outlasted CIVIL WAR at the end. The latter had been early speed, made bold bid after saving ground in the stretch, continued determinedly to the close. TEDDY CARL, outpaced early, closed with good energy in the last three-sixteenths. UNLAWFUL, well placed throughout, weakened slowing nearing the end. NEW FLAG saved ground, but was unable to reach the leaders. RADIATOR could never reach the leaders. PROSECUTOR tired.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:19. Off at 4:22. Winner, T. F. Swords' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOLLY GREENOCK, $4.80, $3.30, $2.40; TEETER TOTTER, $3.70, $2.60; TUTTICURIO, $3.30.

MOLLY GREENOCK took command immediately at the start, drew clear in the first furlong and, hard ridden through the stretch, was never seriously threatened. TEETER TOTTER, slow to settle, moved up fast leaving the back stretch, came to the outside for closing test. TUTTICURIO was a forward factor all the way. BON MOT, well placed from the beginning, weakened slightly in the closing strides. HARDWARE went evenly, though never able to enter into contention. APPLE FRITTER was outrun. IROLITA trailed throughout.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $2,500; added. The Suffolk Handicap. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 5:01. Winner, W. C. Stroube's br. c. (4), by Chatterton—Maharanee. Trained by A. G. Tarn. Value to winner, $2,120; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:05 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLARIFY, $50.40, $20.50, $12.90; SATION, $4.20, $3.20; BAMBOULA, $5.90.

CLARIFY, slow to settle into his best stride, came with a rush on the outside through the stretch and was going away at the end. SATION, unruly at the post and hard ridden, wore down POLYCLETUS in the stretch, but weakened slightly under his impost. BAMBOULA closed with a rush in the last three-sixteenths. FRAIDY CAT, slow to begin, moved up on the outside and closed determinedly in the last furlong. MY DANDY, away fast, dropped far back, but came gamely through the stretch run. POLYCLETUS, hustled to the front, weakened through the last eighth. TIME SUPPLY never entered into contention at any stage of the journey. BLACK HAND and KAWAGOE both stopped in the last furlong. CLOTHO was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:34½. Off at 5:36½. Winner, T. F. Swords' ch. g. †Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BYLONA, $8.60, $4.40, $3.80; MORALIST, $12.40, $7.60; LOFTY LADY, $6.60.

BYLONA, outrun for the first six furlongs, came to outside in the stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in last few strides. BELOW COST had good speed from the start, withstood a determined bid from LOFTY LADY and, despite holding ability to wander, was entitled to the winner's bid. MORALIST, restrained early, finished steutly in the last furlong. LOFTY LADY lost ground at the first turn, obtained clear sailing on the inside in the run down the back stretch, showed in front briefly, but weakened in the last furlong. BITTYBIT was unable to reach the leaders. SCOTCH SOLDIER was in close quarters in the run down the back stretch and tired. Hunter claimed a foul against BELOW COST, which was allowed.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 6:08½. Off at 6:09½. Winner, A. A. Baroni's ch. f. (3), by Moonraker—Crescent. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLLY CEE, $5.70, $4.30, $2.80; COUSIN GEORGE, $7.50, $4.80; BLIND BROOK, $4.60.

POLLY CEE, leaving from the outside post position, took command in the run to the first turn, drew into a lead and steadied along in front, held COUSIN GEORGE safely at the end. The latter, restrained for a mile, closed fast under hard riding but was unable to reach the winner. BLIND BROOK, in closest attendance of the winner for most of the way, weakened slightly in the last sixteenth. SOUTHARD, a trailer for the first six furlongs, made up some ground, though unable to menace the leaders. BERT JOHN was never a factor. BOY CRAZY was outrun throughout. HERO OLGA stopped badly.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 6:41. Off at 6:41½. Winner, Mrs. B. Bowman's ch. m. (5), by Vespasian—Odessa. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48 1-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:54.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZEMBLA, $7.90, $4.10, $3 80; BRIGHT BIRD, $4.40, $4.00; DAISABURO, $6.80.

ZEMBLA improved her position in the last half mile, came to the outside in the stretch and, closing stoutly, wore down BRIGHT BIRD and was going away at the end. BRIGHT BIRD, in close pursuit of the early pace, went up the front leaving the back stretch, was unable to keep pace with the winner when challenged. DAISABURO, a trailer for first six furlongs, closed with a rush in the last quarter. BOOCAP went into contention with a rush leaving back stretch, but faltered in the drive. WOOLORAC went evenly. PALATINE opened up a long early lead, but stopped after going six furlongs. DARK VISION fired.

East-West Rivalry Is Added Feature in President's Cup Regatta Races Here

Coast's Best Drivers Also Entered

Champs, Record-Holders of All Sections Battle for Honors.

L. GORDON LEECH, the smiling individual whom the New York papers call "the busy little man who no sooner gets done with one President's Cup race than he pitches in preparations for another," wiped the moisture from his perspiring brow, emerged more fully from the mound of papers blanketing his desk and prepared to talk.

When Mr. Leech talks, you listen; he talks that way.

"Now take these outboard races," began the lively chairman of the cup race committee. "They're going to furnish a regular fight between East and West drivers. Today we got entries from James Davis, of Chicago, winner in Class B in the National championships at Chicago last year; Bob Myers, also of Chicago, Class A National professional champion; Bob Elder, of Dayton, Ohio; Frank Vincent, of Oklahoma, another record holder, and Jack Smith, of Cincinnati, divisional champion last year.

East Well Represented.

"Now this is going to be real serious business. You know the majority of outboard records today are held by Western and Middle Western drivers. Then, this is what these Western boys' entries coming i means. They're going to run into a bunch of Easterners like Chart Joslin, winner of the Albany-New York race; Lew Carlisle, world champion Class F driver; Cab Walyer, New York State champion and winner of the Gov. Lehman outboard trophy, and Fred Jacoby, professional winner of the Trenton-to-Philadelphia marathon.

"Not only that," Mr. Leech continued, "but we will probably have the best outboarders from the Pacific Coast. This week-end the National championships are being held at Philadelphia, and the Pacific Coast crowd will, in all probability, come right down here for the cup races. All these drivers travel between 45 and 60 miles an hour."

Vetoes Single Buoy Idea.

Mr. Leech paused long enough to gather breath and then proceeded to launch a broadside at the recent suggestion of Frithiof G. Ericson, veteran driver, to have single buoys in the races this year instead of the usual five at the turns.

"He's all wrong," exploded the voluble Mr. Leech. "It was decided ten years ago that you can't have turns with single buoys. What you want in these races is performance plus safety. You can't get either with single buoys."

The chairman shifted over to the President's Cup race itself:

"Now right in the biggest race on the program, we're going to have an East-West battle. Aaron DeRoy, the wealthy Detroit man, has hired Bennett Hill—you know the veteran auto driver—to run his boat, and, with George Reis, from Lake George, driving against him, you'll see some fun. Here's the reason.

"George set all the Detroiters back on their heels, you know, when he went out there last year with the El Lagarto and won the Gold Cup. They've been after him ever since.

Delphine IV Entered.

"There'll be other Eastern drivers in there, too—Bill Horn with his Delphine IV, from Newport News, and E. T. Chase, with his new Gold Cup boat, the Arctic Tern, just to mention a couple. We'll have another East-West battle between Herb Mendelson, of Detroit, and Jack Dunn, of Old Forge, N. Y., and Miami, in the 850-cubic-inch class. They're both old rivals on the water."

Eagles Want Sunday Game.

The Alexandria Eagles would like to arrange a game for Sunday with either the Colesville or Rockville nines. They have won 26 out of 33 starts this season. Call Alexandria 2130 between 5:30 and 6:30 p. m.

Benning A. C., Post Association champs in the Prince Georges League, seeks a game for Sunday with a strong unlimited team. Call Decatur 2859-R.

EWA Craves Action.

Emergency Works Administration is anxious to book games for September 16 and September 30. Call Adams 5788 for final arrangements.

Prince George Bowlers Meet.

An important business meeting of the board of managers of the Prince Georges County Bowling League will be held tonight at the Arcade alleys in Hyattsville at 8 o'clock.

Takoma Gridmen Meet.

The Takoma Northern football team has signed John Sulhoff as coach and will make preparations for the season at 7:30 p. m. tonight at Takoma Fire House.

Saints Eleven Ready.

The St. Martin's 115-pound class football team is seeking games. Call Jack Grove, North 9462-W.

Isherwood Wants Foreign Foes.

Tennis Match Turns Dog Fight—Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

WEST SIDE TENNIS STADIUM, Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The great tennis finals between Fred Perry, of England, and Wilmer Allison, of the United States, began with a terrific cloudburst, that broke over this quaint pseudo-English village 20 minutes before game time, and a statement made by Mr. Perry in the clubhouse as he was dressing for the fray that if he lost to Mr. Allison it would not be because of his ankle.

This is a typically English gesture. The English have trained themselves in the gentle and sometimes difficult art of sportsmanship for many centuries. I have the feeling somehow that in this case an American might have said—"Well, I will go out there in spite of my bad ankle. Also it is very slippery which may handicap me still more, but I will stay in there as long as I can." This would have set the alibi nicely. Mr. Perry if he loses will have no alibi, except that we do know he has a badly swollen ankle which has been baked, strapped and taped.

Should Be Two Winners.

As the match begins, you wish that somehow both might win—Perry for his charm, courage and courtesy, and Allison for his single-handed battle to prove the Davis Cup committee wrong in their dismissal of Allison when they sent for him to come to Europe and then sent him right back again. Allison beat Stoefen and Wood, two Davis Cup players to get into the finals, and if he can beat Perry it will make him pretty well champion of the world as well as causing the cup committee to look pretty weak.

Now there is a pretty duel going on, with Perry giving a marvelous exhibition of competitive tennis. It calls for a great heart and a great technician to win a point after having been lured into giving your opponent a smash, but Perry did just that. He was forced to hit a soft, high ball, which Allison smashed into deep court. But somehow Perry got his bat on it on the short rise, and returned it to Allison's baseline. Allison had to wait for it to come down and then slashed it back, but Perry was ready for that one and hit such a hot forcing shot off the stroke that Allison netted the return. Only champions can do that.

Wear Spiked Shoes.

The turf was greasy and slippery from the rain, although the center court had been covered with tarpaulins. Both men wore spiked slippers. The balls had to be replaced frequently, because after three or four shots had been played they would become spotted with black mud, which made them hard to follow from the side lines and must have been equally difficult for the players to see. Especially when they came over with a spin, the black-and-white effect was very confusing.

Now we are in the second set. Perry has won the first. Allison is getting desperate, the desperation almost of a fighter who has tried his Sunday punch and failed to knock his opponent off his feet. The American tries cutting every return with a vicious slice. It does no good. Perry keeps stroking the balls back. Then Allison tries coming into the net to cut off shots, but his own net game plays him false and he makes error after error. Next a bee attacks him on the base line and he strokes it with his racquet and fights it off. It is the first time he has smiled. Perry runs out four games in the second set before Allison can capture his own serve. At this point, Perry is in complete control. For a moment the tide changed dramatically as Perry suddenly eased up mentally and lost control, but Perry took the second set, 6—3.

Allison Does Running.

The way the Englishman is using his racquet he might just as well be playing from a wheelchair. It is Allison who is forced to do the running and not Perry. Perry gets his racquet into the way of kill shots somehow and turns them into forcing shots of his own. They say that a few years ago Perry used to be a trick shot artist, and used to make impossible returns to amuse the crowd. But today a lot of these trick shots are a regular part of his game. He uses them for offense and defense. He will take a ball hit deep in front of him or crowd the back line. There seems to be small use in playing to catch Perry in an awkward position because, position or no, he will hit the ball back at you.

Here, here! What's happened? Perry has let down. Things have been going too much his way. He has not tasted enough of adversity. The mental edge has left him. He looks listless and sloppy. Allison wins the third set, 6—3. For, as Perry loses his keenness, Allison finds his net game and cuts off shots at midcourt. Now they come back after the intermission and Allison is razor sharp and full of fight.

Allison Moves Smoothly.

The hardest thing in the world in tennis is to come back after a mental let-down. Look at that Allison, moving in smoothly and gracefully to the net and angling shots impossible to return. Perry has lost control. Allison wins the fourth set by the amazing score of 6—1, and now the score is two games each, and this set will decide. The pretty little match turned into a dog fight. Let's follow this last set.

First game—Allison nervous. His net game goes haywire. Perry wins it. But Allison comes back and wins his own service after being behind. Control again. Look at them both fight. Perry wins his service, and it stands 2—1 for Perry. Now Allison serves and wins a point with vicious smashes. Perry's control goes and he nets three in a row. Love game for the American. Two-all now. Gee, Allison looks tired. He walks to the base line like an old man after winning a point with a smash. A long, desperate game, and Perry wins it after Allison three times lost set-point. Oh! Oh! Perry breaks through Allison and leads, 4—2. Allison is so tired he can not control his cut-off shots. There it goes. Perry wins another. Allison's mouth is open. His legs buckle under him at one point . . . Look at that American rally. He wins his service at love. It's 5—3 now.

Perry Evens Match.

The stadium is afire with noise as Allison wins the next 2 points. Perry draws up even. Hey! What a yell. Allison broke through. 5—4 Perry now. And Allison wins service. Wow! Two smashing kills for Allison. Six-all.

Perry's drives were beautiful. He wins a love game. Can Allison last another? He makes two errors. Another error. At love-40 he cuts one off at the net. And another smash. What a heart! And that ends it. Perry administers the knockout to the reeling challenger. He runs him from side to side, side to side. Exhausted, Allison nets and it's over. Perry throws his racquet into the air, leaps the net and is champion.

Park Lane Vs. White Stars.

G. P. O. to Play College Park Today

Winner to Enter Week-Day Series Semifinals in Post's Tourney.

GEORGE WOOD and Bob Lyons are the probable pitching choices in this afternoon's attraction between College Park and Government Printing Office as play is resumed in The Post Association interleague week-day series after yesterday's enforced interruption because of rain. The game will be played on the south Ellipse, starting at 4 o'clock.

Grace vs. G. P. O. Federals.

Grace A. C., representative of the Georgetown Church League, will engage the Government Printing Federals from the Federal loop, in a battle for survivorship in tomorrow's game.

Both of these teams have suffered a defeat and another loss means elimination in the championship tourney.

Bicyclists to Vie Here on Sunday

A field of the fastest amateur bicycle riders in the East, numbering more than 75, will compete here Sunday morning in the annual Atlantic Seaboard amateur bicycle championships. The races will be held in West Potomac Park, on the one-mile paved track surrounding the oval.

The races will be held from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m., bringing together such luminaries as Turke Bruhn, Pennsylvania State chuampion, of Philadelphia; Phil Dorsek, of Baltimore, Maryland State champion; John Biana, New York star; Ed Bieber, 7 years District champion; Ralph Jackson, present District champion, and Bits Horen, 23-year-old sensation.

Races in the senior class, for those 16 years of age and over, will consist of 1-mile novice, 1-mile open, 3-mile open, miss-and-out and 10-mile handicap. In the junior class, the half-mile and mile races will be contested.

Toronto Again Beats Newark in Title Series

Newark, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs made it two straight over the Newark Bears, International League pennant winners, in their playoff series by winning the second game of the best four out of seven struggle, 2 to 1. The Leafs collected only three hits off Vito Tamulis, but used them to good advantage in the first inning.

Brennan and Heving; Tamulis and Glenn.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Rain today washed out the second game of the International League play-offs here between the Rochester Red Wings and Albany Senators.

Rochester won the first game. The second will be played here tomorrow afternoon and the teams will then move to Albany. Four out of seven wins will decide the series.

Episcopal High Grid Squad Drilling

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Fifty ambitious youths, the largest squad in years, have answered the football call at Episcopal High and are now hard at work under Head Coach Bick Cardwell and his assistants, Kaminer, Powell, Latham and Seamen.

The back field will be built around Flick Hoxon and Al Wilson, both experienced men. Hoxon and Worthington, the latter a Washington boy, are co-captains, while Joe Cochran is manager. Harrison and Boyce form the nucleus of the forward wall. Arthur Bryant, a 200-pounder who starred in the line last season, is being groomed for the back field. A spinal injury received last year is keeping Berkley, a promising back, out of action this season. The team is handicapped as regards reserve material.

The schedule:

November 3, St. Christopher, here; 10, Virginia Episcopal (Homecoming), here; 17, Shenandoah Valley Academy, here; 24, Woodberry Forest, at Orange.

Wet grounds and frequent downpours failed to stop the Alexandria High School gladiators as they struggled through a two-hour practice session on Hayden's Field today. The backs who looked most empressive were Lee Fones, Paul Shu, Eddie Hammersley and Davis.

The Post and Police teams were forced to remain idle today, and the postponed game probably will be played Friday. The Police nine is leading the series with one victory and can clinch the crown by winning Friday's game. Should The Post team take the verdict, the deciding and final struggle will be staged Monday.

Russ Kidwell, coach of the Celtics, wants all players to report for tomorrow's workout at 5:15 p. m. The infielders are requested to report a few minutes earlier. Sunday the Celtics invade Fredericksburg for a double-header. All players must report at Baggetts at 10 o'clock to make the journey. Rip Hicks and Lefty Scrivner will pitch for the Celtics.

The Mount Vernon Independents and Alexandria All Stars have obtained the use of Baggetts for a twin-bill Sunday in the absence of the Celtics.

Gundy Davis, manager of the Fraters football team, announced the acquisition of Pepco Barry, and Helm, former Marine star from the West Coast. The team will drill at Baggetts Friday night and Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Yarosz Plans Rest From Ring Labors

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12 (AP).—The new middleweight champion, smiling Thaddeus "Ted" Yarosz, today prepared to take a well deserved rest from the rigors of the fistic life before he dons his leather mits once more to take on "all comers."

Yarosz, who gained the 160-pound crown last night by whipping the champion, 30-year-old Vince Dundee, is willing to give the Newark battler a return match, but the promoters are eyeing a battle which would pit him against Marcel Thil, of France.

Turowski Pigeon Wins Race From Lynchburg

Covering the 150-mile air-line distance from Lynchburg, Va., to Washington in close to 3½ hours, a strong-winged pigeon from the Turowski loft won the Greater National Capital Concourse Association race against a field of 701 other birds competing from 46 lofts.

Following is the speed flown in yards per minute of the first return to each loft, the first ten being diploma winners:

Equipoise Due To Race at Graw

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise, world's second largest winning thoroughbred, heads the list of 53 nominations for the $10,000 Havre de Grace Cup Handicap, closing 1¼-mile feature of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association's 13-day meeting, which gets under way Saturday.

In addition to Equipoise, other topnotcher eligibles for the cup race are Discovery, holder of the world's 1 3-16 miles record, and Indian Runner, one of the fastest horses ever to be shod with racing plates.

Great Field Entered.

Following is the official list of nominations for the cup race as released today by Racing Secretary McLennan: J. W. Parrish's New Deal and Howard, J. Fred Adams' Rehoboth, Greentree Stable's Soon Over, Paul C. Taylor's Sweeping Light, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Dark Winter, Calumet Farm's Hadagal, Hugh Fontaine's Black Queen, George D. Widener's Chicstraw and Phil Reuter's Chartres.

C. V. Whitney's Collateral, Jabot, Roustabout, Trumpery, Elf Lock and Mad Frump; E. R. Bradley's Bazaar and Barn Swallow, Belair Stud's Faireno and Fleam, Anall Stable's Larranaga, Corsicana Stable's Bien Fait, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery and Dogmata, Frederick M. Alger, jr.'s, Azucar, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's Chance Flight, W. Graham's Kivex, Mose Lowenstein's Hope to Do.

Mrs. Frank J. Heller's Agrarian; Maemere Farm's Somebody; D. A. Wood's Indian Runner; Brookmeade Stable's Good Caesar's Ghost, Inlander and Time Clock; William E. Hughes' Silent Shot S. W. Labrot's Grey Glade; Mrs. Silas S. Mason's Head Play; Mrs. H. L. Ughetta's Royal Guard and Deduce; Selby L. Burch's Thursday; Mrs. Deering Howe's Only One.

Howe Stable's High Torque, Kate and Cycle; Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret; Lee Rosenberg's Kerry Patch; M. L. Schwartz's Hindu Queen and Identify; Parker Corning's Stand Pat; Thomas Lanusso's Jimmy Sutro, and Mrs. Jack Howard's Advising Anna.

Equipoise won the Cup in 1932 and was second last year. Trainer Tom Healey reports him nearing tops and he may establish an all-time record by winning the event this year.

The Cup race has been programmed since 1912. In that year Adams Express won with Nightstick, Robert Bradley, Roamer, The Finn, Omar Khayyam, Slippery Elm, Cudgel, The Porter, Captain Alcock, Bunting, Enchantment, Valador, Senalado, Crusader, Chance Play, Osmand, Sun Beau, Spinach, Valenciennes, Equipoise and Osculator scoring in the order named.

When Osculator, with 104 up, last year beat Equipoise carrying 132 pounds, the former established the present time record of 1:49 4-5.

Ross Resumes Training for McLarnin

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP).—Barney Ross today resumed training for his 15-round welterweight title defense against Jimmy McLarnin in Madison Square Garden bowl Saturday night after a two-day layoff because of the Jewish holidays.

The Chicago youngster dispelled any doubts as to his condition by stepping four fast rounds with two sparring partners, doing three rounds of exercises and then stepping on the scales to show his weight as 138½ pounds. That was a pound and a half under the official weighing when the bout first was scheduled last Thursday.

Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, was an interested observer among the 1,000 fans who jammed their way into Stillman's gymnasium and said he did not see where the layoff had hurt the champion in the slightest.

McLarnin continued his brisk morning 3-mile run in Central Park and four fast rounds against Calvin Reed, his speedy Negro sparring mate. The pride of the Irish weighed 147 pounds after his work, showing he was holding his weight right where he wanted it. He weighed in at 145¾ last Thursday.

Women of the Army and Navy Golf Club will start handicap play today in the first annual Maj. J. Clinton Tribby Trophy event. Eighteen holes today and 18 more tomorrow are slated. More than 35 entries are expected.

Sixteen commissioned officers from the Navy Department in Washington trounced a like number of men from the Naval Academy at Annapolis, 15½ to 8½, yesterday over the Army and Navy Club course. A return match is carded next Friday.

Assistant pros from the Middle Atlantic area will journey to Five Farms on Friday to face the 36-hole medal test for the title now held by Frankie Cunningham, of Burning Tree. Virtually all of local assistants are expected to play, along with Richmond and Baltimore competitors. Carriel Napier, assistant to Bobby Cruickshank and qualifier for the National Open this year, will be the most serious outside threat for Cunningham's crown.

Women from the local clubs will participate on the same day in a Maryland State Handicap tourney at Congressional, with three handicap classes competing.

Baltimore clubs have two State tourneys scheduled over the week-end, with several local golfers expected to compete. At Hillendale on Saturday, a mixed two-ball event is on tap, while Sunday the men play at Rodgers Forge.

The sixth annual seniors' tourney of the State of Maryland is scheduled Tuesday at Green Spring Valley for members of the association who are over 50 years of age. Low gross and low net prizes will be awarded. The course is open for practice rounds Monday.

Tommy Cross Out To Avenge Defeat

Meets Norfolk, Who Beat Him, at Park Tomorrow.

Tommy Cross, the ebony noggin-tapper from Philadelphia, wants revenge, and plenty of it, tomorrow night when he swaps punches with Kid Norfolk in the feature of the Lincoln Athletic Club's final outdoor show of the season. The distance, ten rounds or less.

Victor in 88 of his 90 ring battles, Cross was defeated by Norfolk early in his pro career, which he launched after winning the Golden Gloves championship of Philadelphia. Not since then has he faced Norfolk, but tomorrow the Quaker City mauler intends to make up for lost time.

An interesting eight-round semi-final involving Young Canada Lee and Young Peter Jackson has been arranged. Lee has developed rapidly since joining Kid Chocolate's stable, while Jackson is a veteran campaigner of proved ability.

Stock Traders Still Cautious; Prices Gain

Drop in Federals Studied as Sales Dwindle to 401,030 Shares.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Caution remained the watchword in most markets today as Wall street studied the implications of a further fall in United States Government bonds.

Volume on the stock exchange dwindled to 401,030 shares compared with 631,160 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 issues, at 69.5, was up only three-tenths of a point.

Upturn Signs Neglected.

Scattered signs of seasonal business expansion and some favorable dividend announcements went almost unnoticed in the stock market.

Action of Government bonds was the focus of attention. The fall of prices there, which carried Treasury 3¼s below par before effective support appeared, was subject to various interpretations.

Some brokers attributed the heaviness of bonds, in contrast with the steady pace of stocks, to a revival of inflationary ideas as a result of the Maine vote on Monday. The bond market, however, has been in a down trend since July. Corporate issues were affected by the selling in domestic Governments.

Rally of Dollar.

A rally in the dollar against foreign exchanges and generally lower prices for actively traded commodities did not conform with the usual inflation pattern.

Speculative indecision in the share market was accentuated by disappointment over the failure of business to show stronger seasonal expansion tendencies. Steel operations were estimated to have recovered a bit and individual car-loading reports made better comparison with 1933. But most of the major barometers of industrial activity revealed no important pick-up.

Dividend news was good. Air Reduction advanced 2 points on a few transfers on announcement of an extra dividend of $1.50 a share. Continental Can scored a net gain of nearly 2 points after directors had declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent, subject to approval of shareholders. The company proposed to put the new stock on a quarterly dividend basis of 60 cents.

Gold and Silver Firm.

U. S. Smelting & Refining reacted after expanding its rally gains a point or so and finished 1¼ lower. Most gold and silver shares were firm. Steel shares sagged in face of the empty nearby outlook for that industry. Rails held their ground well. Utilitiy shares on the average were dragged down into new low ground for the year by dribbling liquidation.

Preferred shares were hurt by the decline in bonds. American Locomotive preferred lost 3½ points. But the selling in the senior groups was scattered.

Trade news was mixed. The Iron Age reported a moderate gain in steel bookings but saw nothing resembling a definite upward trend. It estimated current steel operations at 19½ per cent of capacity against 19 per cent a week ago. Electric power use last week was 1.1 per cent below the corresponding 1933 week, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

Some sizable gains in carloadings by Western carriers compared with 1933 were offset by losses for Eastern roads.

Rail Orders Increase.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The railroad equipment industry was said today in the official publication of the New York Trust Co. to have recorded substantial improvement this year. During the first five months of 1934 rail orders increased to $26,000,000 from $3,600,000 in the corresponding 1933 period. Orders for locomotives, passenger cars and freight cars increased twentyfold.

Building Is Increased in August Despite Usual Low Tendencies

Permit Expenditures for 215 Cities Amount to $34,423,338 During Month, Compared With $33,899,650 in July; 1.5 Per Cent Rise.

New York, Sept. 12.—Although building operations, as a rule, show a falling off during the summer months, the contrary was the case during July and August of this year. However, the increase last month was not so great as in the preceding period.

The actual gain in August over July was 1.5 per cent, contrasting with a normal seasonal decrease of about 9.8 per cent, whereas in July the increase over June was 18.4 per cent, as compared with a normal decline of about 10.5 per cent.

Building permit expenditures for the 215 cities regularly reporting to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $34,423,338 during August, compared with $33,899,650 in July, a rise of 1.5 per cent. Last month's volume compared with $32,391,868 in August, 1933, or a gain of 6.3 per cent.

New York Building.

In the five boroughs of New York City, which furnished the bulk of the increase in construction last month, permits were issued in the amount of $9,917,284, a rise of 38.0 per cent over the $7,908,885 figure of the preceding month, and an increase of 88.9 per cent over August last year when the total was $5,249,530.

The group total of building expenditures for the 215 cities for August of this year and last, are shown in the following table:

	August 1934	August 1933	Change P. Ct.
New Engl'd	$3,099,565	$2,997,745	+ 3.4
Middle Atl'c	13,553,650	8,311,526	+63.1

N. Y. City	$9,917,284	$5,249,530	+88.9

Permits in 214 Cities.

In the 214 cities outside of New York, the August permits totaled $24,506,054, which compared with $25,990,765 in July, a decline of 5.7 per cent, and with $27,142,338 in the corresponding month of last year, or a drop of 9.7 per cent.

Analysis of the group totals shows that only two of the eight sections, the New England and Mountain States, reported smaller amounts expended for building in August than in the previous month, while comparison with August of last year shows four groups advancing and four declining.

Federal Loans Lead Bonds to Lower Levels

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—U. S. Government securities suffered another relapse today and most other listed loans joined in the downward procession.

The activity was a little greater than that of yesterday. Transfers totaled $15,557,000, par value.

The Federals accounted for about $7,770,000 of this aggregate. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic comporate issues registered a decline of three-tenths of a point at 82.7.

Maine Vote Blamed.

Some dealers still felt that an inflationary interpretation of the Maine vote was the major depressant in the Federal section, but it was pointed out in other quarters the decline has been underway, with few interruptions, since July.

Seven issues recorded new bottoms for the year or longer. Among these were the called Liberty Fourth 4¼s which finished within one thirty-second of a point of their day's low mark, off 5-32nds at 100.13.

Below Par Mark.

Treasury 3¼s of 1944-46, an issue of the same rate and maturity as the bonds offered in exchange for the called liberties, fell below par at one time, but managed to end at 100.2, off 7-32nds.

Home Owners Loan 3s were under almost as much pressure as the Treasury 3¼s, closing at 95.3 for a loss of 28/32nds. Federal farm 3¼s were off 8/32nds at 98.30, but the 3s lost 23/32nds at 95.3. Both the home owners loan issues finished around 95 for declines of 21/32nds, and 28/32nds, respectively. Losses among the Treasuries ranged from 7/32nds. to 17/32nds. of a point.

Liberty 3½s were the single exception to the downtrend. This issue held a net advance of 5/32nds. of a point.

In the foreign department Antwerp City 5s moved up 2½ points to 102½ and firmness was shown by the Brazilians, Chileans, Colombians and Japanese. German General Electric 6½s and 7s each finished at 34, off 13¼ and 14 points, respectively. Reich government loans were only slightly lower.

Irregularities Mark Prices In Curb Sales

Alcohols and Specialties Higher; Trading Falls to 136,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Irregularity again marked price changes on the curb exchange today. A lower trend prevailed in metals, while alcohols and some specialties moved a little higher.

Movements were narrow throughout the day and volume tapered. Transfers approximated 136,000 shares, compared with 153,000 Tuesday.

Lake Shore Mines lost more than 2 points. Mead Johnson and National Sugar Refining also sagged on light offerings. Declines of fractions to a point occurred in Pioneer Gold, Wright Hargreaves, Newmont and Teck Hughes. Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid B and American Gas & Electric ended each a shade lower.

Both Swift & Co. and Swift International improved small fractions. Parker Rust Proof was up a point. Aluminum Co. of America, International Petroleum, Hiram Walker, Distilleries Corporation-Seagrams and Creole Petroleum finished steady to slightly higher.

Finished Steel Orders Increase 8,085 Tons

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Shipments of finished products by the U. S. Steel Corporation during August, it was announced, increased 8,085 tons over July, to 378,023 tons. Shipments in July were 369,938 tons.

August shipments in preceding years were 668,155 tons in the 1933 month, 291,566 in 1932 and 573,372 in 1931. For the eight-month period ended August 31, shipments totaled 4,426,856 tons, compared with 3,581,897 in the corresponding months of 1933.

More Companies Apply For Exchange Privileges

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—A total of 526 companies whose securities are listed on the New York Stock Exchange have applied for registration, in addition to 206 companies which already had filed applications on or before August 29, the exchange announced today.

Altogether, 732 companies have allied for temporary registration under the securities act. Their applications have been forwarded to Washington.

	Wednes.	Tues.
Advances	207	128
Declines	184	304
Unchanged	151	165
Total issues	542	597

Stocks—Cautious dealing remained the watchword as the stock market trawled upward only three-tenths of a point. Traders studied the implications of a further fall in Federals. Speculators waited for a clearer view of the future. Sales sagged to 401,030 shares.

Bonds—United States Government securities suffered another relapse and led the bond market to lower levels. Seven Federal issues touched bottom. Losses averaged three-tenths of a point. Sales increased ih volume to $15,557,000.

Curb—Irregularity again marked price changes on the Curb Exchange. A lower trend prevailed in metals, while alcohols and some specialties moved a little higher. Sales volume declined to 136,000 shares.

Wheat—Reactions in late trading wiped out earlier gains in wheat. A dearth of aggressive buying was blamed. Corn and oats closed down. September wheat sold at 1.05½; December, at 1.06⅛.

Cotton—Liquidation and reselling by recent buyers and reports of increased offerings from the South pulled cotton prices downward. October closed at 12.91. The general market declined 14 to 17 points. December sold at 13.04.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed steady, 12 to 19 points lower. September sold at 15.58, October at 15.69.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.86 with no sales reported. Refined was irregular, but closed unchanged at 4.75.

Dollar—The United States dollar was higher on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.01 to the English pound; 6.68 cents to the French franc, and 40.35 cents to the German mark.

N. Y. Central Reports Deficit Of $1,211,632

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Co. reports a net deficit for the month of July of $1,211,632, compared with a net income of $1,253,258 for the 1933 month.

White Motor Co. and subsidiaries report for the six months ended June 30 net loss of $640,520, against net loss of $1,867,900 for the first half of 1933.

The Continental Oil Co. declared a dividend of 25 cents on the capital stock, payable October 31 to stock of record October 1. The previous dividend, also 25 cents, was paid in April this year. This was the initial payment by the present company.

Directors of the Air Reduction Co. declared an extra dividend of $1.50 and the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, both payable October 15 to stock of record September 28.

San Francisco, Sept. 12 (AP).—Bank of America N. T. & S. A. declared the regular quarterly dividend today of 50 cents a share, and the State bank of the same name declared a payment of 15⅝ cents a share. The dividends are payable October 1 to stockholders of record September 20.

The total payment of $1,025,000 brings the year's aggregate up to $2,825,000, virtually all of it going to Transamerica Corporation, which owns more than 99 per cent of the stock.

Department Store Sales Value Mounts in August Over July

(Associated Press.)

The value of department store sales for August as reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board showed a sharp gain from July, the index figure rising to 79 per cent of the 1923-1925 average, as compared with 73 per cent in July and 74 in June.

Sales also were 2 per cent greater in value than a year ago. The largest increase from August, 1923, was in the Richmond Federal Reserve district, where the gain was 10 per cent.

Atlanta and Chicago showed gains of 6 per cent, with 5 per cent reported for the San Francisco and Kansas City districts. The sole decrease was reported from Boston, where value of sales dropped 4 per cent, as compared with August a year ago.

The changes by districts as compared with August, 1933, were:

Boston	decrease 4
New York	—
Philadelphia	increase 3
Cleveland	—
Richmond	increase 10
Atlanta	increase 6
Chicago	increase 6
St. Louis	—
Minneapolis	—
Kansas City	increase 5
Dallas	increase 2
San Francisco	increase 5

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—A 10 per cent August increase in department store sales in comparison with the corresponding month of last year was reported today by the Fifth District Federal Reserve Bank.

At the same time it was disclosed that the increase was the largest district gain in the country for the period. Embraced in the district are Virginia, the Carolinas, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

In cumulative sales since January 1 the district has an increase of 18 per cent, as compared with the National average of 15 per cent. Washington had the best August gain and Richmond was second with an increase of 12.2 per cent. For the eight months Charleston, W. Va., was first and Richmond second.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Under the lead of industrials which were bought on dividend prospects, the stock exchange developed a cheerful tone today. Argentine bonds and rails improved on that country's conversion scheme, and transatlantic issues and gold-mining shares also advanced. British funds were dull. The market closed firm.

Paris—Influencing the whole trend of the bourse, Young plan bonds continued weak and dropped 10 points on traders' gloomy view of conditions resulting from Germany's refusal to join the eastern Locarno pact. The closing was heavy.

Gossip of New York Markets

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Far Eastern silver experts, now in New York, fear that the Chinese government will place an embargo on exports of the white metal, or will take other restrictive measures, if silver continues to leave Shanghai in response to American buying abroad.

Ordinarily the world's chief consumer of silver, China has been sending huge quantities of the metal to the London bullion market in the past month or two to meet the demand there from the United States Treasury. The latter is engaged in accumulating silver in order to bring its stocks up to 25 per cent of its total gold and silver monetary reserves.

This export flow has resulted in the rapid depletion of silver hoards at Shanghai, where most of the floating supply is stored. These stocks had grown to unusual dimensions in the past year or two, giving some leeway for sales abroad at the present time.

It is believed, however, that a long-continued drain of silver out of China would produce stringency in credit and falling commodity prices.

The Nanking government, it is asserted, has been reluctant to take action, because interference in foreign exchange and monetary matters invariably constitutes a serious step tending to undermine business confidence.

Chinese banks, it is further contended, seeing the seriousness of the situation, have refrained from exporting the metal, regardless of the profit involved. Shipments have been confined largely to American and British banks in Shanghai, it is believed.

Because of the readiness of Shanghai speculators to send metal to London on an arbitrage basis, the American Treasury's demand for silver has been fully met and a rise in the price avoided. For the past week or two the Treasury has foregone its purchases in view of the weakness in dollar exchange.

A Chinese export embargo would untie China's currency from its metal base and subject it to speculative and inflationary influences, it is explained. Due to the tendency of the price of silver to rise and fall with other commodities, China has been able to keep its price level fairly stable for the past few years, in contrast to the divergent trends of gold prices and commodity prices in Western countries.

Should the West, as represented by Washington, continue to emulate the old Chinese custom of hoarding silver, and export restrictions become necessary, the chief supply of metal would be cut off. This in turn probably would force the price of silver higher. A rapidly rising price for silver in world markets, it is said, would injure China's ability to sell abroad, and eventually her ability to buy abroad, because ultimately imports must be paid for largely with foreign funds acquired through exports.

Distilled Liquor Imports Cut Lowest Since Repeal

Imports of distilled liquors which arrived in the United States during August were the smallest for any month since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, it was announced by the Bureau of Customs yesterday.

Only 301,806 proof gallons of distilled liquors were received in this country during the past month, a decline of 11 per cent from the imports during the preceding month. August imports of distilled liquors were only 17.4 per cent of the amount received during the month of February (1,738,871 proof gallons), in which month the largest imports of distilled liquors took place since repeal.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Foreign currencies declined in the New York trading in reaction to yesterday's late advances. The pound sterling was especially soft.

The British currency dipped 1¼ cents to $5.00¾, after the dollar had closed in London at $5.01¼ to the pound.

The price of gold in London rose 2 pence, to 140 shillings 5½ pence. (equivalent to $35.22), and bars valued at $1,494,470 changed hands.

French francs receded .00¼ of a cent in New York to 6.67¾ cents. The dollar ended the earlier Paris trading at the equivalent of 6.68 cents to the franc.

Can Company Plans Big Stock Dividend

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Directors of the Continental Can Co. today announced plans for a 50 per cent stock dividend.

A special meeting of stockholders will be called to approve a proposed increase in authorized stock from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 shares.

"Subject to such approval," said the company's statement, "the board of directors declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent.

"It is the expectation of the board that after the issuance of the stock dividend the initial quarterly cash dividend will be 60 cents per share. In the previous two quarters 75 cents quarterly was paid on this stock."

Wheat Reacts, Wiping Out Earlier Gains

Dearth of Buying Blamed for Late Weakness; All Grains Down.

Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP).—Suffering from a sinking spell in the late transactions, wheat prices today underwent material downturns that more than offset early gains.

Dearth of any aggressive buying was chiefly responsible for late weakness of wheat values.

Besides, the grain markets were unsettled owing to a sharp break in United States Government bonds and as a result of Winnipeg reports that a small lot of Canadian wheat had been sold to this country.

Wheat Closes Unstable.

Wheat closed unstable at the day's low point, 1 to 1⅜ cents under yesterday's finish; December, new, 1.06⅛ to 1.06¾; corn, ⅜ to ⅝ down; December, new, 79¼ to 79¾; oats, unchanged, to ⅝ lower, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 7 cents advance.

With trade volume scanty both in wheat and other grains, all the pits were easily influenced, and dealers gave little heed to whether Canadian sales of wheat to the United States would be for consumer use or for grinding in bond. The reports telling of the sales did not specify the purpose of the buyers.

Earlier, the wheat market here was responsive to higher quotations at Liverpool that were assumed to be due to belief abroad that the Canadian government crop report was not regarded as bearish.

Strength in Chicago.

Transient strength in Chicago wheat prices came about also because of word of heavy frost in Argentina. A dispatch from Rosario said the frost was believed to be general. According to Chicago authorities, frost would be likely to do serious damage to wheat in northern Argentina.

Notice was likewise taken of unofficial predictions of a severe visitation of frost in Canada and the American Northwest before the end of the week.

Corn and oats, although displaying independent strength early, followed wheat action later. Rural offerings of corn increased on price bulges.

Exports of Sugar From Cuba Gain

New York, Sept. 12.—Cuban exports of sugar during the week ended September 8 amounted to 59,455 long tons, raw sugar value, of which 26,419 tons went to the United States, 26,484 tons to United Kingdom, 3,704 tons to France, and 848 tons to Belgium. During the corresponding week in 1933, the shipments totaled 25,704 tons, of which 22,642 tons went to the United States, and 3,062 tons to the United Kingdom, according to advices received by Lamborn & Co.

Exports of Cuban sugars since the beginning of the year to September 8 totaled 1,404,543 long tons raw sugar value as compared with 1,504,819 tons during the similar period last year, a decrease of 100,276 tons, or approximately 6.7 per cent.

To the United States there were shipped 829,952 tons as against 958,945 tons for the same period in 1933, a decrease of 128,993 tons or approximately 13.4 per cent.

Daily Oil Yield Is Decreased 17,700 Barrels

Week's Production Declines to 2,404,450 Units as Imports Drop.

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—The daily average crude oil production in the United States decreased 17,700 barrels in the week ended September 8, totaling 2,404,450 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California decreased 59,900 barrels, to 1,901,850 barrels.

Imports of crude and refined oils at principal United States ports totaled 580,000 barrels, a daily average of 82,857 barrels, against 956,000 barrels, a daily average of 136,571 barrels, for the previous week.

Fall Plumbing Supply Sales Rise Sharply

Home, Apartment House Divisions' Buying Is Increased.

New York, Sept. 12.—In contrast to the predominance of orders from industrial centers during the first six months of the current year, sales of plumbing supplies now have turned strongly upward in the home and apartment house divisions.

Supplementing the funds distributed by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the money now being provided by the National housing act is giving the strongest impetus to the movement of equipment into residences that has been in evidence since 1930.

For, in the modernization of any house, it is the bathroom and kitchen which are given first consideration.

Are Necessities.

No matter how antiquated the remainder of the house may be, with these two rooms resplendent with the new fixtures and equipment, which today exceed in beauty and durability anything manufacturers ever have produced, the home may be termed modern and its salability is enhanced by a wide percentage.

This probably accounts for the fact that fully 60 to 80 per cent of the money now being received on loans from the NHA are going directly into this equipment.

Without this new sales outlet, which did not become of significant importance until the latter part of August, wholesale distribution of plumbing supplies during the first seven months of the year reached a dollar volume ranging from 25 to 40 per cent larger than that in the corresponding period of 1933.

As favorable as this increase may appear, however, full cognizance must be taken of the fact that during the first quarter of 1933 the lowest level in 30 years had been reached.

Emerge From Red.

The expansion of sales during the last 16 months, nevertheless, has been sufficient to enable many firms to emerge definitely from the red, and the majority of the leading manufacturers are reasonably certain of showing a profit on their operations during 1934 for the first time since 1930, according to a survey of the plumbing supply trade, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Football in Virginia . . .

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Touch scrimmage was ordered for the Generals here this afternoon, Coach Tilson keeping three teams hard at work almost an hour on a wet field. With the backs running hard, the first real offensive power of the season was revealed today. Lowry, full back, carried the ball well on several trys and the veteran Jack Bailey was having no trouble from an injury sustained last year.

Tilson switched his linemen about this afternoon, and found several strong combinations. C. Smith and Henthorne are staging a race for end, and Ellis, another end, still is doing a good job of kicking. Dick Gumm, Martin and Bonino continue to look good at the guard positions.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Coach Bill Raftery polished the V. M. I. running attack in a long dummy scrimmage today with two sets of backs alternating. Work was ended with a 15-minute scrimmage in which Dodson, Urick, McMillin, Clark and Watkins plowed through mud for good gains. Capt. Jack Zimmerman, Jim Farley and Big Sam Lowe opened wide holes in the line.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—Virginia's football squad concentrated on blocking practice in both morning and afternoon sessions today, working both on bags and dummies.

The practice session will be canceled tomorrow morning to permit the members of the squad to register. The first workout in Scott Stadium is scheduled for the afternoon if the weather is clear.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Washington and Lee freshmen will report tomorrow morning for their first football practice of the fall, it was announced today. Distribution of uniforms began this afternoon.

The Little Generals will play a heavy schedule of five games this year, opening their season with Richmond at Richmond on October 6. The yearlings of V. P. I. will be played at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, October 12, Virginia freshmen will come here for a battle October 19, and October 26 the Little Generals again will play here, entertaining William and Mary's freshmen. The schedule will be climaxed with a game November 3 with Maryland at College Park.

Amos Bolen, captain of the Generals' State championship eleven last year, will coach the freshmen this season. He will be assisted by Pat Mitchell, former Washington and Lee star.

Lane High's Team Get Class A Rating

Compete This Year With State's Larger Schools

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Football teams representing Lane High School, this city, have won the Class B district championship for three successive years. Due to the fact, however, that the enrollment this session has passed the 750 mark, the school automatically enters Class A and its athletic teams therefore must compete in future with those from the larger schools of the State.

The gridiron schedule for the coming season, however, has contests listed with both Class A and Class B teams, three with Class A teams from Richmond, Lynchburg and Hampton, and six with former rivals in Class B.

The 1934 eleven will be coached by Johnny Dial, star tackle at the University of Virginia for two sessions, who succeeds Jimmy Leitch, of Charlottesville, who piloted three teams to championship honors.

The schedule:

September 28, Culpeper at Charlottesville.

October 5, Staunton at Charlottesville; 12, Harrisonburg at Harrisonburg; 20, Hampton at Hampton; 27, Salem at Salem.

Eight Grid Lettermen Return to Thomas High

Parsons, W. Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Emil Suder, coach of Thomas High School, announces that eight lettermen are left from last year, which makes a very pleasing outlook. Included in this group are Helmick, 225-pound star tackle, and Tonelli and Radcliff, who made things hum in the backfield last year.

Games already on the schedule are: September 26 — Kingwood, at Kingwood; October 13—Petersburg, at Thomas; October 19—Parsons, at Thomas; October 26 — Davis, at Thomas; November 7—Belington, at Belington; November 10—State Deaf and Dumb, at Romney.

Lincoln Fields Feature Race to Nell Barton

Lincoln Fields, Ill., Sept. 12 (AP).—Nell Barton, from the Audley Farm, making her first appearance, won the top race at Lincoln Fields today in a spectacular nose finish over Mrs. J. D. Morris' Stickhandle.

Jockey J. Kacala rode Nell Barton, 2-year-old daughter of Sir Barton—Nell McDonald. H. Bagur piloted Stickhandle. Both juveniles ran like a team from the head of the stretch to the finish in the 5½-furlong sprint. Neither was a head apart, but Nell Barton proved the more courageous.

The Milky Way Farms' Where Away finished third. Nel Barton ran the distance in 1:07 2-5 and paid $8.98.

Canzoneri-Dublinsky To Fight Again Sept. 26

Bristol Gridmen Open 1934 Season on Friday

Bristol, Va., Sept. 12 (Spl.).—Bristol, Tenn., High School will open its football season with Blountville, Tenn., High School on Tenneva Field Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock instead of on Saturday night as originally scheduled. The game was moved up a day in order that it will not conflict with the Emory and Henry-Guilford College contest at Emory on Saturday evening.

It was learned yesterday that Louis Harkins, veteran full back and the team's punter, will be unable to get into Friday's game. Harkins has been taking it easy during practice in the last few days owing to an injury suffered in a scrimmage last week.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, September 13, 1934. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 809 District Building until 2:00 o'clock p. m. September 24, 1934, e. s. t., and then publicly opened, for constructing about 1,760 lineal feet of sewer varying in size from 10 inch to 12 inch in diameter. Apply Room 427, District Building, for proposals and specifications.

Walt Mason, Himself

In Adam's Day.

When Adam lived the world was new, and most refreshing to the view. He looked around on bosky dales, and quiet glens and pleasant vales; he gazed upon the sunlit hills and saw no sign, "Use Bunkum's Pills." There were no signs upon the trees, indorsing Johnson's schweitzer cheese. There were no bill boards on the slope to advertise some patent dope. The world was clean, beyond compare; no flivver smoke was in the air, no scent of grease and oil and tar from someone's antiquated car. If Adam wished to take a sleep his slumbers might be calm and deep; no motors honked along the road, no agents called at his abode to sell him books already read; no airplanes thundered overhead, there were no clanging telephones, to wake him up to grief and groans. A thousand landscapes he might pass, and see no sign, "Keep off the grass." He didn't need to vote for Jones or any other sack of bones, no creditors could come his way and tell him if he didn't pay they'd have him up before the beak and have him jailed within a week. He had no doctor's bills to pay, for doctors never came his way. The more I think of Adam's snap, the more he seems a lucky chap; he had the world all to himself, a world devoid of graft and pelf; and yet the sacred record shows that Adam seemed to have his woes; with all good things around him blent, he yielded to his discontent, his spirit wasn't satisfied, and thus he showed his human side. He didn't know how blest he was. If he could live in these sad days, how he would yearn for Eden's ways!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Robbed! — By Harry J. Tuthill

MY STARS, EVERY TIME I THINK OF HOW MEEK TESSIE WAS TRUDGING INTO THIS HOUSE AND THEN HOW EASILY INSULTED SHE WAS AFTER IKE SOLD HIS LAND.
HANDING A RELATIVE LIKE IKE MONEY IS LIKE TYING A SILK BLANKET ON A MULE. BOTH ARE.... THERE'S THE PHONE.
IT'S IKE. HE WANTS TO TALK TO YOU. HE'S VERY EXCITED. AND I HEARD TESSIE IN HER SQUEAKY VOICE TELLING HIM WHAT TO SAY.
HELLO.....YES...WHAT..? WHAT.....LISTEN IKE, IF YOU HAVE ANYTHING TO SAY TO ME KINDLY TALK SLOWER OR...WHAT.? YOU'VE BEEN WHAT? OH, ROBBED?
ROBBED! HA! I'M NOT THE LEAST BIT SURPRISED. I KNEW TESSIE WOULD GALLOP ALL OVER TOWN SHOWING THAT MONEY TO ANYONE WHO'D LOOK AT IT. SHE....
SH-H! SHH-H!
WHAT...NO I DIDN'T SEE ANY OF THAT $800 AROUND HERE AFTER YOU LEFT. AND IF YOU GET WHAT I MEAN I DIDN'T SEE ANY OF IT BEFORE YOU LEFT, EITHER. AND...WHAT? WHAT'S THAT YOU CALLED ME?
LISTEN.....LISTEN, ARE YOU INSINUATING THAT WE ROBBED YOU OF $210? WHAT....LISTEN, WHO ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT PARKING IN THE HOOSEGOW? WHO.....ME? WHY YOU MELON-HEADED...
ROBBED! AND BLAMING US. IMAGINE! AND HEAR TESSIE SQUEALING TO HIM...HEAR HER! JUST HANG UP ON THEM, GEORGE.

Woman Is Sued On Assessment In Closed Bank

Comptroller Files New Action to Test Power Over Stockholders.

A second suit to test the right of the Comptroller of the Currency to assess stockholders of closed banks in the District was initiated in District Supreme Court yesterday when Ida L. Bergling, 1535 Kearney street northeast, was named in a suit that demanded from her a payment of $2,000.

Mrs. Bergling was described as being the owner of 20 shares in the closed Seventh Street Savings Bank, each share being of a par value of $20. The comptroller said he had made demand upon her for a 100 per cent assessment so that depositors and creditors could be paid off in full. This demand met with a refusal, it was alleged.

The bank has 123 shareholders. Notices have been sent to all that they were expected to pay an assessment on their holdings several weeks ago, but many of the stockholders have refused to meet the demand.

Estate Sued First.

The suit is based both upon the bank West Virginia law, where the bank was chartered, and upon the District law, under which a 100 per cent assessment is provided. In the first suit to test the validity of an assessment, the comptroller sued the estate of the late George W. Offutt, a majority stockholder of the closed Potomac Savings Bank, though the law of Virginia, under which the institution was chartered, did not provide for such an assessment.

The Seventh Street Bank was opened in 1912. It closed its doors in the March, 1933, banking holiday and has never been permitted to reopen. Most of its valuable assets were taken over by the Hamilton National Bank, and a receiver was appointed, with Norman R. Hamilton acting as that officer.

Others Refuse to Pay.

Demand was made that the stockholders meet the assessment by August 13, it was alleged, and Mrs. Bergling refused to make the payment requested of her. Other shareholders were likewise placed under requirement to pay into the hands of the receiver an amount equal to the par value of their stock holdings. Many have paid, but others have refused.

Treasury officials, through Angus W. McLean and Charles Wainwright, believe they have a stronger case against the Seventh street shareholders than against the Potomac. This was so, they said, because both the West Virginia law and the District regulations provided for the assessment, while in the Potomac case the Virginia law, where the bank was chartered, did not provide for an assessment. Both institutions did business solely in the District.

Russian Revolution 'Grandmother' Dies Aged 90, an Exile

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 12 (AP).—A gentle-bred Russian woman who gave up her life of luxury to fight for the cause of the Russian peasant died here today, to be mourned as "the grandmother of the Russian revolution."

Death came to Countess Catherine Breshkovskaya at the age of 90.

Of the many years of her long life, she spent the first 26 as the studious daughter of noble Russian parents, the next 6 as an organizer for the revolt against the czarist regime, the ensuing 25 in prison and in exile in far-away Siberia.

More than 50 years old when she was released, she returned to take up again the fight, fled Russia when arrest threatened, returned in 1905 to lead the general strike and agitation of those years, suffered arrest again and—when she was 66 years old—was sentenced to perpetual exile in Siberia.

With the fall of the Romanoff dynasty in 1917, she returned in triumph, only to see the government that honored her succeeded by the Bolsheviki, which forced her again to flight.

The latter years of her life she spent pleading the cause of the Russian people abroad, though she had been in ill-health almost constantly since 1921.

Two Leap to Safety As Speed Boat Burns

When a Navy speed boat burst into flames yesterday in the river off the Naval Air Station, two Navy enlisted men were forced to plunge into the water and swim ashore, a distance of 60 feet.

One of the men, Machinists Mate H. R. Ferrel, was slightly burned about the hands. The other, R. A. Beden, was unhurt. The boat, which is used in seaplane emergencies, sank. The fire is believed to have been caused by a backfire.

Motorist Asks $10,000 In Suit on Coal Firm

Damages of $10,000 were asked of A. Cohen & Co., Inc., trading as the A. A. A. Coal & Supply Co., 1124 Florida avenue northeast, yesterday by Lucille McCormick, 920 Twenty-third street northwest.

Through her attorney, Charles E. Ford, she charged that an automobile in which she was riding was struck by a truck of the corporation at Twenty-second and I streets northwest March 31, 1932. She charged that she sustained serious injuries because of the negligent driving of the truck.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

OUR breezy, cheerful pollyanna contemporary who seldom makes a wry face at anything but a waiter who brings him milk instead of sidecars, has started his funning again.

Such a virulent, vindictive, vicious and vacillating vacuum of vacuity we have not envisioned in some time.

Arthur Godfrey may have a melodious vocal arrangement. He may like himself terribly, as is alleged. He may be so lazy that he really enjoys broadcasting in bed. Perhaps a few feminine aortas do flutter when he strides down E street. But Art is a swell lad at heart . . . we mean it.

Arch McDonald may swizzle his muscular voice and commit all manner of sins against the home team . . . he may even tell endless rambling stories with no point at the end . . . but he's just a big, overgrown cherub with the heart of a kid peeking through the fence at a series game.

Arthur Reilly . . . we know less about . . . but his billowy, zephyr-like mutterings have eased many a taxi ride and we take it on hearsay that he's genial. So we hearby inaugurate the "Persecuted Announcer's Club of the Air" . . . and we nominate for first vice president . . . Ted Ostenkamp, WOL's boilermaker.

• • • •

JUST some more darn kids babbling into a microphone was our honest thought until "Bud" Ward snared us for a look in on his surprising assemblage of juvenile songsters at WMAL the other morning.

Even if you profess to be painfully bored when a 2-year-old sings "The Last Round Up" in the manner of Kate Smith . . . and there are a few cynics left who do . . . you might feel a tug at the heart listening to youngsters go on the air.

They pause with perfect poise and sing with such unadorned naturalness . . . the innocence of childhood, you cynics . . . and, meanwhile, in another studio we tear out hair wrestling with our emotions trying to put a finger on this feeling that gets us when youngsters pipe up in their perky little voices.

There's but one answer. We hate to see them grow up and lose that perfect guilelessness, that perfect disregard for the impression they are making and that charm of wide-eyed joyousness that little lads and lassies own. But they'll lose it all right and turn into blues singers and terribly earnest announcers.

SOMETHING for aspiring announcers to try out on just dug up by Jim Mcgrath, the old funster:

"Two skunks sat on a stump. One skunk said the stump stunk. The other said the skunk stunk." My! My! Jim . . . and such a woodsy tale. He got this way from making out one of those new report sheets just introduced by N. B. C. to keep announcers out of mischief.

THE trail of the 10,000-mile olive (or cherry) may join the limbo of solved mysteries with WJSV's airing of rum hearings tomorrow at 11:15 a. m. At the request of Commissioner Hazen the possibility of mixing drinks in the open will be pondered over by such as gather in the board room of the District Building.

John Heiney's interview series, regularly heard at this hour on Fridays, will go on at 11:45 a. m. instead.

Which reminds that John put on a thrilling broadcast Tuesday . . . something that had him panting and pleased no end. He brought Mrs. Laura Vitray, of The Post staff, up to WJSV and they sat opposite in the studio next to the control room while listeners heard how The Post's Sunday editor was roused from her early morning slumbers to dash out in the rain to cover the Morro Castle disaster.

Excerpts from her impressions: "Sixty stalwart men with not a single sniffle in the nose . . . women floating in . . . dazed passengers . . . wives without husbands . . . ship in total darkness . . . terrible panic . . . shrieking pandemonium . . . reporters looking around for typewriters . . . I hadn't eaten all day."

Mrs. Vitray, who is a cheery, personable woman with unquenchable enthusiasm . . . in case you don't know her . . . has had luck in news breaks that every reporter dreams of. She happened in on the sinking of the Vestris . . . the Lindbergh case. "I've met my pals all over the map," she says.

"YOU can fuss and fume and roar but I am busted for news." was the delicate outburst of Marian Phebe Gale, N. B. C.'s dark-haired publicity expert, yesterday as we caught her in the throes of a buck and wing dance.

"Oh! Yes, we've got a new stunt broadcast coming up. The life of a steeplejack . . . we might put a microphone in his pocket and let him describe his thrills from being up so high." But Carleton Smith checkmated that one. It would be stealing fun from Ted Kimball, WMAL's Monument expert . . . who still imagines himself dangling from the heights of Washington's slim monolith.

YOU didn't hear Stanleigh Malotte, the rhyming newster or the newsing rhymster, on WMAL Tuesday because some of his 15 song selections are on the restricted list . . . a list controlled by the American Society of Authors, Artists and Composers. It takes two weeks of correspondence, miles of interoffice communications and several ruffled temperaments before N. B. C. can discover if a song is O. K. or not.

But Stanleigh will go on today . . . positively at 4 p. m. from WMAL. Meanwhile N. B. C. has found him a motor car sponsor who will start him in a Thursday series on October 4 at 5:45 p. m. from WRC.

Agranulocytosis Cured by Marrow, Scientists Report

Cleveland, Sept. 12 (AP).—A quick, easy cure for agranulocytosis, one of the diseases which has been spreading with the use of sedatives in modern high-tension living, was described to the American Chemical Society here today.

A few drops daily of a new extract of bone marrow taken by mouth is the remedy. The disease is destruction of the white blood cells and its cause is obscure.

Until recently this has been a rare disease and nearly always fatal. A rise in the number of cases attracted so much attention that in the last three years medical men and scientists have written about 500 papers concerning it.

Many of these cases followed use of sedatives. There is a medical controversy about the cause. Some physicians have reported that agranulocytosis may appear after use of barbituric acid sedatives, while other authorities find that this cause alone is insufficient.

Nazi Censor Puts Ban On Shirley Temple Film

Berlin, Sept. 12 (AP).—A ban on the motion picture, "Baby Take a Bow," starring little Shirley Temple, was announced today by the Reichsanzeiger, the official legal newspaper.

THE ONE-WOMAN TOWN...
MRS ADA B. CLODFELTER NOT ONLY OWNS THE TOWN OF GARBER, MO., BUT IS ALSO MAYOR, POSTMISTRESS, STATION AGENT AND PERSONALLY PRINTS THE ONLY NEWSPAPER....
JESS WILLARD - NOT PRIMO CARNERA - WAS THE TALLEST HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION
A TREE THAT IS NEARLY 5 TIMES WIDER THAN TALL... It measures 21 feet across and 4½ feet high ...near Douglas, Ga...
"SHORTY" THE DACHSHUND HORSE... Owned by L. J. Davenport of Anthony, Idaho...

Mrs. Ada B. Clodfelter is Garber, Missouri. She not only owns the town outright, but she is its government, its industry, its social service and its chamber of commerce. She is the postmistress, the mayor, the railroad station agent, proprietor of the town's chief industry, backer of the town's church movement, superintendent of the Sunday School, as well as editor, reporter, printer and publisher of the town's monthly newspaper.

In having a town all of her own, Mrs. Clodfelter realized a dream that she had cherished since childhood when she traveled through the Ozark country with her father, the Rev. T. F. Gardenhre, a circuit rider.

A few years ago the opportunity presented itself, and Mrs. Clodfelter acquired the townsite of Garber, all its buildings, institutions, and practically all of its jobs.

Garber occupies 11 acres as originally laid out in optimistic times, but it is yet to fill out its original size. It is small, even as small towns go, but Mrs. Clodfelter has ambitions of putting it on the map in a real way. And her fellow townspeople, and farmers in the countryside about, are with her 100 per cent.

Primo Carnera was consistently "built up" in the public mind until popular conception made him a giant lacking by two inches of standing seven feet tall, but the fact is he is just six feet six inches tall. Jess Willard topped that, standing six feet seven inches.

Fortune Teller Slain; Child, 4, Accuses Father

News Photographer Finds Body Stuffed in Closet at Home.

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 12 (AP).—A newspaper photographer in search of a "human interest" picture today found the blood-covered body of Mrs. Lillian Shaver, 25-year-old Oakland fortune teller, stuffed in a cubby-hole at her home.

The woman apparently had been beaten on the head, and there was a deep knife wound in her stomach.

Louis Shaver, jr., age 4, the youngest of three children, said he saw his father stab his mother with a butcher knife yesterday, police said. The children, police said, apparently had huddled all night in a bed only a few feet from the cubby hole in which their mother's body had been placed.

Police said they had found a letter, purportedly signed by Shaver, accusing his wife of intimacies with several men.

Keith Dennison, the photographer who discovered the tragedy, visited the Shaver home to get a picture of Louis, jr., who had been found by police yesterday sitting in an Oakland park with his mother's name and address pinned to his blouse.

Police said the Shavers apparently were not at home when they returned young Louis yesterday, but that nothing seemed to be wrong.

Anne Lindbergh's Air Medals Rival Honors of Mate

St. Louis, Sept. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh took her place today alongside her distinguished husband in the display at Jefferson Memorial of medals awarded by scientific societies for aerial achievements.

The Roosevelt Service Medal, presented by the Women's Roosevelt Memorial Association, for "courage, endurance, and distinguished service."

Slacks $2.95

Of course high school and prep age lads have every bit as much right as their brothers at Georgetown or C. U. to swagger about in slacks . . . particularly the drape model slacks with side buckles, in smart shades of brown, navy and oxford. We've got the grandest collection you've ever laid eyes on . . . styled a la Princeton and they'll wear like a motorman's glove.

The Skeptic Tests the Tub Qualities of

MANSCO SHIRTS and SHORTS

You can't blame Jones for doubting that undershirts and shorts, as good-looking and finely made and as low priced as these could withstand the rigors of a water test . . . could you?

Even the judge was lenient when Jones explained that he didn't know these were made by Manhattan . . . which means they're full cut, roomy, pre-shrunk and guaranteed perfect in every detail or your money refunded.

She.... admires a STETSON HOMBURG

Trust a woman to know what's eminently correct . . . particularly headwear . . . whether it's her own or that of the man in whom she's interested. Most women like the rakish curl to the brim of Stetson's Homburg. They admire the silk bound edge, and the tapered crown which accents a slightly formal note suggesting casual sophistication.

The Homburg, curling off the face, is a type hat that looks well on most every man. Pearl grey with black band is the season's leader, but we can supply other colors if you like.
